We feel proud of the part you have played in the terrible tragedy. You faced new horrible and terrifying instruments of war with such courage resourcefulness and tenacity that Canada has been placed in a new and more honorable place in the British Empire. The pages of history can never fully record the achievements of soldiers in the great war, but the gallantry with which Canadian soldiers faced unparalleled difficulties and showed the world an example of courage, steadiness and discipline will find a fitting page in that record of sacrificial service.

Tonight we welcome you home. We know there are no gifts nor testimonials that can fully commensurate the glorious deeds of our heroic men, but we wish you to accept our gifts as a slight token of our "Welcome Home." and we trust that you may be spared for many years to use them.

Signed on behalf of the people of Villiers, Ontario—Alexander Wood, Jas. Graham, Jno. Walker, Alex. Gillespie.

The Clove in Medicine.

Though the clove has had for centuries and still has an honorable standing in the culinary art as a condiment, it has long held a place in the distillation of liquor and in medicine. Nearly everybody knows something about oil of cloves, and most persons at one time or another have used it as a remedy or a palliative for toothache, it being a valuable local anaesthetic which has found use in professional dentistry as a means of lowering the sensitiveness of the dentine of a tooth undergoing repairs.

The More Spots the More Meals.

The number of spots burned on a Chinese monk's head shows how much he has elected to endure, says a recent writer on the subject of China. They receive as severe an initiation as they desire, and get therefrom certain privileges. If a monk has three spots he can get three meals free at any monastery in China; six spots entitles him to six meals; nine spots to three days' board, and the maximum of twelve, a month's care.

New Source of Wealth.

Processes have been perfected whereby mattings, binder twine and other coarse textiles are being made of the leaf fibre of the scrub palmetto and cabbage palm, which grow profusely in several of the southern states.

Unreasonable Man.

"As your husband," protested Mr. Meekton, "I think you ought to show me some respectful consideration." "I do," replied his wife. "If you weren't my husband I shouldn't think of inviting you to my parties."—Town Topics.

WHY RUSSIAN WAS ACQUITTED

MAGISTRATE DUMBLE HANDS DOWN JUDGMENT IN RECENT SEDITION CASE.

The following is the judgment delivered by Magistrate Dumble in the case of the Russian who was acquitted in the Police Court the other day on the charge of uttering seditious language:

In this case I found that defendant did utter seditious words on one occasion in his own house in the presence of his wife and family and in the presence and hearing of W. Yanasky, a Russian. Both defendant and Yanasky are Russians. Defendant's wife and little children are Russians. According to the evidence of Yanasky the words spoken were as might be considered as seditious.

There was no evidence to support or confirm the evidence of Yanasky. It appears that words were never spoken before while the witness boarded and lodged with the accused. Difficulties arose in the house, prisoner charging this witness with improper conduct in consequence of which Yanasky left the house of the prisoner and got board elsewhere.

I do not feel justified under these circumstances, and in the absence of corroborative evidence in finding prisoner guilty.

It was suggested that the statement made by prisoner not having been made in the presence and hearing of British subjects the charge would not lie but I do not find that the law sustains this objection.

In fact, in my opinion, the expression of seditious language in the hearing of aliens dwelling under the flag is more dangerous than if uttered before British subjects who are better educated and more enlightened than foreigners.

Whether or not a rainbow bef sunrise has any portentous mean one might hesitate to decide. surely it is a happening so unu as to merit notice. The followi interesting description of one ap in a letter to the editor of the lish Mechanic and World of

"This morning, at 8.50 o' G. M. T., I witnessed the unus spectacle of a rainbow before su rise. A heavy shower coming from the northwest, a brilliant appeared. As I thought the sun cou not be as yet above the horizon, went to look to the southeast, sure enough the sun's disk was visible from the first floor window On going upstairs, however, I cou see about one-third of the sun ju showing above the horizon. The ference in height would be about feet. The rainbow was very brillia and the arc visible exceeded 180 grees. Owing to obstructing trees could not quite see whether the of the bow reached the north son. The southeast horizon was clea and a strip of clear sky about degrees in breadth enabled the su to shine immediately he above the horizon. Clear south horizons have several times enabl me to watch the first peep of th sun's disk during the last month, an once I saw a feeble 'green flash'."

gave way to my great yearning, and a month since I started upon the journey the end of which you have this day witnessed. Do you understand now where you are, John Carter?"

"And that was the river Iss, emptying into the lost sea of Korus, in the valley Dor?" I asked.

"This is the valley of love and peace and rest to which every Barsoomian since time immemorial has longed to pilgrimage at the end of a life of hate and strife and bloodshed," he replied. "This, John Carter, is—heaven."

His tone was cold and ironical, its bitterness but reflecting the terrible disappointment he had suffered. Such a fearful disillusionment, such a blasting of lifelong hopes and aspirations, such an uprooting of old age tradition, might have excused a vastly greater demonstration on the part of the Thark.

I laid my hands upon his shoulder.

"I am sorry," I said, nor did there seem anything else to say.

"Think, John Carter, of the countless billions of Barsoomians who have taken the voluntary pilgrimage down this cruel river since the beginning of time, only to fall into the ferocious clutches of the terrible creatures that today assailed us.

"There is an ancient legend that once a red man returned from the banks of the lost sea of Korus, returned from the valley Dor, back through the mysterious river Iss. The legend has it that he narrated a fearful blasphemy of horrid brutes that inhabited a valley of wondrous loveliness; brutes that pounced upon each Barsoomian as he terminated his pilgrimage and devoured him upon the banks of the lost sea, where he had hoped to find love and peace and happiness.

"But the ancients killed the blasphemer, as tradition has ordained that any shall be killed who return from the bosom of the river of mystery.

"But now we know that it was no blasphemy, that the legend is a true one and that the man told only of what he saw. What does it profit us, John Carter, since even should we escape we also would be treated as blasphemers? We are between the wild thoat of certainty and the mad zitidar of fact. We [illegible]."

"As earth men say, we are between the devil and the deep sea, Tars Tarkas," I replied, nor could I help but smile at our dilemma.

"There is nothing we can do but take things as they come and at least have the satisfaction of knowing that whatever race or horde slays us eventually will have great numbers of dead to count."

"But about yourself, John Carter," he cried at last. "If you have not been here all these years, where indeed have you been, and how is it that I find you here today?"

"I have been back to earth," I replied. "For ten long earth years I have been praying and hoping for the day that would carry me once more to this [illegible] planet of yours, for which, with all its cruel and terrible customs, I feel a bond of sympathy and love even greater than for the world that gave me birth.

"For ten years I have been enduring a living death of uncertainty and doubt as to whether Dejah Thoris lived. Now, for the first time in all these years, my prayers have been answered and my doubt relieved.

"Yet I find myself, through a cruel fate, in the one tiny spot of all Barsoom from which there is apparently no escape and if there is at a price which would put out forever the last flickering hope which I may cling to of seeing my princess again.

"Only a bare half hour before I saw you battling with the plant men I was standing in the moonlight upon the banks of a broad river that taps the eastern shore of earth's most blessed land. I have answered you, my friend. Do you believe?"

"I believe," replied Tars Tarkas, "though I cannot understand."

As we talked I had been searching the interior of the chamber with my eyes. It was perhaps 200 feet in length and half as broad, with what appeared to be a doorway in the center of the wall directly opposite that through which we had entered.

As I extended my hand to search for the controlling button that cruel and mocking laugh rang out once more so close to me this time that I involuntarily shrank back, tightening my grip upon the hilt of my great sword.

And then from the far corner of the great chamber a hollow voice chanted: "There is no hope, there is no hope; the dead return not, the dead return not; nor is there any resurrection. Hope not, for there is no hope."

Though our eyes instantly turned toward the spot from which the voice seemed to emanate, there was no one in sight, and I must admit that cold shivers played along my spine and the short hairs at the base of my head stiffened and rose up, as do those upon a hound's neck when in the night his eyes see those uncanny things which are hidden from the sight of man.

Quickly I walked toward the mournful voice, but it had ceased ere I reached the farther wall, and then from the other end of the chamber came another voice shrill and piercing.

"Fools, fools!" it shrieked. "Think ye to defeat the eternal laws of life and death? Would cheat the mysterious Issus, goddess of death, of her just dues? Did not her mighty messenger, the ancient Iss, bear ye upon her leaden bosom at your own behest to the valley Dor? Think ye, O fools, that Issus will give up her own? Think ye to escape whence in all the countless ages but a single soul hast fled?

"Go back the way ye came, to the merciful maws of the children of the tree of life or the gleaming fangs of the great white apes. There lies speedy surcease from suffering. But insist in your rash purpose to thread the golden cliffs of the mountains of Otz, past the ramparts of the impregnable fortresses of the holy therns, and upon your way death in its most frightful form will overtake you."

"Most uncanny," I remarked, turning to Tars Tarkas.

"What shall we do?" he asked. "We cannot fight empty air. I would almost rather return and face foes into whose flesh I may feel my blade bite, and know that I am selling my life dearly, than go down to that oblivion which is evidently the fairest and most desirable eternity that mortal man has the right to hope for."

"If as you say we cannot fight empty air, Tars Tarkas," I replied, "neither, on the other hand, can empty air fight us. I shall not be turned back by wind, who have faced and conquered in my time thousands of sinewy warriors and tempered blades, nor shall you, Thark."

"But unseen voices may emanate from unseen and unseeable creatures who wield invisible blades," answered the green warrior.

"Rot, Tars Tarkas!" I cried. "Those voices came from beings as real as you or I. In their veins flows blood that may be let as easily as ours. The fact that they remain invisible to us is the best proof to my mind that they are mortals, nor overly courageous mortals at that. Think you, Tars Tarkas that John Carter will fly at the first shriek of a cowardly foe who dare not come out into the open and face a good blade!"

CHAPTER V.

A Close Call.

AMONG the ornaments of Tars Tarkas' leather harness, which is the only manner of clothing worn by Martians other than capes and robes of silk and fur for protection from the cold after dark, was a small mirror about the bigness of a lady's hand glass which hung midway between his shoulders and his waist against his broad back.

As we stood looking around the dimly lighted apartment my eyes happened to fall upon this mirror, and in its shiny surface I saw pictured a sight that caused me to whisper:

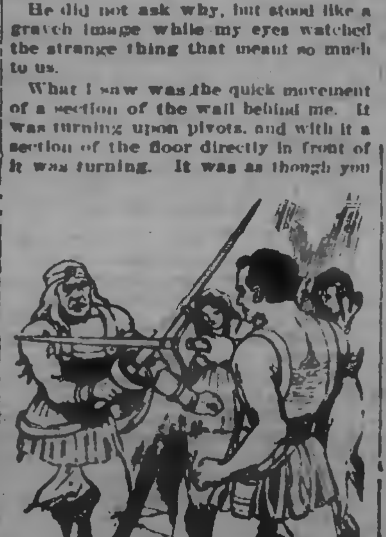
He did not ask why, but stood like a graven image while my eyes watched the strange thing that meant so much to us.

What I saw was the quick movement of a section of the wall behind me. It was turning upon pivots, and with it a section of the floor directly in front of it was turning. It was as though you placed a visiting card upon end on a silver dollar that you had laid flat upon a table so that the edge of the card perfectly bisected the surface of the coin.



It Did Not Take Me Long to Fall Easily Into My Fighting Stride.

The card might represent the section of the wall that turned and the silver dollar the section of the floor. Both were so nicely fitted into the adjacent portions of the floor and wall that no crack had been noticeable in the dim light of the chamber.

As the turn was half completed a great beast was revealed sitting upon its haunches upon that part of the revolving floor that had been on the opposite side before the wall commenced to move. When the section stopped the beast was facing toward me on our side of the partition.

But what had interested me most was the sight that the half turned section had presented through the opening that it had made.

A great chamber, well lighted, in which were several men and women chained to the wall, and in front of them, evidently directing and operating the movement of the secret doorway, a wicked faced man, neither red as are the red men of Mars, nor green as are the green men, but white like myself, with a great mass of flowing yellow hair.

The prisoners behind him were red Martians. Chained with them were a number of fierce beasts.

So long as we remained each facing an opposite end of the apartment no attacks were made upon us, so it was quite clear to me that the partitions were in some way pierced that our actions might be observed from without.

At length a plan of action occurred to me, and backing quite close to Tars Tarkas I unfolded my scheme in a low whisper, keeping my eyes still glued upon my end of the room.

The great Thark grunted his assent to my proposition when I had done and in accordance with my plan commenced backing toward the wall which I faced, while I advanced slowly ahead of him.

When he had reached a point some ten feet from the secret doorway, I halted my companion, and, cautioning him to remain absolutely motionless until I gave the prearranged signal, I quickly turned my back to the door through which I could almost feel the burning and baleful eyes of our would be executioner.

Instantly my own eyes sought the mirror upon Tars Tarkas' back. I had not long to wait, for presently the golden surface commenced to move rapidly.

Scarcely had it started than I gave the signal to Tars Tarkas, simultaneously springing for the receding half of the pivoting door. In like manner the Thark wheeled and leaped for the opening being made by the inswinging section.

A single bound carried me completely through into the adjoining room and brought me face to face with the fellow whose cruel face I had before seen.

He was about my own height and well muscled and in every outward detail molded precisely as are earth men.

At his side hung a long sword, a short sword, a dagger and one of the destructive radium revolvers that are so common upon Mars.

The fact that I was armed only with a long sword and so according to the laws and ethics of battle everywhere upon Barsoom should only have been met with a similar or lesser weapon seemed to have no effect upon the moral sense of my enemy, for he whipped out his revolver ere I had scarce touched the floor by his side, but an uppercut from my long sword sent it flying from his grasp before he could discharge it.

Instantly he drew his long sword, and, thus evenly armed, we set to in earnest for one of the closest battles I have ever fought.

The fellow was a marvelous swordsman and evidently in practice, while I had not gripped the hilt of a sword for ten long years before that morning.

But it did not take me long to fall easily into my fighting stride, so that in a few minutes the man began to realize that he had at last met his match.

His face became livid with rage as he found my guard impregnable, while blood flowed from a dozen minor wounds upon his face and body.

"Who are you, white man?" he hissed. "That you are no Barsoomian from the outer world is evident from your color. And you are not of us?"

His last statement was almost a question.

"What if I were from the temple of Issus?" I hazarded on a wild guess.

I did not know how to follow up my lead, but I carefully laid the idea away for future use should circumstances require it.

His answer indicated that for all he knew I might be from the temple of Issus, and so evidently there was a [illegible] like unto myself.

Either this man feared the inmates of the temple or else he held their persons or their power in such reverence that he trembled to think of the harm and indignities he had heaped upon one of them.

FATHER KELLY SAVES A HOME

"THE ROSARY" AT THE GRAND THURSDAY NIGHT APPEALS TO ALL.

Father Kelly, a priest of the modern world with a deep insight into human nature and a great love of his fellow men is the main character of "The Rosary" which is to have a splendid revival by Rowland & Clifford and is to be offered at the Grand Opera House on Thursday, April 24 While Father Kelly is a Catholic priest, the play is in no way sectarian. This priest is a character indigenous to America and familiar to all people at all times. With his gentle philosophy, his keen wit and his love for humanity, he averts a calamity in an American household and saves a home from destruction. The characters in this play are vividly drawn and the situations are projected graphically. It is a play of modern life, teeming with tense scenes and one that will grip and hold the attention, as well as cause much laughter. Edward E. Rose the author has mingled tears and laughter in this story, and has given it a universal appeal. It will be enacted by a noetable company of players, headed by Oscar O'Shea as Father Kelly.

CHIEF FIGURE IN "THE ROSARY"

Millions of people have laughed and cried with Father Kelly, the chief figure in "The Rosary", and millions more are destined to do so again, as this striking and gently wholesome play has been revived by Messrs. Rowland & Clifford and is now being sent out on its mission of cheer and happiness. This play which is from the pen of Edward E. Rose, author of a large number of successful plays, has been retouched here and there and comes back to the footlights after a short respite, more appealing and more powerful in its lesson than ever before.

"The Rosary," which will come to he Grand Opera House on Thursday, April 24th, tells a story that is fascinating every way. The central and guiding figure is that of Rev. Father Brian Kelly, a Catholic priest, played by Oscar O'Shea, whose great aim in life is to do all the good he can for his fellow men of whatever creed or lack of creed. But while the play and story drive home a great moral lesson, the play and story are not sermons and the lessons are not driven home with long faces and hypocritical palaver.

In fact, the priest has a keen Irish sense of humor, spontaneous and scintillating and this acts as a foil to his priestly calling and robs it of austerity, if not of firmness. By his adroitness and kindliness as well as by his keen insight into human nature, this priest is able to save a home from destruction and to bring order out of a chaotic condition of intrigue and wickedness. The evil element of the piece is embodied in a man who seeks revenge because another has won the love of the woman he sought as wife. He wantonly brings the loving wife into disrepute, and nearly wrecks her life by his machinations.

Messrs. Rowland & Clifford have [illegible] cast of selected players for this notable revival. Each player has been sought for his or her fitness for the role to be played, and the result is a well nigh perfect presentation of one of the most human and likeable plays seen on the stage in a decade.

COMES DIRECT FROM BOSTON

"THE BETTER 'OLE" AT THE GRAND FRIDAY AND SATURDAY.

"The Better 'Ole" with the Boston Company is to come direct from Boston to the Grand Opera House Friday and Saturday, with a matinee Saturday.

Neither preaching nor propaganda poisons "The Better 'Ole." It aims at nothing but entertainment, and will be liked by veterans who have served their country "over there," as well as by those who never knew the dangers and privations of trench life, which this play is said to picture so amazingly well.

Songs are interpolated during the action of the play that were especially written by Herman Darewski and Percival Knight and they will be interpreted by a large chorus of pretty girls. So there will be frills as well as thrills.

There are three modern musketeers in "The Better 'Ole"—Old Bill, Bert and Alf, and the audience will follow them through many trench adventures during which the rollicking humor of the British Tommy surmounts all obstacles and remains untarnished by the grime and gruesomeness of war.

"The Three Muskrats of the Trenches" is what these three comedy gents from the Bairnsfather musical play, "The Better 'Ole," have been affectionately dubbed in paraphrase of "The Three Muskateers," Dumas' immortal trio of swashbucklers. What has led to the title more than any other reason is the manner of fighting which has obtained throughout the greater term of the war. It has been a diggers' war where, apparently, the best borers lived the longest and most comfortable in earthly depths, or as was most often the case, muddy caverns. Thus it has often been that the soldiers themselves have adopted the rodent title, mainly in the spirit of ironic humor. For it is an undeniable fact that humor has played a remarkable part in the war. One of the great wonders coming out of the world conflict is the spirit of humor which has been generated from out the seething fire which was aimed to sear men's souls, instead of sheering them. The comic writer and with even greater success the comic artist have sent from the purlieus of the battlefield stories and pictures which have been the clear stripped soul of humor which have served their purpose to invoke laughter not only among soldiery but from the ordinary civilian. Because of this there has been a number of men who suddenly rose to fame as humorists. None more so in this regard than Captain Bairnsfather whose name is a household byword in England and little less so in America. To show that he is a true humorist whose means of expression is not limited to the pencil, the success of "The Better 'Ole" is convincing testimony. This comedy with music has for long been a most emphatic success in London, and now is a resigning sensation in New York. With a new company chosen to present the play in Boston, local theatre-goers are enthusiastically responding to its comedy call as the other great cities, and laughs are unending at the humor created by the experiences of "The Three Muskrats."

We are extremely fortunate to have the Boston company with us.

SPECIAL HOLIDAY SHOW AT GRAND

The special holiday bill of vaudeville at the Grand today, Tuesday and Wednesday with a matinee will comprise of the famous Ambler Brothers; presenting an act which is described as "The Act Sensational." From start to finish they display an ease and grace in the execution of their marvelous feats that seem miraculous. Their routine consists of [illegible] ing the utmost strength and nerve. Ambler Brothers cause an audience to actually gasp for breath by their stupendous work. The Carson trio "Entertainers De Luxe," present a musical offering, consisting of solos duets and trios, performed on banjos, piano and piano accordian. Their repertoire is extensive and comprises the best standard numbers of the classics and the latest popular songs and ballads, an added attraction to the bill will be the Melroy Sisters, one of the daintiest and most delightful entertaining offerings seen here this season. The Melroy Sisters, though still in their teens, have played all the big circuits and are considered the best entertainers in their line of singing and dancing. If lovers of grace and charm like dashing dancing of the eccentric variety with frills and curves, of feminine loveliness they will find the Melroy Sisters all that their hearts could desire.

The special feature, "Sis Hopkins," with Mabel Normand, seen here a few weeks ago in "Mickey," will no doubt assure the patrons of the Grand that the management intend to keep faith with the public and present nothing but the best in pictures and vaudeville.

ELDERS VERSUS YOUNGSTERS

ATHLETICS FOR THE GIRLS

HAVE YOUNG WOMEN TRAINED IN MANLY GAMES REALLY THE BEST OF IT.

That girl who was so athletics, who distinguished herself at college by being captain of the basket ball team and the swimming team, who was the star base runner on the girls' nine, who could "just do anything"—is she so well off physically, after all?

That this question should even be raised would be a great surprise to many, but asked it was and answered in an even more surprising way by the foremost exponents of physical training in American universities and colleges at the annual conference of the A. A. U. in Chicago last week. At the conference they registered themselves as against the present method of getting physical training almost entirely through sports for which a few—the "fittest"—are trained to the highest point while those who are not capable of doing the required stunts are neglected, or given only nominal training.

"The value of competitive games is overestimated," declared Mrs. Jas. Huff McCurdy, one of the prominent delegates and wife of the president, "and the value of education not realized.

"While certain ones are given specialized training by an expensive coach, twice as many more are running the risk of being given training that is positively harmful—to the extent that it fails to fit in with their particular needs. And still more are allowed to "slump" so that they might as well not be given training at all.

"Out of a college athletic class, a great number will be found actually to need corrective exercise. More people have some slight fault in their physical make-up than we realize. And such people are not even reached by the competitive training of a physical training department devoted to sports. Under the principle of the survival of the fittest most of these would fall—thus losing what was originally meant for people like them, and what they need far more than the people who qualify for it. Even for the "fit," she added, "the strain of contests which test the nerve and mettle is not the best thing for bodies. There is many a well looking boy who has tested his heart past its strength in such competitive contests—with the well known tragic result. "And these camps where military training is given to girls," remarked Mrs. McCurdy "are against the principles of physical training, for which we stand. Where we particularize in the training of each individual so that we may meet his indvidual needs, the military principle generalizes, and in bringing the weaker people up to the standard of the average often does them infinitely more harm than it does them good.

"The education of the girls in what they ought to do in the way of keeping in good condition appears to be of far greater worth than making them prove a condition that may—or may not—be there.

"We by no means attack sports as a method of physical training, but rather support a plan of educating people to watch for their own needs, to particularize in their training and not to force themselves in competitive games and what we urge on the boys and girls of college age, we recommend for others, who may in some manner tap the sources of information on these points. Here is the rule. By all means—keep aware of your condition and work for your own well being."

CHANCE FOR SCHOOLBOYS TO WIN TARGET HONORS

Gold, Silver and Bronze Prizes Are Offered as Rewards for Expert Marksmanship.

The plan of competition supervised by Dominion Marksmen, Junior Department, offers as rewards for expert marksmanship, Bronze, Silver and Gold Pins. There is no charge from clubs or members of clubs for registration. The object of the Dominion Marksmen is to create national interest in rifle shooting among young men. The pins are awarded as recognition of good performance and are badges of character and manhood. A young man wearing the pin will be able with perfect confidence to make a friend of another wearing the pin no matter where he may meet him.

Healthful sport of this kind develops the power of concentration, produces an interest in accuracy in all things and creates a competitive interest in accomplishment. Rifle shooting requires above everything else a healthy body, so don't neglect outdoor exercise. When the weather permits, shooting may be done on an outdoor range.

It should be clearly understood that Dominion Marksmen competitions are designed as a department of Boys' Clubs and not intended to interfere with any other profitable activity of the club.

As is seen there are three standards of proficiency as set by the Dominion Ammunition Company of Montreal. The third grade entitles the winner to wear a bronze pin, the second grade a silver pin and the first grade a gold pin. These pins are supplied free by the Dominion Ammunition Company, Montreal.

At present there are two Junior Marksmenship clubs in Peterboro, namely, the one connected with the Peterboro Collegiate Cadet corps and the second, which is connected with the Central school. In the first named club there are 51 members with eleven active members, making a percentage of twenty-one who shoot.

In order to win a bronze pin the shooter must shoot from the one position with his rifle's muzzle 25 yards from the target. The targets are supplied free, and each shooter is given seven shots at a target, and thus the total score he can get on one target is seventy. But to get a bronze pin one must send ten targets of 50 or more points to Montreal. To get a silver pin, ten targets of 58 points or more, and to get a gold pin, ten targets of 65 points or more. There are also gold watches for competition between gold pin holders.

At present the Collegiate boys have 25 pins made up as follows:—12 bronze, 9 silver and 4 gold. The Central school has two pins—one silver and one bronze—won by Mr. Harold Donner last year.

To get a bronze pin 500 points are needed; silver, 580 points, and gold, 650 points. Following are the points secured by the Peterboro boys:

M. Brownscombe—Bronze, 565; silver, 620; gold, 665.

J. Alvin Catchpole — Bronze, 592; silver, 617.

Ames C. Conway—Bronze, 596

Norman Foote—Bronze, 528; silver 605.

Miss Lenore Lyle—Bronze, 549; silver, 622.

Jas. Pogue—Bronze, 590.

Harold Pollock—Bronze, 531; silver, 621.

Miss Laura Soden—Bronze, 596; silver, 617.

Harold Donner—Bronze, 546; silver, 609.

Mr. Conway has since secured his silver pin, Mr. Pollock his gold and Harry Jackson his bronze.

The Collegiate boys are under the supervision of Capt. C. E. Jamieson and the Central boys under Mr. L. J. Colling. Both teams use the indoor rifle range at the Armories.

The instructor of the Collegiate boys is Robert F. Moore. He has a gold medal and his father, Mr. W. H. Moore, Morrow street, has been on a Canadian team which shot at Bisley.

Recently a Provincial championship was offered to the team in each Province which, during the competition turned in the best targets. London won the Ontario championship, but Peterboro Collegiate entered a team. This team was composed as follows: Robert F. Moore, A. C. Catchpole, K. Harstone, Donald Fitzgerald, Ralph Cowan, Allan MacIntosh, Miss Laura Soden, Miss Lenore Lyle, Mr. A. C. Conway, Jas. Pogue and Harold Pollock. On the conclusion of the contest each member of the Peterboro team was presented with a pair of cuff links made to represent shells, by the Dominion Ammunition Company of Montreal.

The age limit of these clubs is 19 and on joining each boy is presented with a small booklet telling "all about it."

BOY SCOUT NOTES

An invitation has been received for the Peterborough Boy Scouts to be present at the great rally in Toronto to welcome the Chief Scout Sir Robert Baden Powell. This will be a great chance to boost Peterboro and we hope that the parents of the boys will help us.

The Scout Council will try and make arrangements for transportation and further notices will be sent out.

Several Boy Scouts hiked into the country Friday and enjoyed themselves thoroughly.

On Monday, April 7th, Gordon Thomas and J. Cooper passed their proficiency test for First Aid before Mrs. C. E. Jamieson, the judge and the local council, with honors.

Six more boys are going through their Signallers' test for First Class Scouts and will pass in the next two weeks, and four boys for Cyclist badges.

INCREASE POTATO CROP

How to Check Serious Diseases in Ontario.

Leaf Roll and Mosaic Are Firmly Established and Reduce Yields One-third — How to Detect Diseases and Only Way to Control Them.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE two most serious seed-borne potato diseases in Ontario are Leaf Roll and Mosaic. Other seed-borne potato diseases common in the Province are Black Leg, Rhizoctonia, Blight, Wilt and Scab. Leaf Roll and Mosaic cause a very marked reduction in the yield, and the fact that these two diseases are so prevalent in Southern Ontario accounts for the poor crop of potatoes that has been obtained in many parts of the Province for the past four years.

Leaf Roll.—The cause of this disease is unknown. Data gathered by the pathologists of the United States and Canada shows that Leaf Roll may reduce the yield to about one-third of the normal crop.

Symptoms.—Symptoms of Leaf Roll are very variable. Affected plants are always more or less dwarfed and in some varieties the leaves assume a characteristic upright, almost staring habit, instead of drooping over in the normal way. Rolling of the lower leaves is always associated with the disease. The rolled leaves on plants affected with this disease begin to die early. The harsh, leathery texture of such leaves is a constant symptom. The tubers of affected plants are small and are borne generally on very short tuber-branches (stolons) or even attached in a cluster to the stem. Tubers from affected plants invariably produce diseased plants. There is also evidence to show that the disease may spread from plant to plant in the field.

Prevention.—The only sure way of avoiding loss from Leaf Roll is to secure fresh seed from districts free from this disease. Fortunately, this is possible, as Northern Ontario and certain sections of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island are comparatively free from this trouble. In experiments carried on in Old Ontario by the Agricultural Representatives with seed potatoes from South Ontario, New Brunswick and Northern Ontario, it was found that the average amount of Leaf Roll in the plants from the seed from the three different sources was as follows:—

Old Ontario	45.5%
New Brunswick	5.1
Northern Ontario	1.4

These figures strongly emphasize the desirability of obtaining northern-grown potato seed.

Mosaic.—The cause of this disease is also unknown. It has been observed in many fields in Ontario. When severe there is a very noticeable reduction in the crop. Data gathered by the pathologists of the United States and Canada shows that this disease may reduce the yield by one-half.

Symptoms.—The foliage of plants affected with Mosaic is somewhat wrinkled or corrugated and mottled with faint, light green or yellowish spots. The stalks of the diseased plants are often more bare near the ground than those of healthy ones, partly because the affected foliage does not spread out and drop down normally, and partly because the lower leaves sometimes fall off in the last stages of severe attack. The tubers of affected plants are normal-looking and sound and their keeping or eating qualities are not impaired.

Prevention.—If Mosaic is abundant in a field the surest and quickest way of eliminating it is by obtaining fresh seed from a non-infected district. Such seed can be obtained at the present time from Northern Ontario.

In order to avoid loss from Leaf Roll and Mosaic, the source of seed is of the utmost importance. Seed potatoes free from these diseases can be obtained from Northern Ontario. Only certified seed, however, can be relied upon. For information concerning certified northern-grown potato seed write Mr. Justus Miller, Assistant Commissioner of Agriculture, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, Canada.

Even certified northern-grown seed is not a panacea for all diseases. In order to avoid loss from such seed-borne potato diseases as Black Leg, Rhizoctonia, Wilt, Blight and Scab, the following precautions should be taken:

1. Select for seed smooth, sound tubers, as free as possible from scab, black, hard lumps on the surface, and abnormal discolorations of the skin or flesh.

2. Disinfect all seed before cutting with formalin or corrosive sublimate. The latter substance is the more reliable for the prevention of Rhizoctonia.

3. When cutting potatoes have at hand two or three knives and a jar containing a 20 per cent. solution of formalin. After cutting into a tuber which shows signs of rot drop the knife into the formalin, discard the diseased potato and take a fresh knife from the formalin solution for the next cutting.

*4. Spray every year with Bordeaux mixture for the prevention of Late Blight and Rot. Such spraying is an insurance which it is not safe to neglect.

5. Rogue the growing crop once or twice during the summer, or at least that portion of it from which the seed is to be saved. This operation consists in the removal and destruction of any plants showing signs of such diseases as Leaf Roll, Mosaic, Black Leg, Rhizoctonia and Wilt.

6. Practice a rotation of crops and if possible plant potatoes after clover sod.—Prof. J. E. Howett, O. A. College, Guelph.

Sporting Gossip

Reports from the Detroit training camp state that Ty Cobb is working like a trojan to get into first-class shape for opening day. Ty reported to Jennings a trifle overweight, but all his old speed seems to be there, so Hughey is not doing any worrying.

It looks as though the services of Dutch Leonard, the big southpaw secured from the Red Sox, have really been lost to the Huggins crew. Leonard owns a California raisin farm and the price of this product has started toward a fabulous sum due to the report that the harmless little raisin was one of the main ingredients of a drink which will have a real kick. He also has received an offer from the Fresno independent team to pitch for that club for a stipend which would reach close to $50 an inning.

BRITAIN'S PADEREWSKI MAY BE ORGANIST AT ST. PAUL'S

Mr. Frank Tattersall to Give Recital in Church April 28—Famous Artist Lost Family in Submarine War.

Considerable interest is being manifested in the combined organ and piano recital which is to be given in St. Paul's church Monday, April 28, by Mr. Frank Tattersall, formerly of Great Britain, but recently of St. Catharines, who is one of the applicants for the position of organist in St. Paul's church made vacant through the resignation of Mr. John Allan. Mr Tattersall is undoubtably one of the world's greatest pianists. He has been compared in standing and ability with Paderewski. In a recent visit to Peterboro Mr. Tattersall gave a private exhibition which delighted and greatly impressed all who heard him. His playing was so remarkable that by special request he consented to return to the city and give the public recital for which arrangements have now been completed. Mr. Tattersall will also preside at the organ in St. Paul's church at both services on Sunday, April 27th.

Mr. Tattersall and his family were passengers on the steamer Arabic, which was sunk by a German submarine while enroute from England to Canada, sometime after the outbreak of the war. He was on the deck and saw the torpedo as it shot through the water towards the ship. He managed to get lifebelts on his wife and three little girls before the ship sank. It sank so rapidly they were unable to get away in any of the life boats and were drawn down in the suction of the water that followed the sinking of the ship. On coming to the surface he managed to save one of his little girls and other fellow passengers saved a second child, but the mother and the third child were drowned. Mr. Tattersall is very highly spoken of in the congregation in St. Catharines, where he has been acting as organist in the absence of the regular organist overseas. As the regular organist is shortly to resume his position it is possible that arrangements may be made for Mr Tattersall to accept the vacant position in St. Paul's church. On any event his appearance here on the 27th and 28th is sure to be attended with great interest.

A FESTIVAL OF MUSIC TONIGHT

IN GEORGE STREET METHODIST CHURCH IN OBSERVANCE OF MUSIC WEK

This is the first day of Music Week in Canada, a week to be celebrated year by year in recognition of the importance attained by music generally in the life of all Canadian communities.

The week's public entertainment will open this evening in George Street Methodist Church, where a musical festival will be given under the direction of a committee appointed from music enthusiasts to assure Music Week being fittingly observed.

Arrangements contemplated for this event have been necessarily curtailed for want of time since the project's inception, but next year one may confidently look forward to more extended preparations being consummated.

Tonight's Program.

2—Semi Chorus (ladies' voices), "He Is Risen,, (Haynes)—Misses E. Worth, M. Sucee, I. Baird, E. Fusee, L. McFarlane, R. McKee, E. McKay, Mrs. C. Graham.

5—Soprano solo, "The Call of the Maytime"—Miss Ruby Young.

7—Soprano solo—Mrs. George H. King.

8—Reading, "When Alboni Sings" (Drummond).

9—Solo—Miss Doris Rathbone

RACING RAKE-OFF IS NOW LIKELY

NATIONAL CAUCUS TO TAKE UP QUESTION OF TRACK GAMBLING

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, April 21.—It is likely that one of the matters to be discussed at the next Unionist caucus, which will probably be held on Wednesday or Thursday, is the question of the revival of track racing in Canada suspended during the war. Many representations have been made to the Government in regard to the matter and before action is taken by the Cabinet in respect to the order-in-Council, prohibiting betting now in force ministers will ascertain the views of Government supporters in the Commons. It is suggested that when racing is revived arrangement should be made whereby a portion of the receipts should be taken by the Government and devoted to the encouragement of horse breeding.

Four Wearing Victoria Cross

OLYMPIC ARRIVES AT HALIFAX WITH DISTINGUISHED UNITS ON BOARD

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Halifax, April 21.—Ontario units arriving on the Olympic were debarked and entrained in the following order:—Third battalion, Toronto; fourth battalion, Toronto; third tunneling company, Toronto; first battalion, London; second battalion, Kingston; third and fourth field batteries and first field ambulance Kingston.

Brigadier General McQuaig, C.M.G. D.S.O., and bar, was senior officer aboard. He stated that troops had a pleasant trip across, although a great deal of fog was encountered. The conduct of the men was exemplary. He said it was hoped to complete the embarkation of the first division this week. The second division is now all in England and the fourth on the way to Bramshott.

MISS PERRY GOES ONE STEP HIGHER

SENT TO QUEBEC TO ARRANGE FOR RECEPTION OF SOLDIERS.

Dr. Page of the Immigration Department of Quebec has been at St. John N.B., recently, examining into the organization of arrangements for the reception of returning soldiers and their families. They were so well pleased with the organization which they described as "perfect" that they have asked Miss Percy, national secretary of the Traveller's Aid of the Y. W. C. A. who has been at the head of the work in St. John to come to Quebec and organize here exactly in the same way. Miss Percy has already visited Quebec, and it is expected that everything will be in readiness when the first lot of soldiers arrive in that city. There are 15 other societies co-operating with the Y.W.C.A. at S. John, N.B.

Miss Perry is a former resident of Peterborough and her many friends will be pleased to hear of the splendid success she has achieved in this most important work.

As the National Service Secretary of the Dominion Council of the Y. W. C. A. she also carried through most successfully a very responsible piece of work in British Columbia last year.

Y.W.C.A. WHATS DOING THIS WEEK

No classes for Monday.

Tuesday:
4:30—Senior School Girls.

8:00—Beginners and Intermediates.

Wednesday:
10:30—Babies' Class.
4:30—Junior School Girls (Tuesday and Wednesday classes).
8:00—Special Class.

In connection with Music Week, a twilight musicale will be given at the Y. W. C. A. on Tuesday afternoon from 5 to 6 o'clock under the direction of Mrs. J. H. Renwick. The program will be given in the green room, and the public are cordially invited.

The Association wishes to take the opportunity to thank those artists who so kindly and generously lent their time and their talent in preparing and rendering the beautiful program given in the Conservatory of Music Hall last evening.

Gold Bracelet For Miss Maynard

The girls of the drawing and winding department of the Bonner-Worth Company met together at noon on Thursday to wish God-speed and a pleasant voyage to Miss Mabel Maynard, who leaves for Englind on April 20.

Mr. A. Pilling, foreman of the department, spoke a few words and presented to her on behalf of the girls a handsome gold bracelet and the following address:

Dear Mabel:

We, the girls of the drawing and winding department of the Bonner-Worth Company, knowing that you are leaving us for England, wish you to accept this little token of our esteem in remembrance of the time you worked with us, and we sincerely wish you every success in the future.

CHURCH CHOIRS WILL EXCHANGE

MURRAY STREET AND ST. ANDREW'S SINGERS IN VOCAL ARRANGEMENT.

It is nothing unusual for the pastors of the city, even those of different denominations, to exchange pulpits occasionally, but whoever heard of the same course being pursued in the case of church choirs? Yet that is what will be done next Sunday evening when the Murray Street choir will appear at St. Andrew's church and the St. Andrew's choir will take the place of the other.

This arrangement was announced at the evening service in Murray Street church last night after the matter had been talked over by Mr E. Bruce Fowler chairman of the Music Committee of St. Andrew's with W. R. Breyfogle who holds the same position in the Murray Street church.

CAN TAKE PLEBISCITE ON PEACE TREATY IN FORTY-EIGHT HOURS

Germany is Getting Ready to Hold Referendum—Will be no Objection if Treaty Permits Negotiating Points in Dispute.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, April 22.—Appartenances for an election, such as voting booths, lists and clerks, are all in readiness for an immediate plebiscite on the peace terms, which can be completed all over Germany in forty-eight hours, according to information secured from sources close to the government. Preparations have been going on secretly for several days it is declared, and if the terms are published one morning a referendum can be taken next day and the answer can go to the Entente forty-eight hours later. It is asserted that the only probable chance of an affirmative answer would be in case there is an agreement to negotiate the details of the terms. Thus, if an indemnity is fixed, Germany cannot hope to dispute the total, but must be allowed to send experts to discuss ways and means of payment, it is said.

Eighty Veterans Home Tomorrow

MEN WHO CROSSED IN OLYMPIC MAY ARRIVE ON WEDNESDAY EVENING.

According to a telegram from Kingston received this morning, about eighty Peterborough men are due to arrive in Kingston on Wednesday. These are the men who crossed on the Olympic.

Seeding General Throughout West

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Winn'peg, April 22.—Seeding started all over Manitoba yesterday, J. H. Evans, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, announced. He said the outlook is better than he had seen it for twelve years. Seeding in Saskatchewan will be well under way next week. Alberta farmers have already started.

Ald. Murray To Resign Tomorrow

BUT WILL ATTEND MEETING OF BOARD OF WORKS TONIGHT.

Ald. Murray will make his final official appearance tonight when he attends the meetings of the Board of Works. Tomorrow his resignation as Alderman will be sent to Mayor Duncan. Ald. and Mrs. Murray, who since their home on Sherbrooke street was sold, have been the guests of their life-long friends, Mr. and Mrs. Peter MacArthur, Frost street, will start tomorrow night for their old home across the ocean.

Calgary Civic Federation flatly turned down a request of the City Council that their wage schedule be referred to arbitration, and are determined to go out on strike after 3 o'clock today if their demands are not agreed to.

CITY WILL BANQUET HUNDREDS OF RETURNED SOLDIERS MAY 1ST

Men From Overseas are Asked to Register at the City Offices To-morrow and Days This Week Following—This is Important, as a Means For Ascertaining How Many Guests to Provide For.

The city will banquet all the returned soldiers belonging to Peterborough who are already home and these who will be home by April 30

This event will take place in the Armories on the evening of May 1, commencing at 6.30, when it is expected that from 700 to 1,000 veterans of the great war will re-unite at the festive board, and thus receive a measure of official appreciation from their home town. Another similar function will be tendered those soldiers still overseas when all have returned.

As many men resident in the county and enlisted in Peterborough city it is hoped that the County Council will co-operate with the city fathers in this matter, and thus render it possible for such County returned soldiers to participate in this banquet on May 1, the County to pay its proportionate share of the expense entailed. Reeve McIntosh was communicated with last evening, and he expressed his approval of the proposition. He promised to ascertain his colleagues' views, and give the city a definite reply by Saturday.

Register For Tickets.

Returned soldiers are notified that it is important to register at the city offices so that they may get their tickets, and also in order that a definite knowledge of how many guests to provide for may be arrived at. The tickets will be ready on Wednesday (tomorrow) when and after which [illegible] will be received.

Program.

The veterans, the 57th and Salvation Army bands will be in attendance.

Addresses, brief and to the point, are expected from the Mayor, Col Mills, Judge Huycke, Bishop O'Brien, the chairman of the Board of Education, chairman of the Ministerial Association, the chairman of the Separate School Board and perhaps other prominent men.

Vocal selections are also in view.

To Arrange Details.

Above is a rough outline of the banquet proceedings agreed on by the Council's Reception Committee last night and left in the hands of Ald. J. J. Turner to arrange all necessary details.

Ald. Turner will invite the president of the Women's Auxiliary of the G. W. V. A. to secure ladies to wait on the tables. Should this be beyond her power, he will call on the ladies of patriotic societies, by announcement in the churches, Sunday, to furnish volunteer waitresses.

728 Are Home.

Peterborough's returned soldiers now number 728 men, not including those resident in the county; and quite a few from the 2nd and 4th battalions will reach home Wednesday or Thursday. Some of these men have left the city, and some 450 or 500 are members of the G.W.V.A.

Col. Mills informed the committee that there are in the Armories tables to seat in the neighborhood of 500 men. Other provision will have to be made for the remainder of the guests at the big banquet.

The members of the Reception Committee present at last night's meeting were Ald. J. J. Turner (chairman), Mayor Duncan, Aldermen Phelan, Gainey and Garside.

SHORT TIME ALLOWED HUNS TO DISCUSS PEACE TERMS

Will Be Given Until May 15 and Their Conditions Must Be Accepted.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 22.—The discussion of the peace terms by the Versailles Congress after the Germans are called in will not be continued longer than May 15th. The Echo de Paris declares the Germans will be required to sign the peace conditions, subject only to ratification by their government, the Allies not consenting that these conditions shall be submitted to a plebiscite, it adds.

Satisfaction is expressed by the Paris press at the speedy subsidence of the flurry over the question of what German delegates should come to Versailles. The deduction is drawn that the only thing necessary to bring about a failure of such dilatory manoeuvres by the Germans is to speak clearly and firmly to them. It is pointed out that the only benefit, if there be any, which Germany has secured, is to delay the opening of the negotiations for a few days. The solution is attributed by the press of all parties to the energetic attitude of the Entente, which is accounted a good omen for the success of the Versailles negotiations.

80 RETURNED MEN COMING

WILL REACH PETERBOROUGH AT 8:20 ON THURSDAY EVENING.

Mayor Duncan received a wire from Kingston military headquarters this afternoon notifying him that about 80 returned soldiers for Peterborough have left Halifax and would reach Kingston Wednesday afternoon.

His Worship, in acknowledging the receipt of this news asked that the men be held in Kingston and entrained for home at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon, so that they may arrive here at 8.20 Thursday evening, for which time a royal reception is in preparation.

Soviet Government For Turkey

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 22.—A revolution has broken out in Turkey and a Soviet Government has been declared a revolutionary committee has been established at Constantinople according to a telegram received here from Kiev quoting the Bolshevik representative at Odessa who says that the Turkish consul there has received official announcement of a change in government.

HOLD PLEBISCITE ON PEACE TREATY

GERMANY TALKS OF REFERRING QUESTION OF ACCEPTANCE TO VOTE.

Berlin, April 22.—The Cabinet devoted less than half an hour to the formulation of its answer to the Entente's invitation to Versailles for the purpose of receiving a draft of the peace terms. A feeling of gloom prevails in official circles and The Associated Press is told that there are no illusions as to obtaining any mitigation in the dictatorial peace awaiting Germany.

The procedure of the Council of Four came as a surprise, notwithstanding the fact that the news for the past week foreshadowed it, and it is interpreted in Cabinet circles and at the Foreign Office as final proof that the Entente is disinclined forthwith to enter into negotiations based on President Wilson's fourteen points and that the terms awaiting Germany are cut and dried.

The German emissaries will merely have instructions to carry the peace document back to Berlin. The question whether the present Government will assume the responsibility of accepting or rejecting the terms, or whether it will present them for a national referendum is a matter of conjecture.

Official opinion, so far as adduced tonight, was opposed to the declaration of a referendum and in favor of peremptory declination of peace terms based on any other proposition than Mr. Wilson's platform, as the present temper of the German working men is anti-capitalistic and anti-imperialistic and bourgeoisie is in full accord with the proletariat.

The present Government, it has been learned, is not flirting with the idea of a plebiscite, as it would much rather negotiate peace and set the country at work. But it is also conscious that a peace settlement in which Germany has not had a voice would precipitate a storm of national resentment which no cabinet could weather.

PENSION PLAN TO BE REVISED

IMPORTANT CHANGES WILL BE SUGGESTED BY SPECIAL COMMITTEE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, April 22.—Parliament resumes its deliberations this afternoon, but is not anticipated that there will be any important developments in regard to the Dominion Franchise Act or other matter. It is expected that Sir Thomas White will announce this week the date on which the budget statement will be brought down.

MARTIAL LAW FOR INDIAN DISTRICT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

OVER A HUNDRED THOUSAND WORDS

N PEACE TREATY AS FINALY DRAFTED BY THE CONFERENCE.

Paris, April 22.—The Council of Four of the Peace Conference, in the interval before the peace treaty is handed to the German delegates, will take up the question of making the document public. The American delegation, in agreement with the press advisers to the delegates of other countries, has recommended to the Council the publication of the treaty immediately after its delivery to hte Germans. Otherwise, it is pointed out the first version of the important provisions of the treaty would be issued by the Germans and might be loaded up with German propaganda.

The plan proposed on behalf of the United States, is for the American delegates to cable for simultaneous distribution on the American continental, first a [illegible] word official summary of the treaty, second a 5,000 word official summary, and, third, the text of the treaty. The two summaries would be given to the American press at about the same time and the treaty a day or two later, the text possible to be distributed by instalments as it was received.

Hundred Thousand Words

The text of the covenant of the League of Nations has already been telegraphed to the State Department at Washington for release when authorised by President Wilson. Other parts of the treaty are likely to be cabled during the present week.

The final despatch, which may count up to nearly 100,000 words can be cabled in four or five hours if all the cable lines are cleared for the purpose. The capacity of the cables is 600,000 words a day, and the Associated governments could order the text of the peace treaty given first official priority so that the enormous task of transmission could be accomplished with less delay than a press message ordinarily requires.

PUBLIC MEN ARE IN TRAIN WRECK

CANADIAN NATIONAL WITH NOTABLES ON BOARD, TAKES THE DITCH.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, April 22.—The Canadian National train of the C. N. R. was derailed at five a.m. at Elgin, sixty-four miles west of Ottawa. Six of the eleven coaches left the track, but nobody was injured. Among the passengers were Sir Thomas White, Hon. [illegible] and D. B. Hanna, president of the road. An extra train made up and left Elgin for Ottawa at 9.15.

SOVIET GOVERNMENT ARE FORCED OUT BY DEMOCRATS IN HUNGARY

Chaos Reigns in Budapest and Conscription Order Has Been Issued—Violence, Murder and Looting by Red Guard Expected.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Amsterdam, April 22.—The Hungarian Government, headed by Bela Kun has resigned under pressure of Rumanian troops, according to a despatch to the Central News from Vienna quoting reports received in that city by aerial mail from Budapest. Chaos is said to prevail at the Hungarian capital. It is reported that the Czech forces have joined the Rumanians and have defeated the Hungarian Soviet troops. It is said that a social democratic regime, headed by Sigmund Kunfi, present commissiary of Education, may succeed to the control.

The Red Geards have been provided with hand grenades and efforts are being made to intensify the discipline of the people here. Conscription has been proclaimed, surcharging the atmosphere with uneasiness. Fresh extremist outbreaks are dreaded, as the conscription decree is regarded as certain to destroy the order which has hitherto been maintained. The action of the Soviet government in arresting members of the clergy has united Catholics, Lutherans and Calvinists in strong opposition, and on the whole the Soviet forces are so obviously in the minority that the regime cannot possibly continue. It was only by most clever manoeuvring that the labor unions were reconciled to the Soviet government, for they fared better with the Socialists than with the Communists, and they are now growing restive. The elimination of the Soviet government, however, may be attended by violence and murders and looting by the worst elements of the Red Guard is expected.

Denies the Reports

London, April 22.—Bela Kun, the Hungarian foreign minister in a telephone message to Vienna, denies the accuracy of the reports regarding the political crisis in Budapest. He says the Communists are still exercising their dictatorship and are successfully resisting the opposing forces, even gaining ground.

IS FINED FIVE DOLLARS FOR RUNNING CAR WHILE DRUNK

Perry Butler Fares Better Than the Man on Foot Found in Same Condition.

Perry Butler was this morning in police court fined $5 and costs, the latter amounting to $10.60 when convicted of having been driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor.

Accused ran into Sidney Reid of Otonabee on George Street near the corner of Charlotte on Saturday night about 12.30 o'clock. He was charged with being drunk and appeared before the magistrate yesterday morning but was remanded in custody until today when he appeared and pleaded not guilty to the accusation.

Constable Boyd was the first witness called by Chief Thompson who was prosecuting. The witness described the accident and stated that Perry looked as if he was drunk and that his breath smelt of alcohol. Upon being cross examined by Butler's Counsel, Mr. G. N. Gordon, Constable Boyd admitted that he could not swear that Butler was drunk but that he bore every appearance of it. He conceded that breath smelling of alcohol did not show conclusively that a man was drunk

Mr. Gordon remarked that it might have been one of the other men in the crowd who had been imbibing and that the policeman had got a whiff of his breath.

Sydney Reid whose buggy had been smashed was the next witness. He described the accident and submitted an estimate of having the vehicle repaired which amounted to $6.00. He smelt no liquor on the breath of the accused nor did he notice anything peculiar about his actions. x

Mr. George Graham of the Empress Hotel next testified. He had seen the accident and stated that it looked as if Butler had tried to pass Reid on the wrong side. There would not be sufficient room for this between the buggy and the curb. He saw no signs of the effects of liquor upon the accused.

Alphonse O'Connor who is employed in Pulkinghorn's Livery and who rented the car to Butler about 11.30 stated that the accused was apparently quite sober and paid him in advance. He did not consider him a dangerous man to rent a car to. If he had shown any signs of having been drinking he would not have allowed him to take the car out.

Constable Young who assisted Constable Boyd to lead Butler to the police station was quite satisfied to swear that Butler was drunk. He stated in answer to questions of Mr. Gordon that he considered the odor of alcohol upon a man's breath as infallible evidence that he had been drinking. In answer to another question asked by Mr. Gordon he stated that he did not think that excitement resulting from the accident would account for the peculiar actions of the accused.

Mrs. Bridget Collins, the aged grandmother of the prisoner stated in the witness box that her grandson had poor eyesight.

Butler upon the stand denied that he had had a drink of liquor upon that night and stated that he had taken two drinks of ordinary two per cent beer and apple cider in a hotel. He had been rejected for military service upon five occasions as a result of defective vision.

In answer to question of the Chief, Butler admitted that he had been fined for being drunk a short time ago and upon that occasion he had pleaded not guilty.

Mr. Gordon contended that the evidence against his client was purely circumstantial. He had been drinking local option beer which would account for the smell of alcohol upon his breath. He was excitable and stuttered when excited which would account for his peculiar conduct after the accident.. He was near sighted as had been proved conclusively and this was responsible for his failure to pass the buggy in safety. He had felt for an electric horn instead of turning out and the accident had followed. Mr. Gordon stated that his client was quite ready to pay the $6 which would be required to repair the buggy. As far as the evidence of the police constables was concerned it was purely circumstantial. Butler in his testimony stated that he had asked them to let go of his arms and he would not run away when they were leading him to the police station but the officers' nervous systems having undergone a severe shock on account of the escape from the jail in Toronto of McCullough their judgment cried out against such a relaxation of precautions. This, Mr. Gordon maintained also accounted for the visit of Constable Boyd to the cell in which Butler was lodged just before the former departed for his home. The officer was afraid Butler might emulate the action of the Toronto fugitive from justice and escape from the lock-up. Chief Thompson said it did not account for the fact that Butler had gone to sleep five minutes after entering the cell.

Magistrate Dumble found the prisoner guilty of being drunk while driving an automobile contrary to the Motor Vehicles Act and imposed the minimum fine of five dollars and ordered him to pay the costs.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

TUESDAY, APRIL 22, 1919

A BANQUET FOR THE VETERANS.

THE CITY OFFICIALS have always declared that it was their intention to extend a civic welcome to the soldiers, once the men were all home again or nearly so. That promise is now to be made good, the aldermen last night making arrangements for a banquet to the returned men, full particulars of which will be found in another column.

The soldiers have returned to Peterborough in small bodies ever since the signing of the armistice. It was not always possible to ascertain just when they would arrive, and anything like an official reception could not be arranged. Anyway, it is likely that the majority of the returning heroes neither expected nor desired anything of the kind. They were more interested in the matter of meeting their relatives and immediate friends. A parade at such times was not what concerned them. It was the welcome from parents, wives, brothers and sisters that cheered them after their long absence.

The program that the City Council has mapped out is the same as that adopted in Toronto and other Ontario cities. Peterborough citizens will not be remiss in their duty to the veterans, and the entertainment planned for them will be worthy of a community whose soldiers have brought so much fame to the district that is the native place of so many of them.

THE FINISH IN SIGHT.

ALL THE CORRESPONDENTS who serve the various Canadian newspapers at Ottawa are almost a unit in the opinion that there are exciting times ahead of Parliament before the current session closes. The most important questions are yet to come before the House, the tariff issue included. Of course, it is impossible to forecast the outcome, but all the indications seem to be that the end of Union Government is in sight.

There are two classes of Unionists at Ottawa, both as members in the ranks of the party and in the cabinet itself. One of these classes is openly, the other covertly, hostile, to the present arrangement. It is impossible for the latter to even approximately conceal their plans. Their every act speaks more plainly than any word they could utter. Their one purpose is to wreck the present Government and to restore the Liberal party to power. There are at least two members of the cabinet, Liberals holding important positions, whose every official act, especially their filibustering tactics, justifies no other conclusion. And in the rank and file even the inconsequential matter of titles for Canadians was seized upon by a section of the Unionists to endeavor to embarrass the Government.

The tariff issue is yet to come before the House. The Western members are on the point of open revolt, and the old fiscal skeleton in the cupboard of Canadian politics will be paraded again to serve the same purpose, to fill the same role that has always been assigned it.

GIVING CHILDREN A CHANCE.

A PUBLIC-SPIRITED capitalist in Detroit has just put up a number of apartment houses in that city and surprises the community by announcing that none but those who have children will be allowed to live in the various flats. Thus is reversed the order established by the custom of years.

No doubt this policy has been decided upon with the best of motives and with the sole object of helping out the working classes in solving the problem of finding homes the rent of which is within their means. It is doubtful, however, if it is the best course that could be devised in the interest of the children themselves, the rearing of whom is engaging more enlightened attention today than ever before. Picture a dwelling containing a dozen apartments and each tenant with four or five children. The heads of the families may be able to survive, but what about the little ones?

Children are like flowers. They cannot be properly developed without fresh air and sunshine. The Detroit capitalist solving one problem has simply created another.

THE FUTURE OF PETERBOROUGH.

THE ENTERPRISE of the Times-Journal brought to St. Thomas Mr. Frank Stockdale, who delivered a series of addresses on "Community Competition," in which he dealt at length with a number of live questions of immediate interest to that or any other city. Mr. Stockdale has devoted years of study to the best methods of developing private business and of advancing civic well-being. However convinced any individual may be of the accuracy and extent of his own knowledge of business and community problems and their solution, he never knows so much as to render it impossible for him to learn more. In this, as in other lines of life and work, the greater the personal knowledge the more is it realized that much can be gained from the experience of others and from the application of other minds to similar problems. No man becomes really old or useless while he retains the capacity to learn and the ability to turn his expanding knowledge to the best account.

The Times-Journal comments thus on the addresses of Mr. Stockdale in terms which apply to Peterborough or any other Canadian city, just as aptly as to St. Thomas:

Mr. Stockdale's address on Wednesday was crammed with valuable hints and suggestions drawn from an extensive survey of the situation in other cities with conditions similar to those of St. Thomas. He pointed out that competition is no longer between individuals, but rather between communities, and this is as true of nations as of cities and provinces. The whole trend of policy since the armistice was signed has been towards the organization of industries on a national basis, with the governments bending all their energies towards assisting the development of international trade. That is one result of the exposure of German pre-war methods, and it points the way along which cities must travel if they desire to assist and promote expansion. Organization and concentration are imperatively required, and, as Mr. Stockdale pointed out, the Allies did not get anywhere in the war until one man was placed in supreme command. What brought success to the Allies, he pointed out, brings success to the community, and united effort is the solution of the community problem. To accomplish that union is the task of the people who form the community.

A great truth underlies Mr. Stockdale's warning against what he called "smugosity," a synonym for self-satisfaction, that most fatal of mental attitudes. Whenever and wherever that condition is found there is an end not merely to progress but to the capacity for progress. Advancement is born of dissatisfaction with what is, and the ambition and determination to become something else, something different and something better. That is true of individuals and it is equally true of communities. So long as everybody is convinced that all is for the best in the best of all possible worlds or nations or cities, just so long will they remain in a rut that is continually getting deeper and more difficult to escape from. Here in St. Thomas we are beginning to feel dissatisfied with what has been and is. We are seeking a way of escape, and the best guide out is the experience of other cities that have passed beyond. Of course, it takes a wise man to profit by his own experience, and a wiser to profit by some other man's experience, and so with cities. If each citizen who wants a bigger and better St. Thomas will do his own part individually and co-operatively, the first and most important step will be taken towards the goal.

CANADA'S WAR DEBT.

THE NEW YORK Commercial is optimistic as to the future of Canada. In a recent editorial it says:

> Sir Thomas White, in a statement before the Dominion Parliament, has given an inkling of Canada's war burden, which he estimates at one and a half billion dollars. On a basis of 8,500,000 population, this means a per capita debt of $200, as against $40 before the war. The exact proportion of war costs that will have to be met out of current revenue is estimated roughly at 25 per cent.
> The actual total war expenditures up to the end of the fiscal year, March 31, are estimated at $1,277,272,000. Demobilisation costs are high, though they will be only one-half in 1920 of what they are this year. How the budget will be financed Sir Thomas did not say, but it is expected that he will announce governmental plans early next month, when Sir Robert Borden is expected back from Paris.
>
> The one bit of sunshine in this burden of war is that prosperity has arrived in the Dominion. One textile company alone recently placed a $6,000,000 order with Roumania. Our Lady of the Snows will keep pace with the United States in the march of prosperity. We have so much in common that prosperity will spread far over both borders.

THE EDITORIAL WRITER.

(London Advertiser.)

Every day we look over the editorials that appear in a hundred or more papers, and if there's a touch in any one of them that may have helped someone, we feel that work cannot be measured by a pay envelope for the fellow who wrote it. Every writing worker on a newspaper has a chance to get out of him all the good he has in his system, as well as a lot of the bad. Newspaper folk don't wear the pose of heavy importance now, if they ever did. They feel more and more that they should help people rather than hurt people. It's a fulfilling life and a happy one; it gives a man or a woman a chance to express conceptions of life that crowds all around one, and if one doesn't become cynical or conceited his work will be vital. Being able to live your enthusiasm is like "having something on the ball" in the game of life.

His Bright Idea

"Please can you give a poor man a little something to eat? But I don't want no bread, please."

Woman—You don't want no bread eh I guess you ain't starving. You can just get along out of here.

"Wait till I explain, madam. You see, the woman next door just gave me a piece of paving stone for bread and as she said she was the best bread maker on this street—"

"The best bread maker in this street! Just come right in here, my poor man, and I'll show you what good bread really is. Lor', how some people does brag!"

"What are you going to name the baby?"

"I don't know. The women folk at our house haven't decided that yet."

"Don't you have anything to say about it?"

"Not a word. They insist on naming the children to suit themselves but they've promised me that if ever I get rich enough to own a motor boat or a yacht, I shall be allowed to christen it myself."

Maggie had a new baby brother, which everybody agreed was such a baby as had never been seen before, says an exchange. One day the baby was being weighed, and Maggie asked what that was for.

"Oh," said her father, "Uncle George has taken a great fancy to baby and he's offered to buy him for a shilling an ounce."

Maggie looked startled. "You're not going to sell him are you daddy?"

"Of course not precious," answered daddy proud to see his little girl loved her brother so.

"No. Keep him until he gets a bit bigger," the child went on; "he'll fetch more money then."

we found it necessary to make slight increases in price during the war period. Even though Magic Baking Powder may cost a few cents more than the ordinary kinds it is still by far the most economical baking powder on the market to-day when purity, strength and leavening qualities are taken into consideration.

THE TARIFF—EAST AND WEST

(U. A., in Toronto Saturday Night.)

How much right, in the light of proportional business done, have the uncapitalistic and non-manufacturing Western Provinces of Canada to impose their unseasonal tariff amendments onto the back of Canada, as a whole? From the standpoint of the figures, leaving out of consideration that we are one large community, they have a little better right than one out of five. While the Provinces of Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick were in eleven months of the year 1918 paying duty on goods entered for consumption to the amount of $406,000,000 in round figures, the Provinces of Manitoba, British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan were, in round figures, paying duty on goods valued at $86,000,000. The one Province of Ontario, that is the people therein, paid duty for that term of months on $250,000,000 of foreign products while the four Western States were paying duties on $86,000,000. The city of Toronto alone imported goods, for the use of everyone including materials which were incorporated into manufactures, many of which would then be shipped West, during the month of February, 1918 to the value of $5,708,510, while the whole Province of Manitoba imported goods valued at $2,221,367. The entire importations of dutiable goods into the four prairie provinces in Feb. came to $6,464,990, which is only $756,480 in excess of the figures of one Eastern city by itself, namely, Toronto. One city in Quebec, that of Montreal, paid duties on $6,436,648 and this sum very closely approximates that of all the Western Provinces combined.

In the fact of these results, why should our Dominion Parliament allow itself to be, at this juncture, stampeded into giving any undue consideration to those reactionary forces who demand a full measure of administrative consideration, while they pay one dollar out of five dollars of the tariff bill? The time has not yet come in the affairs of Canada when the selfish minority can lay down and champion new fiscal policies the effects of which if enacted, may be prejudicial to the interests of both East and West. Indeed, their bold espousal while we are still in the midst of a war episode which is far from being ended, lays the Western statesmen open to having their motives closely analyzed, and their past administrations tested, for the reason that they say: "You people in the East are all wrong; you don't know how to evolve and conduct proper fiscal measures; we purpose to show you."

In the first place, the demands of the Western bodies show lack of breadth and statesmanship in that they are merely and admittedly selfish. The sentences in the platform prove that. The goods to come in free are for the use of the farmer. The tariff reformers do not ask that the residents of the East shall have duties cut down on clothing they wear, safety razors they use, or what might be called semi-luxuries or even luxuries. They betray no concern over the high duties that Canadian business men must pay to bring motor trucks or machinery across the line for commercial use. Their attitude is not one of concern for Canada as a whole but for themselves only. It is pertinent to state that the East is at the present time making no audible demand for a downward tariff revision, with the exception perhaps of agreeing that the extra war tariffs should be abrogated. For one thing, bankers and business men are too much concerned over the present political and financial position, first of Europe, second of England, and thirdly, of Canada, to formulate any insular appeals having to do with tariff alterations. As a nation we have contracted debts of one kind and another aggregating what now is or soon will be an amount equal to about two billions of dollars. This calls for an annual interest payment of over one hundred million dollars per annum, by itself. I have not heard the suggestion that a present scaling of the tariff, and ultimate free trade within Canada, is going to find many of the million dollars contained in that sum. If the Western doctrines were conceived in any such spirit, they would at this particular time contain that much more of truer sentiment. The business men of Canada submitted to a payment of some sixty-five million dollars in war business taxes but they did not form themselves into a party and demand that their especial interests should be considered and this tax abrogated. No part of the community is "hollering" for relief except the three Prairie Provinces, and it is much nearer the truth to alter that expression to take in only certain associations in the West and not the entire West.

AN IDEAL SUMMER OUTING

Algonquin Park, 200 miles north of Toronto and 170 miles west of Ottawa, is known to thousands who have enjoyed the attractions that are offered in this wonderful Government Reserve. At an altitude of 2,000 feet above sea level the air is pure and bracing. Speckled trout, salmon trout and black bass abound in the lakes and streams of this Park. The Grand Trunk operate hotels and log cabin camps in the Park. The Highland Inn on Cache Lake, Algonquin Park Station, with accommodation for 150 people, opens for the reception of guests this year on June 14th, and Nominigan Camp on Smoke Lake with accommodation for 75 people, opens on June 28th.

Indications are that there will be a large influx of summer visitors to this Park this year, and patrons are advised to communicate early and reserve their accommodation for their summer outing. VERA LAVELLE IDENTIFIED BY RESTAURANT WAITRESS

Young Woman, Who Helped Frank McCullough to Escape, Still Evades Police.

Toronto, April 22.—Miss Vera Lavelle, the young woman so anxiously sought by the police to tell what she knows of the escape of Frank McCullough, the escaped murderer from Toronto jail, has proven as elusive as McCullough himself. Unexpectedly she turned up in a restaurant in King street near Spadina avenue on Friday and, although the police were on her track a few minutes afterwards, she disappeared as suddenly as she did on the Tuesday night of the escape when she was staying in a house in Trinity square.

"I know Vera Lavelle and when I saw her come in here on Friday I 'phoned the police," said a waitress in the Spadina cafe to The Times today. "She walked in here quite unconcernedly about 4.30 o'clock on Friday afternoon and was served with dinner. I had seen her frequently before this affair as she came here for meals. Her appearance on Friday was the first I had seen of her for several weeks, but I had no doubt about her identity. She is quite a young woman, dressed in black with a pine-apple colored straw hat. She looked to me as if she had been sleeping with her clothes on as she appeared quite untidy."

"Was anyone with her, or had she a baby in her arms, as has been reported?"

"Nothing of the kind; she's only a young girl, and is unmarried. There was nobody with her," was the reply.

"Do you know where she lived or worked when she came here formerly for her meals?" asked the reporter.

"I knew nothing about her private affairs. She just came here to eat."

"Do you know if she was a bookkeeper or did she look more like a factory worker?"

"She might have been a bookkeeper, but I don't really know anything else about her."

Although the discovery of the Lavelle girl in the city as late as Friday would seem to explode the theory that the fugitive murderer had been accompanied by a woman, there is just the possibility that McCullough would have nerve enough to go into hiding in the city. The Lavelle girl's appearance, curiously enough, puts the police on the trail within a few blocks of where the shooting of Acting Detective Frank Williams took place, near the corner of King and Bathurst streets.

Little as McCullough's pictures would indicate it, he has been and is a ladies' man. Some peculiar power he possesses seems to have attracted towards him no small amount of feminine worship. The police are looking for two more women, whose names they will not reveal, whom the police believe could give interesting details of McCullough's escape, and a fairly accurate direction to his present hiding place.

The investigation into McCullough's escape by W. W. Dunlop, Chief Inspector of Prisons, and Sheriff Mowat will be held at the Don jail tomorrow, when additional facts concerning the affair are expected to come to light. The inquiry will be private, but a statement will be given to the press afterwards.

Chief Inspector of Detectives George Guthrie stated today that descriptions and photographs of McCullough have been distributed throughout the country, with the notice of the $1,000 reward offered by the Attorney-General's Department.

No decision has yet been received from Ottawa regarding the petitions for the commutation of McCullough's death sentence.

GENERAL STRIKE IS NOW LIKELY

LIMERICK WORKINGMEN TO ISSUE OWN MONEY TO HELP IDLE.

Limerick, April 22.—The general strike here incident to the proclamation of Limerick as a military area assumed a new and interesting phase, when the finance commission of the Limerick Trades and Labor Council announced that it was preparing to issue its own money in the form of one shilling and ten shilling notes, which would be used in the purchase of food for the 14,000 strikers. The money is called "strike treasury notes," and is secured by the stock of food which it is proposed to purchase with the financial gifts reaching Limerick from other parts of Ireland and by the "integrity of the workers of Limerick."

The announcement of the new financial scheme was made by Tom Johnson, treasurer of the Irish Labor Congress, who announced also that the food commission of the labor council had arranged for supplies of food for the city. This food will be assembled in the warehouses of Limerick and sold to the merchants, who will distribute it under the direction of the labor council at fixed prices which do not permit of profiteering.

"General strike against British militarism, April, 1919. The Limerick Trades and Labor Council promise to pay bearer ten shillings. (Signed) ———, Chairman; ———, Treasurer."

The total amount of the issue has not yet been determined, but the printing presses already are at work.

The military forces were especially watchful during the night, and it is said that reinforcements have arrived.

Barred From Limerick.

Five hundred strikers at Limerick, who attempted to re-enter after attending a hurling match in the suburbs, were stopped by troops because they did not have military passes, says the Limerick correspondent to The Daily Mail. The men did not need passes leaving the town, but under the regulations nobody may re-enter the town without them, and as today the men refused to apply for passes, they were not allowed to cross the bridge over which they sought to return to Limerick.

According to The Daily Mail the sentries had been doubled and a tank and an armored car were brought into position to command the bridge. The strikers did not attempt to force an entry into the town, but obeyed their leaders, who instructed them to remain beyond the bridge.

Tact and good humor also were displayed by the sentries and a clash does not seem to be threatened according to The Daily Mail, but the correspondent adds that it looks as if the strikers may be forced to spend the night outside Limerick.

CROP PROSPECTS GOOD

Seeding Started in Many Parts of Saskatchewan.

Saskatoon, Sask., April 22.—Farmers in the district west of Biggar to the Alberta border are most optimistic over the present conditions. They declare that the prospects have never appeared brighter at this time of the year. Seeding has started in many places, but in some the water is still preventing operation.

DEBS HAS A COMFORTABLE ROOM IN STATE PRISON

Famous Socialist, Serving Time for Treason Has Found Favor in the Eyes of the Penitentiary Warden.

Moundsville, W. Va., April 22. — Eugene Debs, who has become the world's most noted political prisoner, is not spending his nights in West Virgina's state prison caged like a wild beast in one of its thousand steel cells. He has been made a hospital attendant and has a room all his own, newly fumigated and painted, with a real bed in it, a table and chairs. The room is on the ground floor, with several windows looking out east and west. This is to be Debs' home until his release.

Several of Debs' friends visited the prison and found Debs quietly ensconced in a temporary room in the hospital while his new room was being made ready for him. They came upon him unawares and found him quietly sitting in a low rocking chair, puffing away at his pipe and reading John Reed's "Ten Days That Shook the World." Near him on his cot was his sole companion, a large Maltese cat, which looked up rather jealously as they entered.

Free Access to Prison Library.

"Mr. Debs, here are your friends to see you," said the warden. Gene put his book aside on the bed, came quickly forward and embraced them all at once. Greetings were over and the warden then told Debs that he had free access to the prison library.

"We have a rule here, Mr. Debs, that prisoners must be checked up on the books they take from the library but we will waive the rule for you. I know you appreciate the value of good books."

"Indeed I do," said Debs.

Debs said that he slept "like a log last night," and now felt "as chipper as a young goat on a tin roof." He laughed good naturedly as he looked at his prison garb and asked his visitors how they liked his new suit. Debs had gone to the penitentiary in a new blue serge. He was still wearing the vest to it. He wore his own collar and tie.

Debs declared that his meals were good and that "everything was all right," his usual expression in cases of extreme adversity.

The warden made it plain that he did not wish the visit to be of length. He insisted that the visitors take dinner with him and they did so. He was interested to learn something of Debs' history.

No Orders to Show Favor.

"I don't know what you gentlemen may think," said the warden at one point, "but I want you all to know that I have had no instructions from anyone, none from the governor, none from Washington to show Mr. Debs any special favors or consideration. What I am doing is purely my own affair."

The warden seemed to want to convey that impression to the world. His guests had all hazarded the guess that in the case of Debs, unusual consideration would be the policy, and that this consideration very likely came from high authority. The warden denies it.

While they were with Debs the warden spoke about his new job as hospital attendant.

"I am going to do whatever you think is best," said Debs. "I want to earn my board here at any rate," he added, and his tall frame bent almost double with laughter.

GREAT SHORTAGE OF MOTOR CARS

NOT HALF ENOUGH TO SUPPLY THE DEMAND FOR THE YEAR 1919.

Col. Charles Clifton, President of National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, says: "Normally the production and sales of motor vehicles in the United States increased at a rate of 40 per cent a year. In 1915 and 1916 the passenger car increase was 50 per cent to 80 per cent respectively, but in 1917 it fell to 17 per cent and last year there was a decrease of nearly 40 per cent. If the normal increase had been maintained throughout this four-year would have been approximately 2,250,000 instead of the actual production of 1,044,754, and there would have been built about 700,000 more cars than were actually made. So there is an apparent shortage of that many cars. For the year 1919 there should be a potential market for 3,000,000 cars, but not more than half of this number will be produced, in all probability, and by summer many persons will be wanting cars who will have to go without, or content themselves with machines that have already been in service too long and should go to the junk dealer."

Clerk.

His First Shave

He's starting right

Dad knows it. For hasn't he vivid memories of other times, before the eventful day when he bought his cherished AutoStrop Razor? So he is happy to find that his boy won't have to put up with what he went through—dull blades tingling face, half removed stubble—these are the things that make dad wince as he thinks of them. But happily all that is past—to stay.

And now for the boy there is only cleanliness and comfort, the sense of physical well being that follow a cool, clean, satisfying shave such as only an AutoStrop Razor can give. This and the fact, that the AutoStrop Razor sharpens its own blades, and is not taken apart for stropping or cleaning, has led thousands of dads everywhere to recommend the AutoStrop Razor to their sons.

The price you pay for an AutoStrop Razor, strop and blades—$5.00—is on deposit till you're satisfied.

LET ALL THE PEOPLE UNITE IN A WELCOME HOME TO SOLDIERS

Public Reception to Heroes From Overseas on Wednesday or Thursday.

It is expected that 25 or more returned Peterborough men from the 2nd and 4th Battalions will reach Peterborough Wednesday and Thursday.

As this will be the largest number yet to return at one time, the City Council is preparing a reception fitting the occasion.

His Worship the Mayor and his Council colleagues will receive the returning war veterans at the station, and it is expected that other prominent citizens will join the party.

Those men already home, and whose return at any one given time was in too small numbers to render consistent a demonstration worthy the name, are expected to be on hand, in khaki, and join their latest arrived comrades from overseas in one triumphant march through the town. This reception is as much for them as for those to come this week. It goes without saying that the three bands will attend. The boy scouts will turn out, the G.W.V.A. and the fire brigade will, with other elements, go to make a welcome home parade in which torchlight and other illuminating features will have a place.

A Convenient Hour.

It is expected that arrangements can be made by which the conquering heroes may reach the Peterborough Grand Trunk station from Kingston Wednesday or Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. This is to afford the public convenient opportunity to turn out in full strength and join in the general rejoicing. Right nobly have our boys in khaki played their part in upholding Peterboro's honor and in crushing Peterborough's brutal foes on the battle fields of France and Flanders. See to it that this reception is one worthy the name, and don't forget to cheer!

PTE. WATERMAN AWARDED MEDAL

FOR GALLANTRY IN ACTION DURING BIG ADVANCE LAST YEAR.

Friends and acquaintances of Mr. Stirling Waterman, formerly of the Princess Pats, will be pleased to learn that he has been awarded the Military Medal for gallantry in action and devotion to duty during the great advance in August, 1918.

On the 12th of August Mr. Waterman's platoon was cut off from the rest of the unit and although outnumbered many times over succeeded in cutting their way back to our own lines. During the action the platoon officer, Mr. Fuller, and Pte. Waterman, held the enemy back with the bayonet and smoke bombs while the rest of the platoon reached safety, putting out of action several machine guns, which had been rushed up within a few yards of them. They then retired carrying the last wounded man with them and reached our own lines unhurt. Two days later Mr. Waterman was wounded and returned to England.

For this act, which doubtless saved the lives of many, both received decorations, Mr. Fuller receiving the Military Cross and Mr. Waterman the Military Medal.

Mr. Waterman is at present spending a short holiday with his father, Mr. Wm. Waterman, of South Monaghan.

The profit sharing is limited to employes who have been six months in continuous service.

Union Caucus Is Called at Ottawa

PROHIBITION AND RACE TRACK GAMBLING QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, April 22.—A Unionist caucus has been called for Thursday at which the parliamentary situation will be considered. Two matters which will probably be taken up are governmental action in regard to prohibition and race track beting. It is expected that Sir Robert Borden will return within a few weeks of the conclusion of the deliberations at Paris.

Another Festival Tonight in St. Paul's

DELIGHTFUL EVENING OF MUSIC IN GEORGE STREET CHURCH LAST EVENING.

The musical festival in George Street Methodist church last evening in connection with Canada's music week was one thoroughly enjoyed by all present. The program was rendered as advertised, and was of a high order of merit, the chorus numbers were full of harmoniously balanced volume, and the orchestral selections by the George Street Sunday school orchestra, were very acceptable features. Mrs. Geo. H. King, Miss Etta Kemp and Miss Ruby Young were heard to good advantage in vocal solos, as were also Messrs. E. Jones and T. Worth in duett. Readings by Mrs. F. L. Jenne are deserving of considerable commendation.

Tonight's Program.

Another free festival will be given in St. Paul's church this evening at 8.15 o'clock. The program is as follows:

Organ solo—Mr. Treneer.

Solo—Mr. Farr.

Chorus—Peace (Simper)—Massed choir.

Trio—Praise Ye (Verdi)—Miss Hinchliffe and Messrs. Humpage and Smith.

Solo—Light in Darkness—Miss Lynn.

Octett—St. Andrews.

Solo—Judge Me O God (Buck) — Mr. J. Smith.

Organ Solo—Caprice (Cadman)—Mr. Kenyon.

Solo—Give Us Thy Light (Adams) —Miss Penrose.

Chorus—Unfold Ye Portals (Gounod)—Massed Choir.

Duett—Barcarolle (Hoffmann) — Misses Hinchliffe and Lynn.

Solo—Mr. Farr.

God Save the King.

Really Worth While.

The concerts each evening are voluntary offerings by Peterborough local talent to this city's week of music in commemoration of the first peaceful Eastertide the world has seen the past four years. All who can should attend as they are really worth while.

WILL RECEIVE IRISH ENVOYS

LLOYD GEORGE AGREES TO SEE DELEGATES FROM THE UNITED STATES.

Paris, April 22. — David Lloyd George, the British Prime Minister, has agreed to receive former Governor Edward F. Dunne, of Illinois, Frank P. Walsh, former chairman of the national War Labor Board, and Michael J. Ryan, of Philadelphia, next week. The Americans were chosen by the Irish societies in the United States to appeal to the Peace Conference on behalf of Ireland.

The arrangement for the meeting was made by Colonel Edward M. House, of the American peace delegation, at a luncheon today at the residence of the British Premier. Mr. Lloyd George said he was unable to receive the Americans this week, owing to the pressure of business connected with the peace treaty and requested them to remain over for a conference until next week.

It is expected that the Americans will take up with Mr. Lloyd George the question of his receiving the delegates from Ireland who are coming to Paris.

ALLIED NATIONS PLACE ORDERS FOR FARM TOOLS

Roumania and France Will Take Two Million Dollars Worth of Implements to be Made in Canada.

Canadian farm implement manufacturers have participated in important export business with Europe, and shipments already made to the devastated areas of Northern France were forwarded on comparatively short notice to aid the peasants in preparing the land for this season's crop. The first order in connection with reconstruction was received the early part of this year from the French Government. The object was to extend aid for the people who could not help themselves. Payment for this business is made by the government of France, and, while the initial order is not considered to be by any means all that will be forthcoming for Northern France for this season, it is considered that the subsequent business will be financed through other channels. Grain and hay cutting machines, plows, etc., formed the bulk of the order. Shipment of part of the order was made several weeks ago, and the remainder has just left Canada.

The urgency of the situation in Northern France has been impressed upon Canadian manufacturers who have travelled through that territory. Farm equipment has either been carried away by the invaders or rendered unfit for further use. One Canadian business man stated that very crude implements of medieval type were being used by the peasants in an effort to prepare the soil for this year's crop. In order to make the population of this area self-supporting to as great an extent as possible, immediate measures were taken by the French Government to insure a maximum production of foodstuffs. Canadian implements have been used largely in France. The early shipment of this order was especially important for the preparation of a portion of the land for this season's crop. Great difficulties are being encountered in making the soil fit for cultivation again.

Considerably more than $1,000,000 was involved in the business secured by the Canadian manufacturers of farm implements. This is independent of the regular business with France. The providing of credits to the extent of $25,000,000 through the Canadian Trade Commission for the orders of textiles, foodstuffs and agricultural implements for Roumania has also opened the way for export business with that country. About a month ago orders were placed in Canada for a considerable quantity of farm implements, about half the size of the French purchase. Rapid delivery was sought by the Romanian purchasing authorities. Date of shipment was fixed for six weeks from the time of placing the order, which under present conditions would leave insufficient time for securing the raw material required. The manufacturers have accomplished the difficult task of getting the goods ready in the limited time at their disposal.

The total amount of business already transacted with France and Roumania is understood to be considerably in excess of $2,000,000. The Scandinavian countries have also been in the market for Canadian implements, and some trade has passed with Holland, Southeastern Europe, and Roumania in particular is looked upon as the source of further important orders for farm implements in connection with reconstruction needs.

FEELS LIKE BURDEN HAS BEEN LIFTED

MRS. CLARK HAD ALMOST GIVEN UP HOPE WHEN TANLAC RESTORED HER TO HEALTH.

"I feel like Tanlac has lifted a big burden off my shoulders," said Mrs. Mary E. Clark, of 24 Buttonwood Avenue, Mt. Denis, Ont., Canada, recently.

"I had a severe attack of pneumonia," she continued, "that left me in a terribly run-down condition. I lost my appetite and fell off so much and lost so much strength that I wanted to sit down and rest all the time. My nerves were in such a bad fix that I hardly closed my eyes at all. I would get up in the morning feeling worse than when I went to bed. Often my head ached all day long. I could hardly get through my housework, and was afraid I would have to give up altogether.

"Before I had finished half my first bottle of Tanlac my appetite improved, and I haven't had a headache since I started on it. I sleep like a baby and am so much stronger than I was that I am actually doing every bit of my housework, and don't get tired in the least."

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. R. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by C. Pringle & Son.

At Home of Peter Robinson Chapter

The "At Home" given by the members of the Peter Robinson Chapter of the I. O. D. E. at the Empress Hotel last night was one of the most successful events of the season in Peterborough.

There were 275 guests present and the entire program of the evening passed off in the most satisfactory manner possible.

The ball room presented a brilliant appearance, having been decorated for the occasion and dancing commenced at 8.30. Music was furnished by Luton's orchestra of Toronto, and was of the high standard provided by these musicians, invariably.

About twelve o'clock refreshments were served by the young lady members of the I.O.D.E.

COSTS REMITTED BY THE CITY

THE WISE RESIDENT WILL KEEP DUCKS INSTEAD OF HENS

The city's Legal Committee met last night.

Joseph Renca's application for payment of damages to the extent of $25 for the loss of nine hens, a cord of wood and a quanity of fruit through the flooding of his premises from the Downie street creek was refused. Committee does not acknowledge any liability in the matter.

E. L. Payne, in a communication, stated that the fine of $50 imposed on him by the local court for alleged infringement of the Stamp Act had been remitted him by the Department of Justice, and he asked that the court costs of $3.10 be refunded by the city. The department has ruled that the judgment against him had been a miscarriage of justice. Mr. Payne's request was allowed.

ENGLAND NOT BANKRUPT BUT HAD NARROW ESCAPE

Sir Walter Runciman Denounces Extravagent Expenditures in Various Departments of the Government.

London, April 22.—"England is not yet bankrupt," said Sir Walter Runciman, former president of the London Board of Trade and a national trade expert, in an interview, commenting on Premier Lloyd George's statement in Parliament, "I would rather leave Russia Bolshevik than see Britain bankrupt."

"But," added Sir Walter, "she has been nearer to it than ever before in history."

"When Parliament resumes next week the budget will be submitted—probably 1,500,000,000 pounds ($7,500,000,000). Last April Bonar Law reckoned that the taxes already imposed would yield 650,000,000 pounds ($3,250,000,000), and still yield 300,000,000 pounds ($1,500,000,000) in 1919.

"That makes a total conceivable revenue of 950,000,000 pounds ($4,750,000,000), with a deficit of from 400,000,000 pounds to 500,000,000 pounds ($2,000,000,000 to $2,500,000,000) which will have to be met by borrowing.

"Since the armistice the Government has been borrowing about 10,000,000 pounds ($50,000,000) weekly and there is no sign of an immediate decrease.

"Every unemployment donation — one of the worst bungles in history—is now paid from borrowed money. We are travelling faster and faster toward financial impotence.

"There are only two ways of terminating the descent to hopeless bankruptcy:

"'Increasing the country's productive power, or,

"Reducing the expenditures.

"Just as private extravagance at this moment is anti-social, so state extravagance is nothing short of a serious blow to the very foundations of the Empire.

"The Chancellor of the Exchequer should not have allowed Colonel Churchill (the War Minister) to foist such an appalling estimate as $2,000,000,000 for the War and Air Ministries on him.

"Every Government department has gone mad with spending.

"But it is impossible to increase the country's productivity if a higher and higher debt is accumulated, entailing more burdensome taxation and diverting vast sums from trade for non-productive military purposes. Every sovereign diverted to military purposes reduces the fertility of Britain's industries.

"Now, America, in her favorable position as the world's creditor to the tune of $10,000,000,000, not only absorbs our securities but collects interest charges of $50,000,000 yearly.

"Is Britain bankrupt? Not yet. I [illegible] it than ever before in history."

IMPOSING WEDDING RITE

Mr. Stanley Richardson and Miss Aileen Braund Married at Victoria Hall Last Night.

In Victoria Hall last night at 8 o'clock Aileen May Winston Braund was united in marriage to Mr. Stanley James Richardson, the ceremony being performed in the presence of a throng of people which crowded the hall to capacity, by Lt.-Col Morehen.

Some time ago it was arranged that the wedding would be performed in public and that a banquet would be prepared, the proceeds arising from which would be devoted to improving the Sunday School Hall at the Temple.

Adjutant Buntin, O.C., of the local corps had charge of the organization work and he carried it out thoroughly as was evidenced by the splendid manner in which the function of last night was conducted.

Tables decorated in red, white, blue, pink, yellow and khaki were prepared and tickets of a corresponding color were sold.

At 5.30 the banquet commenced and continued until 7.30 during which time the tables were cleared and filled many times. It is estimated that from 700 to 800 people were served.

The basement of the temple in which the banquet was held was decorated in a most pleasing manner and presented a most interesting appearance with its crowds of people, and daintily dressed waitresses bearing the colors of the table to which they were assigned.

It had been decided to appoint a captain and five waitresses for each table and the system worked out most satisfactorily. The service was as nearly perfect as anything can be in this world and those in charge of the tables could not do enough for their guests.

Good things were pressed upon the guests and few there were who remembered an occasion when more dainty dishes representative of all varieties of the accomplished cook's art were in evidence at one time.

There is nothing which affords more enjoyment than the real old fashioned tea meeting and the banquet at the Salvation Army Temple was an excellent example of this. There was nothing of parsimony so apparent at the modern dinners when the guest is too often painfully aware of the fact that while what is offered to him is served in a most artistic manner that is about the best that can be said of it as there is so little of it that it serves as an aggravation to his appetite and seldom satisfies him.

Last night the only regret of the banqueter was that with so many inviting salads, cakes, sandwiches, jellies and good things before him he was limited in his capacity for partaking of them.

Last night's banquet was remarkable for several things. The first was the excellent service, the second, the splendid quality of the food and the wisdom shown in its selection and the third was the generous spirit in which one was urged to have a second and a third helping.

There were fifty members of the Army engaged in connection with the banquet and it was in a great measure due to their efficient services that [illegible]

At Victoria Hall

Promptly at 7.20 the Salvation Army band under the direction of Bandmaster W. Badley gave the first number of a musical program in Victoria Hall which continued until 8 o'clock. Miss Ivy Beer of Toronto one of the Salvation Army songsters contributed to the success of the musical part of the program.

The interior of the big hall was decorated in a fitting manner for the ceremony which was performed there last night. Upon the platform the band was assembled and about the front of the stage bouquets of beautiful flowers were set.

Under a combination of the British and Salvation Army flags draped above the platform the impressive marriage ceremony of the Army was carried out.

Mr. Stanley James Richardson, the groom, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. James Richardson of Rubidge street. His groomsman was Capt. Keith of Toronto.

Miss Aileen Winston May Braund, the bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Braund, Park street. She was attired in the uniform of the Salvation Army and were a bouquet of Easter lilies.

Miss McDonald of Cobourg and the sister, Miss L. Braund were the bridesmaids. Tho young brother of the bride was the ring bearer.

Lt. Col. Morehen, commanding officer of the Montreal Division performed the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Richardson will reside in Peterborough on Donegal street.

After the ceremony Adjutant Buntin presided at a very interesting program at which Sergeant-Major Gandy of the local corps congratulated Mr. and Mrs. Richardson. Adjt. (Mrs.) Watkinson private secretary of Commissioner Richards responded for the bride and Capt. Keith of Toronto, Assistant Property Secretary, replied for the groom. Upon the platform in addition to the above mentioned officers of the Army was Mrs. Col. Morehen.

Later in the evening a dainty wedding dinner was served at the home of the brides' parents, 51 Park street, at which nearly 100 invited guests were present.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation of Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimu- [illegible] the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing at any time.

THE GODS OF MARS

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

But my present business with him was of a different nature than that which requires any considerable abstract reasoning. It was to get my sword between his ribs, and this I succeeded in doing within the next few seconds, nor was I an instant too soon.

The chained prisoners had been watching the combat in tense silence. Not a sound had fallen in the room other than the clashing of our contending blades, the soft shuffling of our naked feet and the few whispered words we had hissed at one another through clenched teeth the while we continued our duel.

But as the body of my antagonist sank an inert mass to the floor a cry of warning broke from one of the female prisoners.

"Turn! Turn! Behind you!" she shrieked, and as I wheeled at the first note of her shrill cry I found myself facing a second man of the same race as he who lay at my feet.

The fellow had crept stealthily from a dark corridor and was almost upon me with raised sword ere I saw him. Tars Tarkas was nowhere in sight, and the secret panel in the wall, through which I had come, was closed.

How I wished that he were by my side now! I had fought almost continuously for many hours. I had passed through such experiences and adventures as must sap the vitality of man, and with all this I had not eaten for nearly twenty-four hours nor slept.

I was fagged out and for the first time in years felt a question as to my ability to cope with an antagonist. But there was naught else for it than to engage my man and that as quickly and ferociously as lay in me.

My only salvation was to rush him off his feet by the impetuosity of my attack. I could not hope to win a long drawn out battle.

But the fellow was evidently of another mind, for he backed and parried and parried and side stepped until I was almost completely fagged from the exertion of attempting to finish him.

He was a more adroit swordsman, if possible, than my previous foe, and I must admit that he led me a pretty chase and in the end came near to making a sorry fool of me and a dead one into the bargain.

I could feel myself growing weaker and weaker until at length objects commenced to blur before my eyes, and I staggered and blundered about more asleep than awake, and then it was that he worked his pretty little coup that came near to losing me my life.

He had backed me round so that I stood in front of the corpse of his fellow, and then he rushed me suddenly, so that I was forced back upon it, and as my heel struck it the impetus of my body flung me backward across the dead man.

My head struck the hard pavement with a resounding whack, and to that alone I owe my life, for it cleared my brain and the pain roused my temper, so that I was equal for the moment to tearing my enemy to pieces with my bare hands. I verily believe that I should have attempted it had not my right hand, in the act of raising my body from the ground, come in contact with a bit of cold metal.

As the eyes of the layman, so is the hand of the fighting man when it comes in contact with an implement of his vocation, and thus I did not need to look or reason to know that in my grasp was the dead man's revolver, lying where it had fallen when I struck it from him.

The fellow whose ruse had put me down was springing toward me, the point of his gleaming blade directed straight at my heart.

As he came there rang from his lips the cruel and mocking peal of laughter that I had heard within the chamber of mystery.

And so he died, his thin lips curled in the snarl of his hateful laugh, and a bullet from the revolver of his dead companion bursting in his heart.

His body, borne by the impetus of his headlong rush, plunged upon me. The hilt of his sword must have struck my head, for with the impact of the corpse I lost consciousness.

It was the sound of conflict that roused me once more to the realities of life. For a moment I could neither place my surroundings nor locate the sounds which had aroused me.

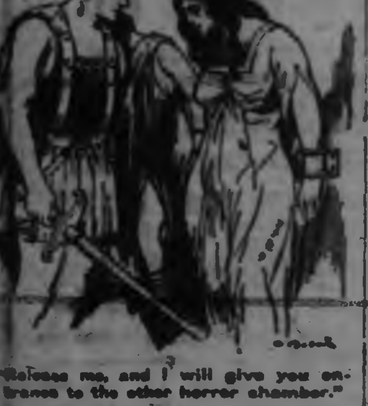
Then from beyond the blank wall beside which I lay I heard the shuffling of feet, the snarling of grim beasts, the clank of metal accouterments and the heavy breathing of a man.

As I rose to my feet I glanced hurriedly about the chamber in which I had just encountered such a warm reception. The prisoners and the savage brutes rested in their chains by the opposite wall eyeing me with varying expressions of curiosity, sullen rage, surprise and hope.

The latter emotion seemed plainly evident upon the handsome and intelligent face of the young red Martian woman whose cry of warning had been instrumental in saving my life.

It was several seconds before the sounds on the opposite side of the partition jolted my slowly returning faculties into a realization of their probable import, and then of a sudden I grasped the fact that they were caused by Tars Tarkas in what was evidently a desperate struggle with wild beasts or savage men.

With a cry of encouragement I threw my weight against the secret door, but might as well have essayed the down hurling of the cliffs themselves. Then I sought feverishly for the secret of the revolving panel, but my search was fruitless, and I was about to raise my long sword against the sullen gold when the young woman prisoner called out to me:



"Release me, and I will give you entrance to the other horror chamber."

"Save your sword, oh, mighty warrior, for you will need it more where it will avail to some purpose. Shatter it not against senseless metal which yields better to the lightest finger touch of one who knows its secret."

"Know you the secret of it then?" I asked.

"Yes; release me and I will give you entrance to the other horror chamber, if you wish. The keys to my fetters are upon the first dead of your foemen. But why would you return to face whatever other form of destruction they have loosed within that awful trap?"

"Because my friend fights there alone," I answered, as I hastily sought and found the keys upon the carcass of the dead custodian of this grim chamber of horrors.

There were many keys upon the oval ring, but the fair Martian maid quickly selected that which sprung the great lock at her waist, and freed, she hurried toward the secret panel.

Again she sought out a key upon the ring. This time a slender, needle like affair which she inserted in an almost invisible hole in the wall. Instantly the door swung upon its pivot and the contiguous section of the floor, upon which I was standing, carried me with it into the chamber where Tars Tarkas fought.

The great Thark stood with his back against an angle of the walls, while facing him in a semicircle half a dozen huge monsters crouched waiting for an opening.

Their blood streaked heads and shoulders testified to the cause of their wariness as well as to the swordsmanship of the green warrior whose glossy hide bore the same mute but eloquent witness to the ferocity of the attacks that he had so far withstood.

As he saw me enter a smile touched those grim lips of his, but whether the smile signified relief or merely amusement at the sight of my own bloody and disheveled condition I do not know.

As I was about to spring into the conflict with my sharp long sword I felt a gentle hand upon my shoulder and, turning, found to my surprise that the young woman had followed me into the chamber.

"Wait," she whispered, "leave them to me," and, pushing past me, she advanced upon the snarling banths.

When quite close to them she spoke a single Martian word in low but peremptory tones. Like lightning the great beasts wheeled before her, and I looked to see her torn to pieces before I could reach her side, but instead the creatures slunk to her feet like puppies that expected a merited whipping.

Again she spoke to them, but in tones so low I could not catch the words, and then she started toward the opposite side of the chamber with the six mighty monsters trailing at heel.

One by one she sent them through the secret panel into the room beyond, and when the last had passed from the chamber where we stood in wide eyed amazement she turned and smiled at us and then passed through herself, leaving us alone.

CHAPTER VI.

Thuvia

FOR a moment neither of us spoke. Then Tars Tarkas said:

"I heard the fighting beyond the partition through which you passed, but I did not fear for you, John Carter, until I heard the report of a revolver shot. I knew that there lived no man upon all Barsoom who could face you with naked steel and live, but the shot stripped the last vestige of hope from me, since you I knew to be without firearms. Tell me of it."

I did as he bade, and then together we sought the secret panel through which I had just entered the apartment—the one at the opposite end of the room from that through which the girl had led her savage companions.

To our disappointment the panel eluded our every effort to negotiate its secret lock. We felt that once beyond it we might look with some little hope for success for a passage to the outside world.

The fact that the prisoners within were securely chained led us to believe that surely there must be an avenue of escape from the terrible creatures which inhabited this unspeakable place.

Again and again we turned from one door to another, from the baffling golden panel at one end of the chamber to its mate at the other, equally baffling.

When we had about given up all hope one of the panels turned silently toward us, and the young woman who had led away the banths stood once more beside us.

"Who are you," she asked, "and what is your mission that you have the temerity to attempt to escape from the valley Dor and the death you have chosen?"

"I have chosen no death, maiden," I replied. "I am not of Barsoom, nor have I taken yet the voluntary pilgrimage upon the river Iss. My friend here is jeddak of all the Tharks, and, though he has not yet expressed a desire to return to the living world, I am taking him with me from the living lie that hath lured him to this frightful place.

"I am of another world. I am John Carter, prince of the house of Tardos Mors, jeddak of Helium. Perchance some faint rumor of me may have leaked within the confines of your hellish abode."

She smiled.

"Yes," she replied; "naught that passes in the world we have left is unknown here. I have heard of you many years ago. The therns have oft times wondered whither you have flown since you had neither taken the pilgrimage nor could be found upon the face of Barsoom."

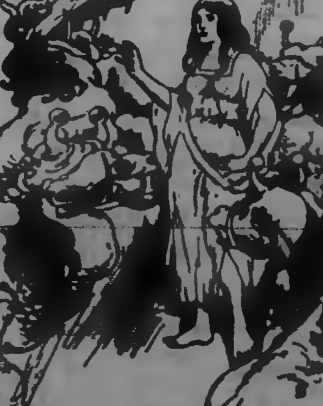
"Tell me," I said, "and who are you and why a prisoner, yet with power over the ferocious beasts of the place that denotes familiarity and authority far beyond that which might be expected of a prisoner or a slave?"

"Slave I am," she answered. "For fifteen years a slave in this terrible place, and now that they have tired of me and become fearful of the power which my knowledge of their ways has given me I am but recently condemned to die the death."

She shuddered.

"What death?" I asked.

"The holy therns eat human flesh," she answered me, "but only that which has died beneath the sucking lips of a plant man—flesh from which the defiling blood of life has been drawn. And to this cruel end I have been condemned. It was to be within a few hours had your advent not caused an interruption of their plans."



I Looked to See Her Torn to Pieces.

"Was it then holy therns who felt the weight of John Carter's hand?" I asked.

"Oh, no; those whom you laid low are lesser therns, but of the same cruel and hateful race. The holy therns abide upon the outer slopes of these grim hills, facing the broad world, from which they harvest their victims and their spoils.

"Labyrinthine passages connect these caves with the luxurious palaces of the holy therns, and through them pass upon their many duties the lesser therns and hordes of slaves and prisoners and fierce beasts—the grim inhabitants of this sunless world."

PUBLIC DEMAND FOR CLEAN PLAYS

AND "THE ROSARY" AT THE GRAND THURSDAY FILLS THE BILL

With the dark clouds of war departed and the people returning to normal conditions, the taste of the public in the drama has made a sudden veer. And, odd as it may seem that taste has gone back to the old days of clean plays, wholesome stories and unctuous humor. The unclean drama, which had such a vogue is slowly giving way to the more wholesome and the more cleanly. The people are tired of the riot of sex plays and the ruction of the war drama. They want to wander back into the realm of plays where there is a battle between the forces of good and evil and there the battles turn in favor of the good.

To be sure they do not want any mawkish stories and the like of that, but they want to see human life depicted as it is, with all its tears and its laughter, and they want to see the players moving about in clean and interesting surroundings. To this end, every one in this city will welcome the return of "The Rosary", a play founded upon an emblem of purity and as pure as the emblem. The play will come to the Grand Opera House on Thursday, April 24, bringing a selected company of players and a splendid production.

Messars Rowland & Clifford who are reviving this most successful offering have spared no pains and no expense in this production. Edward E. Rose, its author, has gone over the text and has added high lights of humor and deeper touches of pathos, but the fine character of Father Kelly, as played by Oscar O'Shea, is still the oustanding figure in this drama of domestic life. He still moves through the action, a real, loving and human figure, doing good in his own humorous way, and robbing his ministrations of any seeming austerity by his keen sense of comedy.

Millions of people have laughed and cried with this character and millions more are destined to do the same, for it is a character that has taken its place on the stage to remain for all time. This character has become a part of stage literature and is one that will interest and delight all lovers of unctuous humor combined with keen, human sense.

AT THE GRAND

One of the best and most thrilling acrobatic acts seen in a long time is that by the Ambler Bros. at the Grand the first 3 days of this week. A ladder balanced on the soles of one man's feet and upon which the other performs all sorts of stunts such as standing on his head, etc., is the most prominent part of the act. It is a most unique act and is well worth seeing

The Carson Trio with their accordeons and banjo pleased the crowd and their selections ranged from ragtime to grand opera. This act, too, is worthy of special mention.

The Melroy Sisters with their songs and dances drew great applause and deserved it. They also show some very fetching costumes.

"THE BETTER 'OLE" UNITES NATIONS

WHY FAMOUS ENGLISH COMEDY IS SO POPULAR WITH AMERICANS.

A great many people ask me how I account for the fact that "The Better 'Ole," an English comedy with a queer name, happens to be such a success with American audiences when the heroes are tommies, rather than doughboys, and the lingo is all English, says Edmund Gurney, who is making such a success of "Old Bill" in the Bairnsfather Comedy, which is to be presented at the Grand

"Well, I tell them that it is largely on account of the feeling of comradeship that has grown up between this nation and Great Britain since the outbreak of the war. We Americans have grown to appreciate the staunch and dauntless qualities of the Englishman, and the longer the war lasted, the greater was our admiration and understanding of these splendid fellows, who battled against such fearful odds to make the world safe for democracy.

"I remember a little anecdote that was printed in a New York newspaper about six months after the war was started. It was about a wounded British tommy, who was lying in a hospital all shot to pieces, but still full of that indomitable pluck that has made the English nation so invincible.

"'What is your idea of the war?' he was asked. The Tommy thought a minute, looking around at the vista of cots that surrounded him. Then his face brightened and he replied:

"'First you 'ears a 'ell of a noise and then the nurse says, 'won't you 'ave some o' this.'

"That is English humor at its best and pluckiest, and it seems to me that from the first time I read this anecdote on war, I began to appreciate the real merit of English humor. And I am sure that other folks began to appreciate is more, and as the war continued and more of these stories of cockney humor began to go over the top and across the Atlantic, we began to get a new angle on English humor, and the rather too lofty attitude that American humorists formerly preserved towards English humor died out completely and American and British humor because interchangeable, you might say—

When Mr. and Mrs. Coburn first produced "The Better 'Ole," at the Greenwich Village Theatre, many of their friends shook their heads dubiously and muttered that it was entirely 'to English to be a success.' But they had not reckoned upon the educational value of the war as an introducer to English fun. In fact the newspapers had been so full of Tommy stories for four years that I should think everyone would be able to grasp the humor of the play without a map and diagram.

"Why, it was only a few years ago that men and women were asking the meaning of the word "Blighty" but they all know what it means now, likewise the other British slang terms. In other words, "The Better 'Ole" is almost as much American now as it is British.

GUS HILL'S MINSTRELS

Old timers and new timers among theatregoers will welcome the news that a real honest to goodness minstrel show, bulging with the talent of white performers able artistically to stimulate the color tones and general characteristics of comic negroes will be the attraction at the Grand on Monday evening only, April 28th.

The news is embedded in the announcement that Gus Hill's Big Minstrels the biggest, largest and best of all negro minstrel travelling companies—will convey the negro mimicries and idiosyncrasies in their big five part program. The organization is attracting turn away audiences everywhere.

At Port Arthur, Louis Hill, 12, was killed when run over by Provincial Police Inspector McKirdy's automobile. Mr McKirdy's car was following another car and the boy, riding a bicycle beside the leading car, which suddenly slowed up. McKirdy swung out to avoid a collision, and in the mix-up the lad was thrown under the wheels.

Peter Deforest, of Woodville, lost an arm in a sawing machine accident. He died shortly afterwards.

Two hundred thousand dollars will be spent on improving Hamilton harbor.

Music in every home.
CANADA'S Music Week
APRIL 21 TO 28

Canada to Commemorate Peace With a Music Week

Music this Year as never before means Joy and Gladness

Music is the art that is close to the life of every citizen. Music is the language that everybody can understand. Music is the force that charms and inspires, that soothes and entertains as nothing else on the earth can do.

It was music, more than anything else (except perhaps religion), that helped us to bear the burden of those anxious times now happily past, when the horrors of war beset the nation.

Now comes Canada's National Music Week to celebrate the triumph of music, and to impress upon all people the great value of music as an intimate part of life every day in the year.

Is there enough music in your home? Are your evening hours filled with the enjoyment that music brings? Are your children being educated in music—taught to appreciate the finer things in music and to endow themselves with the refinement that always comes from the study of good music.

Celebrate your Easter by bringing music into your home. Let music increase your joy of living. Make Easter week truly a "music week" in your household

FORDSON FARM TRACTOR
SAVES TIME AND LABOR

FORDSON FARM TRACTORS may be observed in many fields along the country roads. Time is so vital to the farmer that they are now a matter of the hour.

There are hundreds of testimonials which indicate the many practical applications and uses to which farmers are putting this latest farm utility, showing that they realize the tractor's great possibility as a necessary part of their equipment. Never tired they help him all day long and day and night if necessary.

REPLACING FARM HORSES

During the turbulent period just passed it has been the job of the farmer of this continent to assist in feeding the entire world. And the demand for their produce is not likely to see any decrease. It is therefore obvious that the indispensability of the tractor will fast replace farm horses in many instances.

ELIMINATES DRUDGERY

Mechanical farming methods is fast changing from one of drudgery to scientific mechanical production with still greater innovations in sight and a much larger measure of enjoyment.

Let us demonstrate the practicability of the Fordson tractor at any kind of work on the farm.

REMARKABLE CAREER OF GRAND NATIONAL WINNER

Poethlyn Was Sold by Major Peel for Seven Guineas, and Later Bought by Breeder's Wife.

The horse was bred by Major Peel, the husband of the present owner, but was such an ugly duckling as a foal that he was sent to Wrexham market and there disposed of for seven guineas.

Subsequently he passed into the possession of a Shrewsbury publican swell, who then trained Major Peel's horses, saw him, and advised Major Peel that he would make a useful steeplechaser. The major and Mrs. Peel accordingly went and saw the horse, then a two-year-old, and the lady bought him for fifty guineas, being quite unaware that he was the horse her husband had bred and got rid of as useless.

Poethlyn ran in several races at four years of age, but failed in all. At five he won three of the six races in which he competed, and when Goswell joined the army in 1916 he was sent into Escott's charge at Lewes.

In 1917 Poethlyn won two good steeplechases, while last winter he won four, including the substitute "National" at Gatwick and the Lancashire handicap steeplechase at Manchester.

In all he has run in twenty-six steeplechases, and has come to grief only twice—once as a five-year-old and once as a six. He has not known defeat for two years, and has now rivaled the great feat of those brilliant jumpers, Cloister, Manifesto and Jerry M., by winning the Grand National with 12st. 7 lb. on his back.

Snowstorm Greeted the Races.

Just as the horses came out to parade in the recent race snow began to fall, and as they were lining up to start a terrific snowstorm and cyclonic wind swept over the ground. In less than a minute it was impossible to see across the ground, and the horses were ordered back to the paddock, where the jockeys dismounted and took shelter. The storm abated as quickly as it came, and ten minutes later the sun was shining again, though the ground was white.

A good start was made, and the twenty-three runners were sent off. Pollen, Fargue and Poethlyn led over the first fence, where they were joined by Loch Allen.

No horse fell till the fifth fence, Beecher's Brook, when Charlbury came down, but there were few falls, and not for many years have so many horses completed the course. Rubenstein, which was pulled up at the last open ditch, died shortly afterwards. W. Payne, who rode the horse, believes his mount hurt himself at Valentine Brook.

Poethlyn was never out of the first four or five horses, and, though Ballyboggan was once leading for a few lengths it was only on sufferance. It may be said without a trace of exaggeration that Poethlyn led the whole way and won as he pleased by eight lengths. He was by no means distressed at the finish, and looked as if he could go round again.

It was a most popular victory, and the shouts of delight began when the horse was two fences from home, and continued all down the straight. Three cheers were given at the weighing enclosure for Piggott, who rode a cool, masterly race, and three cheers more were given for Poethlyn, a worthy exemplar of Jerry M. Had Poethlyn not won it is quite likely that Pollen would have done so.

Bolsheviki Lose The City of Vilna

London, April 22.—The important city of Vilna has been recaptured by the Bolsheviki according to an official admission in a Russian wireless despatch. The Russian message reads: "The enemy attacked with considerable forces in the Vilna region, pierced our lines and occupied the town.

ITALY HURT BY ALLIES' ACTION

DISPLEASED WITH GT. BRITAIN AND U. S. FOR OPPOSING CLAIMS.

London, April 22.—A despatch to the Daily News from Rome, delayed, states:

"There is a great deal of ill-feeling in Italy against England and America because of their opposition to this country's Dalmatian claims. President Wilson gets most of the blame because he is reported to have refused the demand that Fiume should be assigned to Italy, so delayed the conclusion of peace and "contributed to the failure of the League of Nations," by trying to reconcile it with the Monroe Doctrine. "Americans are disliked to such an extent in Italy that the United States military authorities, as a precaution, have not only stopped allowing American officers and men in France to pass their leave in Italy, but also have ordered all American army and navy units still on duty in Italy, including the military police and Red Cross officers and nurses, should return to America without further delay.

"The traditional friendship between England and Italy, judging from the attitude of the press, no longer exists. In fact, not only have the Italians discovered British atrocities in Ireland, India and Egypt, and started commenting on the most unfavorable, but long, editorials are published daily, evidently with the tacit approval of the Government, explaining that England entered the war to make money, to get the German colonies, crush Germany, capture the world's markets and to increase her own power. It is useless to conceal the fact that the difficulties in the way of the re-establishment of commercial relations between Italy and Germany have, in great measure, been removed."

LIMERICK BRIDGE HELD BY SOLDIERS

STRIKERS WHO LEFT THE CITY ARE NOT PERMITTED TO RETURN.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Limerick, April 22.—Five hundred strikers who went outside the military lines of the city yesterday and who were not permitted to return over the Sarsfield bridge last evening because they could not show military permits, spent the night on the bridge and resumed their demonstrations this morning. Soldiers were still obdurate and would not permit the strikers to cross the bridge. Up to noon today there had been no clashes between the opposing forces.

FIVE AVIATORS PERISH IN FIRE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Andover, Eng., April 22.—Five members of the crew of the big Handley-Page airplane were burned to death early today when the machine crashed to the earth as a result of an accident at the aerodrome at Neyhill near here. Two others in the machine were injured. All occupants of the airplane were army officers. The machine failed to start off well and struck a telegraph pole. The under carriage broke off and the machine fell on the roof of a hut. The gasoline tank caught fire and the machine burned so quickly that it was impossible to reach the imprisoned crew.

All Should Wear England's Emblem

RED ROSES WILL BE ON SALE ON ST. GEORGE'S DAY.

The following paragraph re the St. George's Festival in Toronto tomorrow, which appeared in Toronto newspapers yesterday, will apply to Peterborough. The only alteration needed is to read "St. John's church." instead of "St. James' Cathedral," and "Wednesday," instead of "Sunday next." The last paragraph might also be copied by our city in the future:

"The annual service will be held at St. James' Cathedral on Sunday next when the musical features of the service will be of a truly festal and patriotic charcter. The hope was expressed that citizens would this year wear the red roses so that the emblem of England would be as prominent on the streets on Wednesday next as is the shamrock on March 17. The flag of St. George, presented by the society to the city last year, will be hoisted on the flag pole in front of the City Hall early in the morning."

The red roses will be sold in our streets today and on Wednesday.

Sarnia Man Is New President

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, April 22.—The Ontario Library Association elected the following officers this morning:—President, D. M. Grant, Sarnia; First Vice, Mabel Durham, Kitchener; Second Vice, W. J. Sykes, Ottawa; Secretary-treasurer, N. W. Hardy, Toronto; Councillors, W. N. Murch, St. Thomas; W. Briden, St. Catharines; Lillian Smith, Soo; C. A. Ryan, New Liskeard. T. P. Garvin, Windsor.

PROGRAMME FOR BOYS' RECEPTION

PROCESSION WILL FORM IN CENTRAL PARK AT 7:30 O'CLOCK.

The following is the order of the proceedings now arranged for welcoming home the returning men from overseas tomorrow night or on Thursday, as the case may be.

The public will be notified in the press tomorrow evening just exactly when the boys will arrive.

The Veterans, their band, the 57th and Salvation Army bands are to meet in Central Park at 7:30 p.m. At 7:45 a procession will be formed headed by the Mayor, Capt. Morrison, the City Council and other civic bodies, and parade to the G. T. R. station to meet the 8:20 train from Belleville. On the mens' arrival the procession will reform in the same order, excepting that the guests will be accommodated in conveyances following the civic representatives, and the same route will be taken back to Central Park, where his Worship Mayor Duncan will extend the city's welcome home. Cars will then be placed at the disposal of the returned men for conveyance to their several homes.

It is now estimated that about eighty men are coming on this trip.

Maritime express, from Montreal to Halifax, was derailed on the Intercolonial Railway at Kent Junction, near Moncton.

Aurele Vauillatte, the young murderer of Paul Morin and his son, Paul, at Snake River, in the fall of 1917, will not be hanged, but will spend his life in prison.

The man who lives for himself alone has not much to live for.

GOLD WATCH FOR MRS. JOHN ALLAN

LADIES OF ST. PAUL'S CHURCH APPRECIATE DEVOTED SERVICE.

A very large and delightful gathering of St. Paul's ladies were entertained by Mrs. Robert Hall at her home on Homewood avenue on Saturday afternoon to pay tribute to Mrs. John Allan who is leaving Peterborough to make her home in Brantford. Deep regret was expressed at the loss Mr. and Mrs. Allan will be to St. Paul's church and to the city.

An address was read by Mrs. R. R. Hall, after which Mrs. Moir presented, on behalf of the ladies a handsome gold wrist watch. Mrs. Allan, who was completely taken by surprise, replied with feelings, which she said, could not be expressed, thanking the ladies for the gift, not for its value, but for the love it expressed.

Refreshments were served and the ladies parted from Mrs. Allan, expressing their regret and sorrow, also good wishes for a happy future for Mr. and Mrs. Allan in their new home.

Following is a copy of the address:

Dear Mrs. Allan,—

It is with feelings of deep sorrow and with a sense of personal loss that we, a few of your friends of St. Paul's congregation, contemplate your approaching removal from our midst.

Your activities have been so numerous and varied and so generously bestowed that the loss will be felt not only by the congregation with which you have been identified, and which you have served so faithfully, but by the city in general. You have aided every good work. Your counsel and advice have been particularly helpful in the Red Cross and other patriotic endeavors during the stress of the war. Your example was always an inspiration to renewed effort.

We have appreciated your friendship and are glad that distance cannot sever the tie. We believe too that "old friends are best" and as such, we hope to be remembered by you.

As a slight token of our friendship we ask you to accept this wrist watch in the hope that it may serve to remind you of the "old friends" and "old days" in Peterborough.

Trusting that prosperity and happiness may ever attend you.

Signed on behalf of your friends—
CLARA E. HALL,
EDNA MOIR.

BREAD WAGON IN COLLISION

RAMMED BY A STREET CAR ON CHARLOTTE STREET YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

While endeavoring to cross in front of an east bound street car on Charlotte street at a point almost directly in front of Julyk's store yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock a Mother's Bread wagon was thrown against the curb and slightly damaged.

Driver and horse escaped without injury of any kind, and the wagon itself is little the worse for the accident. It was being driven east at the time the collision happened, and when the driver endeavored to cross to the other side of the street the car struck the rear of his vehicle.

Justice Logie quashed London's daylight saving bylaw on the ground that a municipality cannot override provincial laws, which fix standard time.

WEATHER FORECASTS.

THE RUSSELL-TOWNSEND CO. GET CONTRACT FOR BRIDGE

Majority Vote of Aldermen Decides to Erect the High Level Concrete Structure on Cost-Plus Basis—$249,200 Estimated Cost and Profit—Contractors Ready to Start in Few Days—Will Guarantee Centre Span.

The City's Board of Works decided at twenty minutes to two this morning to erect a concrete bridge over the river at Hunter street, in accordance with the original plans for a double track roadway, but eliminating all panels beneath the floor of the bridge, the chipped granite finish granite masonry, sidewalks over loose fill, and shortening approaches to the bridge to allow of a four per cent grade, the work was let to the Russell-Townsend Co., of Toronto, on a plus-cost estimate basis of $249,200.

A plus cost price means that the company estimate that the work will cost so much, to which they add their commission and then submit the tender. Should the work run over estimated amount, the city will have to pay the extra cost, with commission, should it cost less the city will have the advantage. There are no guarantees in such an estimate except that plans and specifications shall be followed and the work was done. But the contractor's reputation is at stake and in this instance the books of the Russel-Townsend people are open for inspection and revelation of the fact that they have always been within their estimates excepting in one instance.

Not Afraid of Big Arch

Mr. Townsend last night said he would be tickled to death to build the huge centre span, of which so many people are talking pessimistically, and in fact will guarantee its construction in his firm's contract.

He agreed to move to either side the present bridge for traffic while the new one is being built for a sum of $1,000. He also expressed confidence in erecting all the structure excepting the centre span this year, the big arch would be proceeded with early next spring.

Start in Three Days

Mr. Townsend declared that he could have his plant on the job in three days, and get busy at once. The firm is to pay the prevailing wages in town. "We," he said, "consciously believe the bridge can be done for our estimated price, and in fact, will back our reputation on it."

Saving in Cement

Russell, one of the successful bidders, is a large shareholders in a big Cement Manufacturing Firm, and the tenderers are figuring on using his company's cement at wholesale prices. This would effect a saving of $2,000 which would go to local dealers were the cement got through them. However should council press for the cement being ordered through local men, he would not object. It was up to the city to say whether $2,000 should be saved in cement or not.

Some aldermen thought local dealers should have the supplying of the cement; but his worship did not see why any ratepayers should be allowed on a public structure $2,000 for simply placing an order for cement to be shipped directly to the work. His Worship eventually sustained.

Every Member Present

The Board of Works is composed of the whole Council— and every member was in his place last night, but all are not in harmony with the present termination of the bridge problem.

The resolution which clinched matters by accepting the Russel-Townsend proposition was moved by Ald. Murray and Garside. It went to the Board twice before any decision at all could be reached. The Aldermen shied at voting at all, and the first count showed 3 for and 2 against, the other members keeping their hands out of sight. Subsequently however an affirmative vote of 6 to 4 was reached. The following are the yeas: Aldermen Turner, Edgar, Morrison, Murray, Garside and the Mayor. No hands were elevated in response to chairman Ald. Phelan's call for contrary vote and the motion was declared carried.

Ald. Hamilton and Taylor moved for an adjournment to allow of further consideration, but the motion was lost on a vote of 4 to 6.

Ald. McIntyre placed himself on record as opposing any cost plus proposition, seconded by Ald. Gainey: "That the lowest tender on a lump sum contract for a wide bridge with reductions specified, be accepted. This was lost.

Repudiates Own Decision

Ald. Phelan expressed deep annoyance that while the Board at last meeting has definitely decided not to consider any tenders but those on a lump sum basis, the majority were tonight repudiating their own previous convictions.

Must Furnish Bonds

The Russel-Townsend people in signing the agreement with the city must guarantee the centre arch, and compliance with all details in the specifications. They must also give bonds for satisfactory construction.

PLANS FLIGHT TO THE SOUTH POLE

ANOTHER ANTARCTIC EXPEDITION TO LEAVE ENGLAND IN JUNE, 1920.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, April 23.—Another Antarctic expedition is being prepared for, according to a statement printed in the morning newspapers. Jno. Cope, biologist with the British Antarctic expedition of 1914-1917, will be the leader, and he expects the expedition to start in June, 1920. He proposes, besides carrying on scientific investigations, to ascertain the extent of mineral and other valuable deposits on the Antarctic continent. He has secured the famous exploration ship Terra Nova, and itneads to take an airplane for surveying the interior of the continent. He hopes also to make a flight to the South Pole.

VETERANS TURN SCALE

Wellington, N. Z., April 23.—The majority against prohibition in the New Zealand plebiscite is now placed at 1,500 by official figures. The soldiers' vote turned the scale.

Fire destroyed the Louisville, Ky., Cotton Seed Oil Company's plant. Loss $500,000.

TURKISH STORY NOT CONFIRMED

FEW BELIEVE A SOVIET GOVERNMENT HAS REPLACED OLD REGIME.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, April 23.—The rumor that a soviet government has been set up in Turkey remains entirely without confirmation, and is now treated with considerable incredulity. It is pointed out that the source of news, Odessa, is in the hands of the Bolshik, and that British warships at Constantinople, being equipped with wireless plants, might have been expected to report the fact, if the rumor was true, but nothing has been heard from the fleet.

Two Found Dead In Montreal Hotel

Hamburg Latest Scene of Riots

MOB ATTACK POLICE AND ONE OFFICER IS KILLED IN FIGHT.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, April 23.—There have been serious disturbances at Hamburg during the week-end. The mob plundered the harbor quarter and clashed with the police, several people being killed and wounded. A despatch to the Vorwaerts says there was a "regular battle" in the suburo of St. Pauli, west of the city, on Saturday. A policeman was killed and several others wounded, but the rioters suffered worse than the officers. Rioting was renewed today, arms being distributed to the mobs in St Pauli. Several police depots were attacked and one was captured by the mobs.

60 Miles an Hour On Aylmer Street

IS SPEED AT WHICH FIRE TRUCK IS REPORTED TO TRAVEL.

In the Board of Works last evening Ald. Edgar reported that complaints are made of the fire truck travelling up and down Aylmer street at the rate of 60 miles an hour on trial runs. This will be looked into by Chairman Morrison of the Fire, Water and Light Committee.

The engineer reported the estimated cost of paving Water street from Charlotte street to King and along King and George street as $7,940.

Ald. Turner and Morrison moved that notice be given to have this area with concrete, which will effect a saving of about $2,000 from the above figure for asphaltic concrete. This carried.

Work For Men.

The request of the Hydro-Electric Commission to lay considerable gas main extensions was granted, the work to be done under the supervision of the engineer.

Cutting Down Trees.

A small army of citizens applied for permission to cut down trees, and on recommendation of the engineer, the requests were granted.

Temporary Bridge.

A largely signed petition asked that that temporary bridge accommodation be provided while the high-level structure is being built. This is provided for in contract for bridge let last evening.

Italian Problem Awaits Solution

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 23.—An early settlement of the Italian difficulty is thought to be improbable, with Premier Orlando still absent. Premiers Lloyd George, Clemenceau and President Wilson resumed this morning the consideration of the questions concerning China and Japan.

WILSON OPPOSES ITALY'S CLAIMS

PRESIDENT EXPLAINS HIS REASONS FOR TAKING HIS PRESENT ATTITUDE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 23.—In a statement issued by President Wilson explaining his position on the Adriatic question, he declares that Fiume cannot become part of Italy. The President points out that every condition concerning the Adriatic settlement has been changed since Italy entered the war upon the promises of the pact of London. The Austro-Hungarian empire having disappeared, he notes that new states have been created for which Fiume is a natural outlet to the sea. The President also contends that the strategic necessity pleaded in behalf of Italy's claim to the Dalmatian islands no longer prevails, as the Austrian naval menace has ceased to exist.

ANARCHY REIGNS IN BUDAPEST

CITY IS PASSING THROUGH THE WORST CRISIS SINCE TROUBLE STARTED.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Budapest, April 23.—The city is going through a crisis worse than that of April 2. There is apprehension that there will be a violent swing to anarchy, with the socialists losing control to the Bolshevik leaders like Bela Hun and the chiefs of the Red Guard. Looting, which hitherto has been held in check or legalized as "nationalization of property," and the assassination of old political leaders and the aristocracy, are feared.

Reports are current that the Roumanians and Czechs have received orders from the Allies to march on Budapest. It is felt, however, that the Roumanians are advancing merely to occupy the territories set aside for them by the Allied note of March 20. The fact that the Communists are unable to prevent the Alies from occupying the districs involved is weakening the influence of Bela Hun and is causing violent hatred against the Allies among the Hungarians.

Belgic Brings Veterans Home

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Halifax, N.S., April 23.—The White Star liner, Belgic, with 82 officers and 3,165 of other ranks, returning Canadian expeditionary force, docked at 9 o'clock this morning.

On board were the second Canadian General Hospital, Second Clearing Hospital, Third and Seventh Canadian Stationary Hospitals, Canadian Light Horse and fire army troop companies of skilled mechanics, the First Kingston, Second London, and Third Toronto beig included. Lt.-Col. Stanford Smith commands the light horse and Lt.-Col Reason is senior medical officer aboard.

VETERANS TO BE WELCOMED HOME

EIGHTY WHO CROSSED ON OLYMPIC WILL ARRIVE TOMORROW NIGHT.

Eighty returning soldiers for this city who arrived on the Olympic will reach Peterborough on the 8.26 Grand Trunk train tomorrow evening according to a telegram received by Mayor Duncan this afternoon, from the Registration Bureau at Kingston. The message is published below:

"Troops from the Olympic for your town arrive here (Kingston) at 6 o'clock tonight, and will leave at 3.10 G. T. R. regular Thursday afternoon."

According to this telegram the men will reach Peterborough via the 8.26 G. T. R. as stated above.

A reception for the veterans has been arranged in Central Park where they will be taken by means of 25 automobiles which the Auto Association are to supply. Following a brief civic welcome they will be taken to their homes.

ITALIAN PREMIER IS READY TO BREAK WITH THE ALLIES

Orlando Threatens to Return to Italy Unless Claim is Allowed

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 23.—Premier Orlando threatens to return to Italy today unless there is a satisfactory adjustment of the Fiume and Dalmatian questions. Premier Lloyd George is tryin to persuade the Italian leader to remain in Paris longer while he continues his efforts to reconcile the opposing viewpoints. It became known today that Lloyd George tried unsuccessfully during the discussion last night to find a basis for an agreement between the differing viewpoints of Wilson and Orlando.

Compromise Regarded.

One compromise proposed to the Italians making provision for the recognition of their claim to Fiume in exchange for the abandonment of their claim to the Dalmatian coast, was rejected.

Although the Italian peace conference delegation made no official statement on the subject, a member of the delegation told the Associated Press that it considered it useless for the Italian delegates to take part in further conferences unless the allies were willing to grant their request.

The Italians remain inflexible in their determination to be allotted all the territory granted them under the pact of London, with Fiume in addition.

Indignant at Allies.

The indignation of the Italian delegation is as strong against the British and French as against the Americans and after the failure of Premier Orlando again to appear at the meeting of the council of four, the break between the Italians and the allies became well defined.

In the meantime Premiers Lloyd George and Clemenceau and President Wilson are busily considering the question of the future of Kiaochau with Baron Makino and Viscount Chinda of the Japanese delegation.

The American delegates declare that President Wilson is determined not to yield on the Fiume question. As America was not a party to the London treaty the president refuses to discuss controversies arising over the Dalmatian coast and other countries covered by the secret treaty signed by Italy France and Great Britain.

Meeting Was Unsatisfactory.

It was learned that it was at the suggestion of the Italian delegation that President Wilson remained away from the meeting Monday morning when Premiers Lloyd George, Clemenceau and Orlando and Foreign Minister Sonnino discussed the London pact the meeting between the representatives of the three powers, it is understood, was extremely unsatisfactory as Italy insisted that the London treaty should not be effected by her subsequent agreement to President Wilson's fourteen points, and demanded the literal fulfilment of the promises made her previously.

URAL COSSACKS ARE IN SIBERIA

RUSSIAN OFFICIAL STATEMENT SAYS BOLSHEVIKI ARE LOSING GROUND.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, April 23.—Ural Cossack troops, apparently acting in conjunction with the Siberian forces of Admiral Kolchak, have begun an offensive in the region of Uralsk, southeastern Russia, and have captured several villages west of Uralsk. A Russian statement of April 22, admitting the progress of Ural Cossack says that further north the Bolsheviki have carried out retirements, owing to enemy pressure.

Krasnoiarsk, Siberia, April 23.—Fighting proceeds daily east of here in the vicinity of Taished and Yurd, with a corps of Bolsheviks endeavoring to cut the railway line. Enemy ambushed a force of 200 Russians last Thursday and but eighty men returned to the base. Trails leading to Bolshevik villages are commanded by machine gun nests and Russians cannot advance in the deep snow through the woods. The railway line is strongly held by Serbs and Czechs with field guns.

Italy's Quarrel With Her Allies

Paris, April 23.—The facts of the deadlock over the Italian claims in the Adriatic, according to the Petit Parisien, are as follows:

President Wilson proposed that Fiume, which is not mentioned in the treaty of London, shoul dbe a free city, but attached to the Jugo Slav customs system and, further, that the London treaty should be subjected to a total revision. Italy refused to accept this proposal, whereupon President Wilson withdrew, leaving Italy alone with the representatives of the other signatories of the treaty. During the meetings of the representatives of the signatories, both Premier Orlando and Foreign Minister Sonnino were most conciliatory, Orlando especially having asked repeatedly on what conditions France and Great Britain would consent to give Fiume to Italy.

Baron Sonnino said he was ready to discuss a revision of the London treaty, however, President Wilson who, while he was not present at the meetings, kept in touch with them, then wanted to reopen the question of the treaty of London, but without joining the revision to the fate of Fiume.

President Wilson has receded from receded from his proposal to make Fiume a free city and is inclined to give it absolutely to the Jugo-Slavs. Premiers Lloyd George and Clemenceau are understood to be ready to adhere purely and simply to the treaty of London, at the same time seeking a means of conciliation.

MOTORISTS HAD NARROW ESCAPE FROM DROWNING

Driver Lost Control and Car Backed into the River on Lakefield Road.

A motor party had a narrow escape from drowning yesterday afternoon when the automobile, in which they were travelling, backed over the crest of the Lakefield road at a point just below the pump house and the brakes refusing to hold the machine upon the steep slope the car went backwards into the river where it came to a standstill with the water up to the necks of the occupants.

Mr. and Mrs. Finlay, of Cavan, a little boy and two other ladies, made up the party, which left the city about 5.30 in a Ford car, intending to visit the home of Mr. White.

Upon reaching a point just below the pump house they met some friends in a motor car and attempted to turn intending to follow them to the city.

In making the turn Mr. Finlay lost control of the car which started to back down the river bank. The brakes would not hold the machine and it continued its course until the water was level with the top of the cowling and the occupants were immersed up to their necks in the water, which at this point flows very fast.

The women and little boy were removed to the shore upon the backs of the men and the car was pulled from the water by means of a cable. It was then taken to a garage for repairs.

The occupants of the car were taken to the home of Mr. Harry Mitchell where everything was done to restore them after their terrible experience.

ENEMY ALIENS LOSE R. R. STOCK

C. P. R. HOLDINGS WORTH MILLIONS TRANSFERRED TO FINANCE MINISTER.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, April 23.—Justice Duclos this morning issued an order transferring stock in the Canadian Pacific Railway Company to the value of $22,600,000 held in New York on behalf of enemy aliens to the Finance Minister of Canada.

A Youngstown, O., woman has entered suit to recover her husband's alleged gambling losses of $5,425.

AUTO CRASHES INTO HOUSE ON WATER ST. YESTERDAY

Car Was in Charge the of J. Davidson Who Was Learning to Run It.

There was five minutes of wild excitement yesterday afternoon when a car in charge of Chauffeur Bill Hickey and driven by James Davidson of Smith smashed into a brick house at the corner of Argyle and Water streets.

Hickey was apparently demonstrating the automobile and had just given over the wheel to Mr. Davidson, who was learning to handle it.

In some manner he lost control of the machine and it made a dash for the brick residence of Mr. N. O'Toole, 336 Water street, smashing through the post and rail of the verandah and breaking two holes through the brick wall with the ends of the chassis. The plaster upon the parlor wall of the house was knocked off at the point where the car had collided with the side of the building.

No one was injured, although Mrs. O'Toole had removed a baby from the verandah where it had been sitting in the perambulator just twenty minutes before the accident occurred. The car was not seriously damaged, as it proceeded on its way on its own power.

Allies Will Meet Germans April 28

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 23. — The German government has been informed by the Allied Governments that they are ready to receive the German delegates at Versailles on April 25.

Time Is Too Short For Preparation

COUNTY CANNOT TAKE PART IN THE BANQUET TO THE VETERANS.

City Clerk Armstrong has received from Warden McIntosh the following letter, which carries its own explanation:

Dear Sir,—

Kindly convey to the Mayor and Council my sincere regrets that the County cannot participate in giving a banquet to the 93rd returned veterans due to limit of time to confer with such veterans throughout the various municipalities and members of the County Council.

Respectfully yours,
JOHN McINTOSH, Warden.

EX-ALDERMAN MURRAY.

ONE OF THE FOUR Labor men elected to the City Council last January can now be referred to as above, in the past tense, as his resignation is already in the hands of the proper civic officials, and its acceptance at the next regular meeting of the Council is a foregone conclusion. By the failure of his health, ex-Ald. Murray has been obliged to retire from office and will make his future home in the old land.

Ex-Ald. Murray is a man of few words. It is only those who know him intimately, who have any idea of how much he prized the position of trust in which he was placed, his immediate associates first proposing him for the honor. His sense of responsibility, too, was unlimited. According to his own ideas, he had planned great things for the benefit, not of the particular class which he more directly represented but for the city as a whole. His instinct for fair dealing was pre-eminent as his brief record in the City Council demonstrated. As fuel commissioner, and later as alderman, it is just possible that the experience, the meeting with men who did not always think as he did, opened his eyes to the fact that the world was, after all, not so badly out of joint, and that the two great classes of humanity were really not so far apart as he may have imagined earlier in his career. His associates in the Council were coming more and more to respect his judgment and high hopes were entertained that he would develop into a valued civic servant.

On a former occasion The Review said that ex-Ald. Murray was endowed with a superlative sense of honor, and no phrase that we can evolve more fittingly describes him. It was this sense of honor that induced him to offer to give up the position he prized so highly when he found immediately after the election that a trifling technicality stood between him and the office. He qualified as alderman only after he had been assured that there was no legal barrier. It is the same sense of honor that induces him to retire now. In spite of his broken health he could have, if so minded, remained in the position and still acted as alderman, but he believed that any man who held a public trust should give the people the service of which only a vigorous man is capable.

Ex-Ald. Murray in his own particular sphere, before he was thought of in connection with public place, was active on behalf of the class in which he moved, and the highest praise that can be spoken of him is the fact that he retained the confidence and esteem of those who knew him best up to the very last.

WHEN IS A MAN DRUNK?

THE LEXICOGRAPHERS, rushing in where the legislators so far have refused to tread, undertake to give a description, or at least a general idea, of when it is proper to regard a man as intoxicated. It is unfortunate that there is no legal definition of the condition to which so many men are prone. It would at least give the lawyers a definite starting point for an argument and would save a multitude of more or less expert testimony by witnesses, every one of whom has his own idea on the subject.

After offering a number of suggestions on this topic, Noah Webster gets down to something like rock bottom facts when he intimates that a man is in a legal, or other, sense intoxicated when he is overcome by strong drink. Even this definition is not altogether satisfactory, seeing that it implies log-like slumber, but such somnolence is not unusual even among the abstainers.

There are incidents and definitions bearing upon this subject of inebriety that have become historic even if they are not accepted as common law precedents. For example, there is the laird of the story who, falling into the river while on his way home from a gathering of convivial spirits, laughed at the very idea of an accident to himself and argued with his serving man, in attendance upon him, that it was impossible for a person to be in two positions at one and the same time, imagining himself still on dry land. A celebrated Irish bon vivant, seeing a friend attempting to light his cigar at the water tap, admitted that he had gone too far in his libations. Another unofficial authority asserts that no man can be regarded as the victim of drink so long as he is able to maintain a supine position without reaching out for support.

In these days of prohibition, with fines increased by law as an inducement to men to remain sober, there should be something upon which a presiding magistrate can base his opinions in forming a judgment when a defendant is before him on a charge of excessive indulgence. No two policemen hold the same views. With some constables the smell of liquor on a man's breath is regarded as sufficient evidence against him. With others, a hostile attitude assumed by a citizen is convincing proof that he is inspired by potations. Eye-witnesses of the arrest, required to testify, are as a rule equally at sea, and it seems unjust to punish any man on testimony so much at variance. Certainly it is not customary to convict a defendant on more serious charges unless there is at least a semblance of unanimity in what the witnesses relate under oath.

But every day reveals new and hitherto undreamed-of incongruities in the law. Under the Ontario Temperance Act the minimum fine for drunkenness is set at $10 with costs added. The man so punished may have been attempting to make his way along the street, pursuing a devious course, but really harming no one. On the other hand, it would appear that a man at the wheel of an auto can negotiate the city streets to the imminent danger of innocent pedestrians and the drivers of other vehicles, that he may figure in a collision, and then escape with a mere $5 fine. Yet that seems to be the law despite the fact that the man who, while intoxicated, attempts to drive a car is a menace to humanity.

THE TARIFF AS A NATION BUILDER.

IT IS ALTOGETHER improbable that such a concern as the Stickney Motor Co., Ltd., would ever have located in Peterborough or that the company would ever have been organized but for the protection afforded by the Canadian tariff. Here is an industry which will give employment, skilled and remunerative, for at least fifty men on the start, with every prospect of an early increase, and the market for the products grows wider. Not only will the home but the foreign trade be supplied, and the city and the workingmen will reap the benefit.

There is a constantly increasing demand for farm tractors in Canada, and the war-wasted countries of Europe will afford a market for the same products. How much better to have these tractors manufactured in Canada for Canadian farmers, by Canadian workingmen, than to have them supplied by the United States. And in the face of this fact there are some who urge that all trade restrictions be removed and that the already established industries in the United States be given a practical monopoly of the Canadian market.

The manufacturers of Canada and elsewhere have not lost faith in the sanity of Canadian legislators and voters, in spite of the present artisan agitation for free trade. This country is not to be plunged into industrial inertia; national bankruptcy is not to be courted, to give effect to the theories of the politicians and the mistaught professors of political economy. Indications of a revival of manufacturing with the return of peace are not lacking. The new industry for Peterborough is one sign. An American firm, the Chase Tractor Co., is to establish a gigantic plant in Toronto for the manufacture of farm tractors. The soil of the West that produces the best grade of wheat in the world will be broken by tractor plows and worked by other implements made in Canada. Western wheat will be harvested with Canadian binders, threshed with machines made in Canada, just as it will be shipped to the seaboard on Canadian railways.

There are branches of American industries in Peterborough——and there are none better of their class anywhere in Canad—whose location here can be crediter to the Canadian tariff. There are native industries whose prosperity depends on the same fiscal policy. The tariff brought the International Harvester works and scores of other American industries to Hamilton. The very saws that are used by the lumbermen of Canada today are manufactured in this country instead of being imported.

This of all times is not opportune for the serious consideration of free trade, for that is what the agitation in the West would eventually lead to, even if by gradual process. The world, wasted by four years of war, is to be remade. It would be national suicide to pass up the industrial opportunity that awaits this country.

THE CHICAGO NEWS says that perhaps baseball can re-establish a fraction of its old charm by getting up some sort of a revolution. If memory serves us, all uprisings in the national pastime in years past never developed beyond the stage of rebellion.

MAKING AND BREAKING WILLS.

THE LATE F. W. WOOLWORTH, originator of the five and ten-cent stores, one of which is established in this city, accumulated the colossal fortune of sixty-five million dollars. Some time ago he made a will, and, like the majority of men who, while still in health, devise their possessions, probably had no idea of dying for years to come. It transpires that some of the bequests made by the late Mr. Woolworth are now impossible, and that he never provided a remedy by adding codicils to his testament. The enormous fortune of the late merchant, accumulated by the labor of years is to be made a matter of litigation. It is altogether likely that when the courts get through with the case, not one-tenth of the fortune will go to the parties mentioned by the testator.

It has become a matter of legal history that even few lawyers can draw up a will that will stand the test. There have been noted examples of this. The late Samuel J. Tilden, at one time candidate for President of the United States, was regarded as the leader of the American bar in his time. He bequeathed a fortune of five million dollars, and his holograph will was contested. The highest court in the nation found that some of the trusts established by that will were unconstitutional. Of the Tilden fortune, only a little over one-third eventually went to the beneficiaries mentioned by the testator.

The late Cornelius Vanderbilt had a number of sons, one of whom had offended his father by the heinous offence of marrying a lady a few years the young man's senior. The fact that the bride was a member of one of the best families in New York did not appease the father. In his will he cut this son off with a scant million dollars, only a fraction of what was left to each of the others. The son threatened to break the will, and to avoid litigation the rest of the family wisely agreed to an equitable division of the estate, so that the post-mortem aims of another testator were frustrated. There have been wills made in Peterborough litigation over which was avoided only by a similar agreement.

The late James J. Hill, the American railway king of Canadian nativity, purposely failed to make a will, following the custom of so many wealthy men of the United States, who prefer to have their money go to the heirs designated by law, thus rendering impossible any contest.

Only the other day a farmer near London disinherited a son for no other given reason than the fact that the young man used tobacco. It is hard to believe that Canadian courts will recognize such an example of parental displeasure carried even to the death. Makers of wills have been known to rupture family ties on no more substantial grounds. There may be nothing to prevent a man working unwarranted spite upon his friends and relatives while breath is left him, but the power to work malice should cease with life. The State gives a man protection in the holding of property, but no man should insist upon controlling even a part of the affairs of the universe long after he has returned to dust.

"BY WATERS OF BABYLON"

ARMENIANS SUFFERED MORE THAN CAPTIVE JEWISH EXILES WHO WEPT BY HISTORIC STREAMS.

By the waters of Babylon the captive Jewish exiles "sat them down and wept" when Babylonia was a great power subjugating all the little nations of Western Asia. By the waters of Babylon Armenian exiles whose fate has been far more tragic and horrible than that of the Israelites of the Captivity, have sat down in a misery too great for tears.

A New Cyrus the Great.

But their oppressors have been conquered by a new Cyrus the Great and modern Ezras have arisen to restore them to their distant homes. Refugee camps have been established at certain centres along the route over which these destitute wanderers tramp wearily back towards their northern villages. Here they rest a day, are fed and bathed and disinfected, and the sick are cared for.

The Camp at Bagdad.

Outside the city of Bagdad not far from ancient "Babylon the Great" is a camp where the British authorities are sheltering in tents, feeding and caring for medically forty thousand destitute refugees, while representatives of the American Committee for Relief in the Near East carry on an industrial relief work, giving employment fitted to his capacity to every man physically able to work. Into an orphanage are gathered 700 children uncared for and unclaimed by anyone.

The Mesopotamian Campaign.

The Mesopotamian campaign will not be truly ended until these refugees between the two great rivers are repatriated and permanently rehabilitated. Easter, 1919, sees this task begun. Will Easter, 1920, see it well on its way to accomplishment?

History's Grim Pageantry.

When the first Assyrian empire was at the height of its magnificence and power there was a monarchy rivalling it in splendor in the north among the mountains of Ararat. This was the kingdom of Proto-Armenians, as Professor Sayce calls them —the forerunners of the present day Armenians whose ancestors conquered them, intermarried with them and took over their culture as well as their cities. And of this monarchy the city of Van, still standing and still beautiful, was the capital.

Armenians Still a Vital Race.

Not one trace of the great Assyrian kingdom or its people remains; but the Armenians, though persecuted and oppressed for centuries, are still a vital, heroic race, and those who have survived the massacres and deportations of the last four years believe they are to build up a new and free Armenia.

Near Nineveh.

Multitudes of them are now herded in the streets of Mosul, the ancient Nineveh, just across the river from its excavated ruins. They are on their way home from exile, though sick, weak and starving, so that many will die by the roadside before arriving at the goal of their homesick dreams. But Easter, 1919, is bringing them a new, a revivifying hope and the help of strong hands and generous hearts from across the sea.

Where Children Are Starving.

In Jerusalem, where Christ rose triumphant from the tomb two thousand years ago, today are seen "everywhere children starving — starving children in the arms of mothers who have no food to give them, sick children who have tramped all the way from Asia Minor through the desert; naked children shivering with malaria and burning with typhus."

Relief workers with the spirit of Christ within them are trying to reach these children. Orphanages have been started where some of them are fed and clothed and trained to self-support, day nurseries, where the little ones are cared for while the mothers are earning their living by the industries organised by the relief workers. There are so many who have not been reached—what a sorrowful Easter theirs must have been.

Children of Lebanon.

Solomon's beautiful temple in Jerusalem was called the "House of the Forest of Lebanon" because it was built of the famous "cedars of Lebanon," sent him by the king of Tyre, to whom they belonged. Jerusalem was then at the height of its glory and Israel's sister kingdom, Tyre, also at the zenith of its prosperity, rich with a "multitude of all kinds of riches."

Lebanon Now.

"Nearly one-half of the total population of 127 villages is dead. Of the remaining 64,972 residents of these villages, 26,181 are in absolute need of help. The total number of orphans needing help is 6,642." This is the official report of the American commission.

A "House of Lebanon."

It is a great orphanage among these mountains. The Moslems, strange to say, started this orphanage in the building of a Christian college they had seized. They had spared only the younger children of murdered Syrians and deported Armenians, given them shelter, one coarse garment each, and just enough food to sustain life, evidently intending to rear them as Mohammedans. But at the coming of General Allenby and the British forces the Turks fled.

Starving for Years!

The orphanage was at once taken over by American relief workers, and is supported by the American committee for relief in the Near East. And now, after years of being always hungry, after nearly starving to death, these children have all they can eat. They are clean, they have tops and rag dolls to play with; they have work to do and lessons to learn, and are so happy this Easter of 1919 after all they have suffered. But they are only 644 out of more than six thousand in the Lebanon district alone who are still homeless and hungry.

TO-DAY'S STORY

The office force always suspected that Mike, the window washer, had some sorrow in his life. He had a face like a lost dog and as he washed on the fifteenth floor windows he invariably hummed a sorrowful tune. So the stenographer asked him how he hapened to break into the window cleaning business.

"You're right, ma'am," he said, "I don't belong in this lambasted profession that don't get me more'n $2 a day. I ought to be doin' nice refined work. But I was married once. Oh, I had a fine wife.

"Of course though she had her faults. One o' them there faults is why I'm washin' windows today instead o' sittin' at a swell mahogany desk.

"My wife was always good to me—too good. She used to fill my pipe for me at night when I got home an' have an easy chair pulled up in front of the old grate, and I used to sit there and dream. I always had high-an'-mighty dreams, but them dreams wasn't a' washin' windows, I'd be sittin' there meditatin' about how I was going to make a fortune like Rockefeller and my wife would come in and start telling me all the things that happened all day—all the sad things.

"At first, I didn't mind it because I knew she didn't have nobody to tell her troubles to durin' the day—leastways, not after she got sore at the janitor's wife—and it must have been a relief for her to tell 'em to me, so I let here tell 'em.

"But too much of a good thing is enough for some people, and it wasn't helpin' me none to have her always talkin' like the Book of Job when I should be meditatin'. So I started stayin' away from home o'nights and goin' over to the Y.M.C.A. She heard about it the fourth night and came and took me home.

"Them days I was makin' artificial ice for a concern that was sellin' the stuff for the real thing, an' my wife got to comin' around the factory an' disturbin' my work. So I quit that job and got another. She hunted me out and bothered me so I got nervous and quit again.

"Once I joined a church where they had an elegant men's room where I thought I could be alone, but my wife did the Sherlock Holmes stuff and I had to go back home. I tried every way to sneak away from her, but she always found me.

"Well, one day an uncle of hers dies and leaves her $340, and so I takes her to Washington, D.C., to show her a good time. We goes up the Washington monument, which is 1,000 feet high or so, and she gets scared. She never can look out of high windows, she tells me; she gets dizzy and loses her sense of speech.

"That gives me an idea, an' I hustled over and started a window washin' bureau—high buildings a specialty. I knew she wouldn't follow me up to places like this. Its nice clean work an' it gives me a chance to meditate."

REQUIRE BAKERS TO WRAP BREAD

NEW ORDER HAS BEEN ISSUED BY BOARD OF HEALTH.

There was a meeting of the Board of Health held yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

Dr. Amys, the Medical Officer of Health urged that the bakeries of the city be requested to wrap their bread. This will be done.

A motion was passed urging the City Council to pass a by-law making it illegal for bakers to use the front doors in their wagons in handling bread and to prohibit the carrying of bread in baskets in the front of the vehicle.

This action comes as a result of complaints that horse hair flying from the horse lodges on the bread if it is carried in front or if the front doors are used as a means of taking it from the wagon.

The Secretary was instructed to advertise for tenders for the painting of the exterior of the Isolation hospital. Specifications will be prepared by Mayor Duncan and Mr. Murtey.

The question of keeping pigs in the city was discussed. Dr. Amys stated that he did not interfere unless a nuisance was created whereupon he at once took measures to put a stop to it. The matter was left in that way.

A motion was passed asking the City Council to have the By-law granting licenses to milk dealers changed so as to make it necessary that their name appear on the rigs in which their milk is being delivered. This action was taken upon the request of Sanitary Inspector Stapleton.

The question of stables which are not kept in a sanitary condition in the country and in which cows which supply milk for consumption in the city are kept will be taken up with the city solicitor who will advise the Board of Health what is the best action to take.

Number of patients in House, March 1st—8.

Scarlet fever 1, Diphtheria 7.

Number of patients admitted during month—15.

Scarlet fever 5, diphtheria 10.

City Cases

Scarlet fever 5, Diphtheria 18.

Number of patients discharged during month—15.

Scarlet fever 5, Diphtheria 3.

SHOULD WOMEN PROPOSE?

MARY HOWE BELIEVES THAT THE OLD ORDER OF THINGS SHOULD BE REVERSED.

(By Mary Howe.)

It is a subject that recurs from time to time as a matter for discussion and one is often met with the answer "Why, they do."

But should the right of women to propose be accepted as such by Society in general is another thing altogether.

A woman is tremendously handicapped in marital affairs by the passive position that she is supposed to assume towards the actual declaration. She may hunt a man or lead a man or beguile a man. Society recognizes her right in this respect as long as it is not done in too obvious a manner, but she may not honestly tell him that she desires to marry him.

She is nominally free to exercise the right of refusal but in reality that freedom puts her in a merely negative position. Bernard Shaw has attempted to prove in various of his works, more particularly in "Man and Superman" that woman can always marry the man she wants. This is not true. Woman can generally marry a man, but in how many cases can she marry the one she really loves?

A woman may take a certain amount of pleasure in leading men along, but do not mean very much to her, but often and often when women love they cannot bring themselves to employ any arts, or weave any spells and occasionally appear at their very worst in the presence of their hero. The instinct to hide and cherish the wonderful knowledge from himself especially is strong and were she free to express it she would probably be more natural and a great many tragedies might be averted.

There are so many complaints against the declining rate of marriages, but is not the present system of approaching marriage rather to blame? Women nowadays are not so economically dependent on men as they used to be and in consequence they do not rush into marriage with just anyone as a means of support as in the old days. They must therefore have a great inducement before they will take on the yoke, for that it is as long as the marriage laws remain in their present state. Now when the greatest inducement, true love, cannot be theirs is it natural to expect that they will from a sense of duty to the country's future or to their function as the-ought-to-be-mothers, accept the position very easily."

Then again we women are always being told that as the mothers and preservers of the race we have to live highly virtuous lives for the sake of [illegible] not allowed to openly chose the men whom we care for sufficiently to make the fathers of that possible generation. We can only avoid taking the wrong ones and that is a very negative affair.

The old Matriarchate gave the woman precedence in the matter of descent and inheritance, they were the sole relatives of their children and the only centre of any such family life as existed.

The primitive peoples had more common sense than we the civilized.

As long as the fact of entering into a marriage contract presupposes the necessity for a woman to become a mother, she ought to have the choosing of her husband from start to finish. Why should we be supposed to spend years of careful and virtuous living on the chance of becoming the mothers of children that may never be born and then perhaps have to accept as possible fathers of these same possible children men who have "lived hard" (to put it mildly) and are no more fitted to be fathers than are the hardened prostitutes fit to become mothers. Yet that is the position today.

Marriage is a contract in which man and woman should have equal responsibilities, and there is nothing immodest in a woman considering every point of view before deciding on the suitability of a husband.

If the old order could be changed entirely and only women were allowed to propose for a generation or two it might be a great surprise to the male sex when they saw what women really thought of them, the professional lady-killed and "fascinating devil" would soon find themselves out of fashion and the modest clean-living strong man with a few boyish ideals left in him would hold the greater sway.

For Your Convenience

THE saving of the extra steps and extra motions has been shown to be a big thing in the business world. Efficiency engineers at fancy salaries have been hired to study the most convenient ways of getting work done. The biggest industries have proved that convenience pays, and it is the same in the household.

EDDY'S MATCHES & Indurated Fibreware

enable the housewife to save many extra steps and extra motions which may be unnoticed at the time, but which require time and energy just the same.

Eddy's Washtubs and Pails are easier to lift, easier to move, and keep the water hot longer. Eddy's Matches are safe, reliable and non-poisonous. They have been standard in Canada since 1851.

CONDITIONS ON ONTARIO FARMS

Seeding has been largely prevented by the frequent rains of the past week or two, and the cool weather has been delaying growth. However, early sown spring wheat and oats are reported to be above ground in some of the Lake Erie counties.

Fall wheat so far is practically uninjured, except on badly drained land, and it promises to be a record crop. Clover has not done so well having suffered more or less from heaving in some localities, although many fine fields are also reported. Alfalfa looks to be in fair condition All these crops have been much helped by the rains which have recently prevailed.

Orchards have suffered very little from winter injury. Some Fruit growers have already started their first spraying for the season and several representatives predict that orchards will receive more care than usual this year.

Prince Edward speaks of an increased acreage of nearly all canning crops, especially of peas, which will also be grown for seed.

Well finished cattle are scarce and bad roads have also hindered marketing. Prices for good beef animals have ranged from 14c to 15c a lb. Dairy cattle continue at a premium Welland states that "Any sort of a cow will bring $100 while good ones are ranging from $200 to $250." Northumberland reports that several choice young cows have gone into the hands of new breeders at $500 each. In Halton a herd of pure-bred but untested Holstein cows sold at a recent sale, brought an average of $300 while calves and yearlings averaged $11.

Milk is in fair quantity for the time of year, and is in good demand. Oxford has been paying $2.90 a cwt. for milk during April. Butter fat has commanded from 60c to 65c a lb in some creameries. Two new milk condensaries are being started in Prince Edward County.

Horse raisers are now getting better prices for their animals. Dufferin and Victoria reporting some sales as high as $300.

Prices for hogs, according to representatives, range from $20.25 to $21.00 a cwt.

Two more live stock shipping clubs have been organized in Wellington and all are declared to be operating satisfactorily.

Farm labor is reported to be scarce in almost every section of the Province. Welland reports prices as running from $30 to $50 with board, for single men, and from $50 to $60 a month for suitable married men. The further return from overseas of farmers' sons is expected to help out the situation.

APSLEY.

(Special Correspondence.)

Apsley, April 23—The body of the late Mrs. James Headley, missing from her home since October 19, was found while hunting for cattle near Crab Lake. The deceased was about sixty-eight years of age and is supposed to have wandered into the woods and been unable to find her way home. Although search parties spent days in looking for her at the time of her disappearance, they were unable to find any trace of her. She leaves to mourn her loss a husband, five sons and two daughters. The body was brought to Apsley and interred in the Union cemetery. Many floral tributes were sent by sympathizing neighbors and friends.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. C McFadden, L. Coones, B. Coones. A Coones. W. Staples and W. Earnshaw.

A short funeral service was held at the grave by Rev. J. Beck.

Mrs Esau Tucker has left on a visit to relatives in British Columbia

Mrs. W. Hales. Mrs. W. Lean and Miss Helen have returned from a three months' visit with friends at Saskatchewan.

Miss Ella Brown. who has been teaching in Belmont, is home for the Easter vacation.

Recent cold weather has made the outlook poor for peaches, grapes and strawberries in Michigan.

HUNS PREPARING FOR ANOTHER WAR

REPORTED TO BE BUILDING ARMORED CARS AND GUNS IN UPPER SILESIA.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 22. — The German government is building and concealing armored cars, railways engines and guns in upper Silesia, according to information received by the Munich correspondent of the Journal Des Debats. Armored cars, the numbers of several of which have been obtained by the correspondent, are being built in the car works at Gleiwitz.

FOREIGNERS SECURED BOOZE

AND CAUSED RIOT AT NIAGARA FALLS.

Niagara Falls, Ont., April 22. — "That will give people some idea of what things will be like around here if they allow liquor again," said Chief of Police Welch commenting on the riot which took place at Falls View when a lot of Austrians and Russians employed on the Hydro Canal who had procured liquor began quarelling among themselves, ending in a general fight.

The provincial and city police arrived on the scene in time to stop the murder of two of the men whom the others had got down and were beating unmercifully. The police gave it as their opinion that the foreigners had been drinking pure alcohol, from the smell.

Chief Welch said that while conditions here with reference to the foreigners were bad enough now they would be infinitely worse if liquor is again allowed in Ontario and there were bound to be more murders even than now. As a result of the rioting eight foreigners paid $10 fines

CHILD GETS SICK CROSS, FEVERISH IF CONSTIPATED

"CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS" CAN'T HARM TENDER STOMACH OR BOWELS.

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold, or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

Record Shipment Of Hogs Received

The largest shipment of hogs that has ever been weighed on the Peterborough scales was received yesterday when 207 hogs, valued at $9,000, were sent in by the Farmers' Club of East Peterborough. Mr. E. G. Mullen handled the shipment. The hogs were all sold to the Matthews-Blackwell Co. at $21.00, which was the highest Toronto price.

LAKEFIELD

(Special Correspondence.)

Lakefield, April 23.—In connection with the Easter services of the Lakefield Methodist church, the members of the Women's Missionary Society, put on a sacred drama, "The Challenge of the Cross," devoting the proceeds to the cause of the mission.

From every point of view the performance was a marked success. The ladies who took part were Mrs. Johnson, as an evangelist appealing for cross-bearers, and Mrs. Richardson Mrs. H. Therce, Mrs. Leonard, Mrs Eva Jury, Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Hunter, as volunteers for the work. The play was a portrayal of the attitude adopted towards the crosses of life showing the various ways in which they are accepted and borne. The ladies displayed in their performance, not only talent, but what is more to be commended, careful and painstaking preparation and certainly deserve all the praise and approbation accorded them.

Open sluices of the system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot fater each morning.

We should drink, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gase, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone who is botherd with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every

OVER TWO YEARS IN HUN PRISON

MILLBROOK MAN TELLS HARROWING TALE OF HIS WAR EXPERIENCES.

(Special to The Review.)

Millbrook, April 23.—Pte. William Foottit arrived in Millbrook on April 16th, after a most trying time as prisoner in German camps for two years and a half. He enlisted on Jan. 13th, 1915, with the 8th C.M.R., sailed on the Missinabia for England Oct. 9th, 1915, went to France on 14th Jan., 1916, and after some hard fighting was taken prisoner on June 2nd. 1916, at Ypres.

He tells some thrilling experiences of the treatment received from the Huns in their prison camps. He escaped one and was recaptured when within five miles of Holland. For this he was given fourteen days in a "sweat cell," heated with steam for the purpose of taming those who endeavor to escape. He says the food was rotten, and was fed to them as though they were "swine," the all too often word used about the gallant English and Canadian soldiers.

Pte. Foottit weighed 145 lbs. when he was taken prisoner and, when he was repatriated, he was reduced to 110. He says the prisoners, at least many of them, and he among them, had to work in a stone quarry ten hours a day with dirty big German curs of officers standing with fixed bayonets ready to do them injury or kill them outright if they dared to disobey orders. Only for the boxes sent by the Red Cross many more of the prisoners would have died of starvation. Pte. Foottit was slightly wounded in knee and leg before he was made prisoner.

While a prisoner he had the "flu" and didn't have a soul to look after him, except a burly officer to throw him some sawdust bread, which at any time was obnoxious, but imagine a sick man trying to swallow it.

He was glad when he heard the news of the armistice, and if all the Germans in Christendom were crying for bread or water Pte. Foottit would not give it them. He'd rather see the Turks get it, as he says they are white compared to the Huns.

Pte. Foottit left England on the 22nd of March on the S.S. Regina, arrived in Halifax on 30th March, Toronto on April 2nd, and Millbrook on 16th inst. All join in welcoming him back to the old burg and hope that time will help him forget the many indignities and abuse he had to stand while a prisoner a Hunland.

HASTINGS

(Special Correspondence)

Hastings, April 23.—Another aged resident of Asphodel has passed away in the person of Mr. Samuel Scott, who for many years took an active part in municipal affairs. He was a native of Ireland and came to this country when but a child, having lived on the present homestead for upwards of fifty years. He was married in 1866 to Miss Annie McGee, who with ten children, survive him. The children are Mrs. Charles King, Mrs. John Stewart, Mrs. Andrew Thistlewade and William, all of Swift Current, Sask.; Mrs. Harry Nesbitt, of Dummer, Sask; Samuel, on the homestead; John and Mrs. Lew Elmhirst, of Ashphodel; Mrs. W. Stillman, of Havelock, and Mrs. Fred. Dodd, of Hastings. The funeral was largely attended, showing the respect in which deceased was held by a host of friends in this district.

A great deal of inconvenience was caused around town by the strike of the Canadian Express Company handlers. Several of the local merchants had goods held up on account of the trouble.

The many friends here of Mr. and Mrs. Warden Gardner extend deepest sympathy with the sad loss they have sustained by the death of their bright little child.

A sad death occurred here on Friday morning when Mrs. Jas. Greenley, of Campbellford, passed away at the home of her sister, Miss Agnes Hermiston Whither. She had come but a few days previous to spend the Easter season and was taken suddenly ill. Medical aid was summoned and everything that could be possibly done for her relief but all to no avail and she passed peacefully away. The remains were removed to her home in Campbellford where the funeral was held. She leaves to mourn her loss, a grown-up family of sons and daughters who will greatly miss a loving, unselfish mother. Her husband predeceased her some six or seven years ago. Mrs W. Greenley, town, is a sister.

Dr. J. H. Hess is building a large addition to his garage on Front street, which will be a great convenience to the mechanics and supply. A much needed floor space, so necessary for the grown business.

On Wednesday morning the fire alarm was sounded and the cause proved to be a chimney blaze on the house occupied by Mr. W. Barry. The chemicals were applied and not much damage resulted.

The fire brigade held a practice on Tuesday evening and everything was found to be in first-class condition.

Miss Ruth and Joan Alger, of Toronto, were in town during the week in the interests of the Dominion Chautauqua.

At a meeting held on Wednesday evening arrangements were made with the Colt-Alber Dominion Lyceum Bureau to run a series of five concerts here next winter.

On Good Friday all the business places were closed and the citizens enjoyed themselves in various ways.

The schools have closed for the Easter vacation and the teachers are holidaying at the respective homes.

VERA LAVELL IS UNDER ARREST

YOUNG GIRL IS CHARGED WITH HELPING M'CULLOUGH TO BREAK JAIL.

Toronto, April 23.—After nearly three hours of grueling questioning Miss Vera de Lavell, the girl who is alleged to have been implicated in the escape of Frank McCullough from Toronto jail, was last night placed under arrest on a charge of "aiding and abetting a prisoner to escape." Sergeant of Detectives Wallace, who with Detectives Cronin and Nursey conducted the questioning, stated that the girl admitted having sent letters and chocolates to the prisoner by Currell, the death watch; although she absolutely denied any participation in the escape.

The girl, according to Sergeant Wallace, has been living in empty houses in different parts of the city since she left her abode at Trinity square. She was found by the detectives on Queen street last night about nine o'clock, and taken to the detective office.

REMORSE IS SURE TO COME

Remorse is really a sour memory. Care for your eyes in youth if you would avoid it, and your old age will produce sweet recollections. Age is not the only reason for failing eyes. Children have weak eyes, which often is not known, but should be attended to. If they have trouble with their studies it may be from weak, tired eyes. Bring them to Dr. Fowler for examination.

HALF HOLIDAY ON THURSDAYS

RETAIL MERCHANTS WILL ADHERE TO CUSTOM OF FORMER YEARS.

It has been decided by the Retail Merchants' Association of this city to continue the observance of Thursday afternoon as the weekly half-holiday this season as in the past.

Some agitation to have Wednesday afternoon observed was made by the baseball enthusiasts of Peterborough, who claimed that it would be more convenient to celebrate upon the same day as is set aside in other towns and cities in Central Ontario. It would make it easier to stage baseball matches with other places.

The merchants, however, looked upon the argument urged by the fans as cutting in the opposite direction. They claim that it is desirable to celebrate Thursday afternoon for the very reason urged against it by the ball players.

Other towns in the district contiguous observe Wednesday afternoon and the boats run excursions to this city. That is a big day for the city merchants, and they do not feel like losing thousands of dollars in trade even though they would doubtless be delighted to see baseball flourish to an unlimited degree so long as it did not interfere with business.

MAYOR AND ALDERMEN BID FAREWELL TO ALD. MURRAY

At 2.30 this morning, in the City's Committee Chamber, after practically an all night session of the Board of Works, Mayor Duncan took the floor and paid passing tribute to Ald. Murray, who has resigned from the Aldermanic Board and leaves on an extended visit to Scotland, the land of his birth, tonight.

His Worship expressed deep regret at Ald. Murray's enforced retirement owing to ill health, and voiced his appreciation of the Alderman's co-operation since his election. Peterborough, the Mayor said, is losing a good and respected citizen, and the council a faithful colleague. He hoped for his return from Scotland in renewed healthand that he would ultimately be again found an active member of the city council.

Ald. Phelan heartily concurred in the sentiments expressed by the Mayor, wished Ald. and Mrs. Murray a safe voyage overseas and back and called for a standing endorsation of Council's best wish to the departing Alderman. Ald. Phelan's call was readily responded to.

Ald. Murray, in a fitting reply, eulogised Peterborough as the best city in which he had ever cast his lot and was exceeding optimistic of the community's future. "Peterborough," he said "is a beautiful city and has a bright future ahead. That is the reason I was anxious to be assured before leaving for Scotland that the much needed high level bridge would be built, and on plans in keeping with this city's requirements present and prospective."

RURAL SCHOOLS ARE DISCUSSED

POMINENT EDUCATIONALISTS TELL HOW THESE INSTITUTIONS MAY BE IMPROVED.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, April 23.—The Ontario Education Association continued the sessional meetings this morning. In the public school section Inspector Johnston, West Huron told how school sections could be beautified and the value of farms increased. A minimum salary for teachers and the local organization of rural teachers was advocated during discussion by the Federation of Women Teachers. A paper by Mrs. A. C. Thomas, Beamsville on "Medical and Dental Inspection in Rural Schools." was discussed by members of the hygiene and public health section.

Consolidated Schools

Considerable discussion took place in the Inspector's Section in a round table conference on "The Rural School Problem," which was introduced by Mr. Albert Odell, who referred to the benefits of the Folk High Schools in Denmark. The discussion centred around the needs and practicability of the consolidated schools in Ontario. Some held that the people did not want them, while others, they said, did not understand them. This they claimed showed the need of propaganda education.

It was claimed that farmers' wives were the chief enemies of the consolidated schools, as they influenced their daughters against marrying farmers and against having all their sons trained for life on the farm. The general concensus of opinion was that in consolidated schools lies the hope of beter education, either for country or city life, if the cultural value of a subject be stressed.

Inspector J. A. Taylor of St. Thomas was in favor of consolidated schools. Under the present system many teachers were leaving on account of inadequate salaries, and he thought under the consolidated system the evil could be redressed. W. E. Pollard of Bowmanville was opposed, and did not think it was possible to make a success of it. He pleaded for a square deal for the rural school and amplyfying his remarks said his idea of a square deal was by letting it alone..

ACTION IS DISMISSED.

"DANDERINE" FOR FALLING HAIR

Stop dandruff and double beauty of your hair for few cents.

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a small bottle of "Danderine" at any drug store for a few cents, pour a little in your hand and rub it into the scalp. After several applications the hair stops coming out and you can't find any dandruff. Your hair appears soft, glossy and twice as thick and abundant. Try it!

Estimate vs. Appropriation

In regard to progress made in this bridge question the city stands as follows:

Money voted....	$260,000
Govt. Grant, say	30,000
	$290,000
Estimated cost	$249,200
Estimated property damage	30,000
Engineer's fees	20,000
	$299,200
Deficit	$9,200

These figures are based on the conclusion that no saving accurs in the cost plus estimate; that the government's grant only amounts to one-seventh the cost of the work, and that the estimated cost of the property damages reach $30,000. In the $260,000 in appropriation for the bridge $10,000 were allowed for moving the old structure to London street.

After Another Grant

Engineer Frank Barber declared that the Board of Railway Commissioners has a fund set aside for allowing municipalities 20 per cent of the cost of changing highway grades and that some of the work in connection with the new bridge will come under that head.

On motion of Ald Morrison and Edgar, a grant in this connection will be applied for.

Other Tenders

The Russell-Townsend Co., for narrowed bridge and reductions, $229,000 on a cost plus basis.

Ed. Conroy—For narrowed bridge and reductions 251,629 on a lump sum basis. This tender showed for a wide bridge and reductions as previously specified a lump figure of 271,806.05.

The Concrete Constructors, St. Catharines—For narrow bridge and all reductions $252,000 for lump sum contract. This tender figured out at $279,000 for a lump sum contract for a wide bridge with the reductions specified.

The Canadian Engineering and Contracting Co., Hamilton—For a lump sum contract, $276,860 on a bridge reduced in width and eliminations called for.

A Misunderstanding

The Concrete Construction Co., had submitted a tender on a cost plus guarantee basis, which read that should the work cost above $240,000 they forfeit $10,000 and should it fall below $228,000 then they to receive 25 per cent of the saving below this figure. This was for a narrow bridge and all reductions, and a motion, by Ald. Turner that if this firm accepts 231,8[illegible] as a cost plus "guarantee" basis they get the contract carried. However, on Mr. Weller and Son, members of the firm being called into consultation these gentlemen raised this latter figure beyond acceptance and one reason for this was that they could not enter into a cost plus guarantee agreement in the face of laborers demanding 50c an hour and carpenters 67½ cents. Such labor conditions Mr. Weller said would necessitate refiguring.

THE GODS OF MARS

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

"There are within this vast network of winding passages and countless chambers men, women and beasts, who, born within its dim and grewsome underworld, have never seen the light of day—nor ever shall.

"They are kept to do the bidding of the race of therns; to furnish at once their sport and their sustenance.

"Now and again some hapless pilgrim, drifting out upon the silent sea from the cold Iss, escapes the plant men and the great white apes that guard the temple of Issus and falls into the remorseless clutches of the therns, or, as was my misfortune, is coveted by the holy thern who chances to be upon watch in the balcony above the river where it issues from the bowels of the mountains through the cliffs of gold to empty into the lost sea of Korus.

"All who reach the valley Dor are, by custom, the rightful prey of the plant men and the apes, while their arms and ornaments become the portion of the therns, but if one escapes the terrible denizens of the valley for even a few hours the therns may claim such a one as their own.

"And again the holy thern on watch, should he see a victim he covets, often tramples upon the rights of the unreasoning brutes of the valley and takes his prize by foul means if he cannot gain it by fair.

"It is said that occasionally some deluded victim of Barsoomian superstition will so far escape the clutches of the countless enemies that beset his path from the moment that he emerges from the subterranean passage through which the Iss flows for a thousand miles before it enters the Valley Dor as to reach the very walls of the temple of Issus. But what fate awaits one there not even the holy therns may say, for who has passed within those gilded walls never has returned to unfold the mysteries they have held since the beginning of time.

"The temple of Issus is to the therns what the valley Dor is imagined by the peoples of the outer world to be to them. It is the ultimate haven of peace, refuge and happiness to which they pass after this life and wherein an eternity of eternities is spent amid the delights of the flesh which appeal most strongly to this race of mental giants and moral pygmies."

"The temple of Issus is, I take it, a heaven within a heaven," I said. "Let us hope that there it will be meted to the therns as they have meted it here unto others."

"Who knows?" the girl murmured.

"The therns, I judge from what you have said, are no less mortal than we; and yet have I always heard them spoken of with the utmost awe and reverence by the people of Barsoom as one might speak of the gods themselves."

"The therns are mortal," she replied. "They die from the same causes as you or I might—those who do not live their allotted span of life, 1,000 years. By the authority of custom at that time they may take their way in happiness through the long tunnel that leads to Issus.

"Those who die before are supposed to spend the balance of their allotted time in the image of a plant man, and it is for this reason that the plant men are held sacred by the therns, since they believe that each of these hideous creatures was formerly a thern."

"And should a plant man die?" I asked.

"Should he die before the expiration of the thousand years from the birth of the thern, whose immortality abides within him, then the soul passes into a great white ape. Should the ape die short of the exact hour that terminates the thousand years the soul is forever lost and passes for all eternity into the carcass of the slimy and fearsome silian, whose wriggling thousands seethe in the silent sea beneath the hurtling moons when the sun has gone and strange shapes walk through the valley Dor."

"We sent several holy therns to the silians today, then," said Tars Tarkas, laughing.

"And so will your death be the more terrible when it comes," said the maiden. "And come it will. You cannot escape."

"One has escaped, centuries ago," I reminded her, "and what has been done may be done again."

"It is useless even to try," she answered hopelessly.

"But try we shall," I cried, "and you shall go with us, if you wish."

"To be put to death by mine own people and render my memory a disgrace to my family and my nation? A prince of the house of Tardos Mors should know better than to suggest such a thing."

Tars Tarkas listened in silence, but I could feel his eyes riveted upon me, and I knew that he awaited my answer as one might listen to the reading of his sentence by the foreman of a jury.

What I advised the girl to do would seal our fate as well, since, if I bowed to the inevitable decree of age old superstition, we must all remain and meet our fate in some horrible form within this awful abode of horror and cruelty.

"We have the right to escape if we can," I answered. "Our own moral sense will not be offended if we succeed, for we know that the fabled life of love and peace in the blessed valley of Dor is a rank and wicked deception.

"We know that the valley is not sacred. We know that the holy therns are not holy; that they are a race of cruel and heartless mortals, no more cognizant of the real life to come than we.

"Not only is it our right to bend every effort to escape; it is a solemn duty from which we should not shrink, even though we knew that we should be reviled and tortured by our own peoples when we returned to them.

"Only thus may we carry the truth to those without, and, though the likelihood of our narrative being believed is remote, we would be craven cowards were we to shirk the plain duty which confronts us.

"Again there is a chance that with the weight of the testimony of several of us the truth of our statements may be accepted and at least a compromise effected which will result in the dispatching of an expedition of investigation to this hideous mockery of heaven."

Both the girl and the green warrior stood silent in thought for some moments. The former it was who eventually broke the silence.

"Never had I considered the matter in that light before," she said. "Indeed would I give my life a thousand times if I could but save a single soul from the awful life that I have led in this cruel place. Yes, you are right, and I will go with you as far as we can go, but I doubt that we ever shall escape."

I turned an inquiring glance toward the Thark.

"To the gates of Issus or to the bottom of Korus," spoke the green warrior; "to the snows to the north or to the snows to the south. Tars Tarkas follows where John Carter leads. I have spoken."

"Let us go!" I cried. "We must make the start, for we could not be further from escape than we now are, in the heart of this mountain and within the four walls of this chamber of death."

"Come, then," said the girl, "but do not flatter yourself that you can find no worse place than this within the territory of the therns."

So saying, she swung the secret panel that separated us from the apartment in which I had found her, and we stepped through once more into the presence of the other prisoners.

There were in all ten red Martians, men and women, and when we had briefly explained our plan they decided to join forces with us, though it was evident that it was with some considerable misgivings that they thus tempted fate by opposing an ancient superstition, even though each knew through cruel experience the fallacy of its entire fabric.

One of these prisoners, a red Martian boy, particularly attracted me. There was something strangely familiar about his face, and yet I could not place him. I asked him his name, and he said it was Carthoris.

Thuvia, the girl whom I had first freed, soon had the others at liberty. Tars Tarkas and I stripped the bodies of the two therns of their weapons, which included swords, daggers and two revolvers of the curious and deadly type manufactured by the red Martians.

We distributed the weapons as far as they would go among our followers, giving the firearms to two of the women, Thuvia being one so armed.

With the latter as our guide we set off rapidly, but cautiously, through a maze of passages, crossing great chambers hewn from the solid metal of the cliff, following winding corridors, ascending steep inclines and now and again concealing ourselves in dark recesses at the sound of approaching footsteps.

Our destination, Thuvia said, was a distant storeroom, where arms and ammunition in plenty might be found. She was to lead us to the summit of the cliffs, from where it would require both wondrous wit and mighty fighting to win our way through the very heart of the stronghold of the holy therns to the world without.

"And even then, O prince," she cried, "the arm of the holy therns is long. It reaches to every nation of Barsoom. His secret temples are hidden in the heart of every community.

"Wherever we go, should we escape, we shall find that word of our coming has preceded us, and death awaits us before we may pollute the air with our blasphemies."

We had proceeded for possibly an hour without serious interruption and Thuvia had just whispered to me that we were approaching our first destination when on entering a great chamber we came upon a man, evidently a thern.

He wore, in addition to his leathern trappings and jeweled ornaments, a great circlet of gold about his brow, in the exact center of which was set an immense stone.

As the thern saw us his eyes narrowed to two nasty slits.

"Stop!" he cried. "What means this, Thuvia?"

For answer the girl raised her revolver and fired point blank at him. Without a sound he sank to the earth, dead.

"Beast!" she hissed. "After all these years I am at last revenged."

Then as she turned toward me, evidently with a word of explanation on her lips, her eyes suddenly widened as they rested upon me, and with a little exclamation she started toward me.

"O prince," she cried, "fate is indeed kind to us. The way is still difficult, but through this vile thing upon the floor we may yet win to the outer world. Notest thou not the remarkable resemblance between this holy thern and thyself?"

CHAPTER VII.

Through the Golden Cliffs.

THE man was indeed of my precise stature, nor were his eyes and features unlike mine, but his hair was a mass of flowing yellow locks, like those of the two I had killed, while mine is black and close cropped.

"What of the resemblance?" I asked the girl. "Do you wish me, with my black, short hair, to pose as a yellow haired priest of this infernal cult?"

She smiled and for answer approached the body of the man she had slain and, kneeling beside it, removed the circlet of gold from the forehead and then to my utter amazement lifted the entire scalp bodily from the corpse's head.

Rising, she advanced to my side and, placing the yellow wig over my black hair, crowned me with the golden circlet with the magnificent gem.

"Now don his harness, prince," she said, "and you may pass where you will in the realms of the therns, for Sator Throg was a holy thern of the tenth cycle and mighty among his kind."

As I stooped to the dead man to do her bidding I noted that not a hair grew upon his head, which was quite as bald as an egg.

"They are all thus from birth," explained Thuvia, noting my surprise. "The race from which they sprung was crowned with a luxuriant growth of golden hair, but for many ages the present race has been entirely bald. The wig, however, has come to be a part of their apparel, and so important a part do they consider it that it is cause for the deepest disgrace were a thern to appear in public without it."

In another moment I stood garbed in the habiliments of a holy thern.

At Thuvia's suggestion two of the released prisoners bore the body of the dead thern upon their shoulders with us as we continued our journey toward the storeroom, which we reached without further mishap.

Here the keys which Thuvia bore from the dead thern of the prison vault were the means of giving us immediate entrance to the chamber, and very quickly we were thoroughly outfitted with arms and ammunition.

By this time I was so thoroughly fagged that I could go no farther, so I threw myself upon the floor, bidding Tars Tarkas to do likewise and cautioning two of the released prisoners to keep careful watch.

In an instant I was asleep.

SCENIC SETTING OF HIGH ORDER

PRODUCERS OF "THE BETTER 'OLE" HAVE WON FRESH LAURELS.

In staging "The Better 'Ole," the comedy with music, which will be seen at the Grand Friday and Saturday, with matinee Saturday, Mr. and Mrs. Coburn, the American producers, have added fresh laurels to their high reputation in providing an elaborate scenic setting to furnish the necessary atmosphere as a background for the three famous Bairnsfather characters around which the play is built. There are eight different scenes, each of which forms a connecting link in the adventures of the three musketeers, "Old Bill," "Bert" and "Alf." Throughout the play a dozen catchy musical numbers are evenly distributed; these, together with an ensemble of pretty girls lend charm and beauty to the performance. The light effect projected to depict a big battle scene is stamped with the work of a connoisseur. In fact, nothing has been left undone by the Coburns in giving "The Better 'Ole" an effective stage presentation.

John Taylor, 12, Chicago, admitting he threw rocks at a passing train and killed the engineer, was committed to reform school.

In broad daylight in the business section of San Francisco, a bank messenger said he was held up and robbed of $3,544 by two armed thugs.

A 15-year-old St. Louis, Mo., girl shot and killed her stepfather, after an alleged attempt to attack her. In 1916 she shot and killed her father while he was abusing her mother.

Sixty Artists In Minstrel Show

What is recognized as the most stupendous consolidation of minstrel talent the modern stage has ever known is promised at the Grand Opera House, one day only, Monday, April 28th, where Gus Hill's big minstrels is to be the next attraction. It is described as a burnt-cork festival of mammoth and incomparable proportions, requiring the services of sixty of the best white artists ever mustered in a single aggregation. All of the men are stars in their particular field, shining with wonderful versatility as instrumentalists, singers, dancers, vaudeville headliners, comedians, soloists, balladists, and black-faced destroyers of gloom and the blues. The show is a combination of the best up-to-date songs, rag-time and, of course, the old classics, ditties, etc., that seem to be ever green, original settings, pretentious scenic endeavor, new jokes, wheezes and inimitable sayings, pretentious scenic production and ingredients that are bound to please and amuse. George Wilson, who has just completed a successful engagement of a number of weeks at the New York Hippodrome, heads the cast. He is aided and abetted by a score of others. There is to be a street parade.

Will it be different? Well, you wait and see.

WHOLESOME PLAY AT THE GRAND

"THE ROSARY" TO BE PRESENTED THURSDAY NIGHT BY GOOD COMPANY.

"The Rosary," which will come to the Grand Opera House tomorrow night, is a drama of modern life, depicting scenes that are familiar to everyone. This play, which had immense popularity a year or so ago, before the influx of the war drama and the smother of unclean and unwholesome plays, has been revived to meet the demand for good drama by Messrs. Rowland and Clifford, who have provided a notable company and a fine production.

Rev. Brien Kelly, chief character in the play, dominates the action and succeeds in averting disaster to a happy home by his kindly and sensible interference. This priest in no way projects sectarianism. He is familiar to Americans, and the millions who have laughed and cried with him will laugh and cry again, and those who have not seen and heard him will welcome him with great joy. This play gets away from [illegible] entertainment of the better sort. No one should miss this opportunity of seeing a red-blooded drama of wholesome tendencies.

Music Satisfies Every Mood

Are you downhearted? Then music will raise your spirits. Are you happy? Then music will interpret your joyful mood. Are you sad? Then music will soothe your soul.

Music benefits every member of the family. If you would brighten the atmosphere of your home; if you would lighten your wife's burdens; if you would bring pleasure and relaxation to the entire household, put MUSIC into your home.

This is Canada's Music Week. All over Canada thoughts are directed to Music. Make this a MUSICAL EASTERTIDE in the true sense of the word.

Think of Music this week. Consider its power to inspire, to soothe, to entertain, to refine and elevate the character of young and old. And determine now to let Music fill a larger place in your life.

Buy a piano, a player piano or a phonograph, and thus provide the means of extending Easter Cheer throughout the year.

FOURTEEN MAJOR TEAMS OPEN BALL SEASON TODAY

New York, April 23.—Friday will usher in another baseball season under conditions which the major league magnates, players and fans hope and expect will be more fruitful than those of the past few years with the blight of war lifted from the national sport. It is the belief in all sections that the game will rebound to the heights of popularity which it enjoyed previous to the devastating sweep of world-wide hostilities.

League officials and club owners, with this idea in mind, have devoted the past few months to preparing for a new period in baseball and their handiwork is evident in many directions. Radical changes have been made in methods and system of conducting big leagues at the annual meetings of the magnates. Individual club owners have labored to improve the strength of their forces and through the team managers have purchased or traded players in order to round out formidable combinations.

How well they have builded only time can demonstrate, but, viewed from the standpoint of the present, it would appear as though both the National and American circuits were stronger and better balanced than has been the case in recent seasons. Before the pennant races are well under way it is expected that the last of the diamond stars now serving with the forces, either at home or abroad, will have doffed the khaki for baseball flannel. Many will reappear upon the field with a glamor heretofore lacking and the fans' welcome will be backed by a sentiment containing something more than the admiration due the player for his playing ability alone

Mingled with faces of returning veterans who have won honors on the battlefields of Europe, as well as on the diamond, will be seen those of newcomers, bringing the speed, agility and zest of youth to the national game. From the training camps of the southland come reports of the sparkling play of several recruits who promise to quickly establish themselves in the hearts of the fans as a result of their unusual skill with bat and ball.

It is this constantly changing picture of personnel, playing ability and combat, tempered with the sentiment and traditions of baseball, that has established the sport so firmly throughout the nation. Old stars may fade; youthful phenomenous leap to the zenith in their places, and club owners come and go with little apparent effect upon the popularity of the game. For many years baseball has held its own through prosperous and depressing seasons because it is baseball and America's game. Tradition has welded the sport into an integral part of the nation's life.

Chicago leads in the number of championships won as the teams of that city have accounted for eleven pennants. Boston is second with [illegible] and New York third, with eight. Of the 37 pennants won by cities now represented in the league, eastern clubs have captured 22 and western teams 15.

This year the clubs face a shorter season and a pennant race of 140 games, in place of the usual 154. When the teams take the field on Wednesday, with Chicago at St. Louis; Cleveland at Detroit; Philadelphia at Washington, and Boston at New York on the American League circuit; and Brooklyn at Boston; New York at Philadelphia; Pittsburg at Chicago, and St. Louis at Cincinnati, in the National League, the 1919 season will be about a week later in starting than has been the case in past years.

What effect, if any, this will have upon the pennant races is uncertain at this time. Managers and magnates hope for settled weather and expect that, if normal temperature conditions prevail, the teams will be able to play fast ball from the start. Close struggles, with the lead shifting frequently should make the baseball season of 1919 one of the brightest periods in the annals of the game.

The opening games will be played as follows:

National League.

Boston—Brooklyn vs. Boston.
Philadelphia—New York vs. Philadelphia.
Chicago—Pittsburg vs. Chicago.
Cincinnati—St. Louis vs. Cincinnati

American League.

St. Louis—Chicago vs. St. Louis.
Detroit—Cleveland vs. Detroit.
Washington—Philadelphia vs. Washington.
New York—Boston vs. New York.

The managers of the different teams are:

Salt Superstitions.

Superstitions concerning salt are among the earliest known to mankind. There is much evidence in holy writ for the ceremonial uses of it, and the old Mosaic law commands that every sacrifice of a meat offering shall be seasoned with it. Homer calls it divine, and many of the old Teuton races looked on salt springs as holy [illegible] of this superstition seems to be that since salt cannot corrupt it should be regarded as a symbol of immortality.

SUNDAY SPORTS FOR NEW YORK

BASEBALL AND MOVIES ALLOWED ON FIRST DAY OF WEEK.

Albany, N.Y., April 23.—Gov. Smith has signed a bill, giving New York state Sunday baseball and Sunday movies.

Under the two bills baseball games may be played and moving pictures exhibited on Sundays providing consent is given by the local governing body. The bills were fought by the Lord's Day Alliance and other religious organizations, but were supported by the state federation of labor and numerous business and political bodies.

In announcing his approval of the Sunday baseball and Sunday movie bills, Gov. Smith's statement read:

"After a thorough consideration of the matter, I am of the firm opinion that those members of a community who oppose all recreation on Sunday, or at least recreation permitted by this amendatory bill, have no right in law or in morals, where they constitute a minority of a community, to impose their views upon the majority, who disagree with them and to prohibit the latter from exercising rights and privileges to which they deem themselves to be entitled, the exercise of which will in no wise interfere with the orderly and proper observance of the day of rest by those desiring to refrain from attending amusements."

The governor also pointed out that the baseball bill removes the present legal prohibition against fishing on Sunday.

Both measures take effect immediately and the games and exhibitions will be permitted as soon as local ordinances are adopted.

No Change Needed.

Ban Johnson, president of the American league, said that there would be no need of new schedules for the big leagues. The clubs would merely move forward a week day game for the Sunday contest.

AUTOISTS FAVOR HIGHER SPEED

LOCAL ASSOCIATION APPROVE OF RECENT ACTION OF THE LEGISLATURE.

At a meeting of the Automobile Association held last night the Secretary, Mr. H. O. Fisk, reported that in compliance with the Ontario Motor League's request telegrams had been sent to the Prime Minister of Ontario, Hon. Finlay MacDiarmid, G. A. Gillespie M.L.A. and James Thompson, M.L.A. approving the proposed increase in the speed limit from 15-20 miles to 20-25 miles per hour.

This action was approved by the meeting.

Reports dealing with the recent action taken by the City Council, Board of Trade, and North Monaghan Council to petition the Ontario Government to make the Port Hope-Peterborough road a provincial highway were received.

It was stated that having taken the matter up with Reeve Baptie of Cavan, Warden of Durham County a most favorable reply had been received. He had stated that Cavan Council would meet on May 7th and that Durham County had already purchased $10,000 of road machinery. It was apparent that an improved highway such as proposed would receive support in this quarter.

Alderman Turner the Chairman of the reception committee of the city council appeared before the Automobile Association at its meeting last night and asked that that body undertake to supply autos to take the 80 returning men who will arrive in the city on the 8.26 Thursday night to Central Park where they would be briefly welcomed and then taken to their homes.

The Association assented to the proposition and it was left to the Entertainment Committee, Mr. Borbidge acting in the absence of the Chairman, Mr. Breyfogle.

WHEN WILLARD SHOWED THAT HE COULD BE AGGRESIVE

Although Jess Willard had shown signs of promise in his New York bouts with Arthur Pelky and Luther McCarty, many critics thought he would never do because he so obviously lacked pugnacity and aggressiveness. It was not until he tackled the rugged Soldier Kearns that Willard demonstrated that he could be aggressive on occasion. The big fellow stopped Kearns in the eighth round of their bout on December 27, 1912, scoring one of the most spectacular knockouts ever seen in that famous arena.

Kearns was the most muscular heavyweight to appear since Tom Sharkey was in his prime. He knew little about the scientific end of the game, but he was game and very aggressive. A few weeks before he met Willard he had knocked out the much touted One Round Davis of Buffalo with almost the first punch he landed and the victory earned him the opportunity to meet the giant from the west.

From the start Willard appeared to regard the bout as a huge joke. He was laughing so hard his sides shook when he climbed through the ropes and he continued to laugh while the gloves were being adjusted. He still was grinning broadly as he left his corner. Kearns looked decidedly puzzled, not knowing what the joke was all about, when the giant suddenly pounced upon him with both hands flying. Before Kearns realized that the fight had started Willard had landed half a dozen hard lefts and rights.

Evidently Willard had planned to take the soldier by surprise and put over a quick knockout. However, his blows did not strike a vital spot, and although Kearns was considerably shaken up he began a series of furious rushes. Willard stopped hitting at once and went on the defensive and his chance to score a quick knockout was gone.

His chance having failed, the giant became a clown once more. He began to dance in a loose jointed way that set the crowd roaring with laughter. Willard himself seemed to be enjoying the fun and he laughed as hard as the spectators. Kearns was the only serious man in the place.

Sets Crowd Laughing.

Just before the first round ended Willard reached out with a long, left hook and bowled the soldier over as a child would upset a ninepin. Kearns jumped up quickly and the gong sounded before the men could resume action.

After that Willard remained passive for two rounds, while Kearns rushed and swung until he was arm weary without making any impression on the grinning giant who merely leaned back and blocked everything that came his way. In the fourth round Willard met Kearns coming in with a right uppercut and again the soldier went to the canvas.

In the fifth round Willard suddenly stopped smiling and for a few seconds he fairly smothered his opponent with a two handed attack. During this outburst the big fellow's speed was almost beyond belief. He struck with the speed of a bantam and every blow found the mark. It was a revelation to the crowd which had no idea that such a tremendously big man could move so fast. Kearns was reeling and groggy in a moment but for some reason known only to himself Willtard stopped hitting as suddenly as he had begun and allowed Kearns to recover.

During the next two rounds Willard was peaceful and smiling. He allowed Kearns to do all the leading and merely knocked and rested.

FESTIVAL IN ST. JOHN'S CH.

THIRD EVENT IN CONNECTION WITH MUSIC WEEK TONIGHT.

The free musical festival in St. Paul's church last evening in celebration of Canada's first Music Week attracted another audience fully appreciative of the committee's efforts to commemorate in a joyous way the peace conditions under which Canadians are now living after four and a half years of strenuous war.

The program as published in advance last evening was exceedingly well rendered and all participants therein are to be congratulated on the success of their efforts to offer a really superior concert entertainment.

Tonight's Program.

Another festival will be given tonight in St. John's church at 8 o'clock. The following St. George's Day service and musical program has been carefully prepared:

The combined Anglican church choirs of 100 voices will sing the full choral service.

In addition to being the official celebration of St. George's Day, it is the third event of the Canadian Week of Music, also the anniversary of the second Battle of Eypres.

During the service Handel's Hallelujah chorus will be sung.

After the Offertory—"Nearer My God to Thee," in memory of those fallen in the great war.

FOURTH ANNIVERSARY OF YPRES

In Peterborough, especially upon the main streets, a few flags are displayed. Some might think that there are just enough to accentuate the fact that the day is not being observed as it should be. Times have been when flags and bunting have been displayed to a much greater degree upon occasions much less deserving of the honor, and it is a mournful fact that there are numberless Canadians and hosts of residents in this city who are better acquainted with the events of the Napoleonic wars and with the achievements of the Canadians in 1812-13-14 than with their accomplishments in the greatest conflict of all time, which has not yet been formally brought to a close.

Four years ago today the Canadian soldiers, by throwing themselves into the breach in the wavering line at Ypres, caused by the rout of the terror-stricken French before enveloping clouds of gas which for the first time was used upon that occasion, saved the day for the Allies and prevented the Germans from bursting through and reaching Calais.

Four years ago today the Canadians saved Calais, with all that this achievement entailed, and in doing so withstood an attack which was for the first time supported by the use of poisonous gas against which no preparations had been made, and as a result of the effects of which many a man from Peterborough gave up his life and many a returned soldier in our midst is still suffering.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

GARDNER—FOSTER

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Foster, Cavan, on Wednesday, April 9th, when their daughter, Miss Henrietta E. Foster, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Charles Robert Gardner, son of Mr. Robert Gardner, of Cavan. The bride and groom stood under an arch of evergreens, while Rev. W. H. Higgs, pastor of Millbrook Methodist church performed the ceremony. The bride was given away by her brother, Pte. Thomas H. Foster, just home from active service in France and Belgium. The bridesmaid was Mrs. William Foster, while Mr. Foster, brother of the bride, acted as best man. The bride looked charming in a suit of grey satin and crepe de chene with blue silk satin trimmings and carried a bridal bouquet. Her travelling suit was of navy blue serge with blue satin hat to match.

After the ceremony and congratulations were extended, the guests sat down to an excellent turkey dinner. The tables were beautifully decorated with flowers and were ladened with the season's good things. The presents to the bride and groom show the high esteem in which they are held by a host of friends. We join in extending hearty good wishes to the happy couple.

Rev. W. H. White, rector of St. Luke's church, spent Monday in Toronto.

A very interesting musical program was given yesterday afternoon at Children's Shelter, by Miss Ida G. Sanderson and her party including Misses Myrtle Suvece, Iris Edwards and Francis Edwards. The program consisted of vocal solos, piano solos and duets and patriotic songs, which the children sang heartily.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Girard have returned to their home in the West, after spending the winter with relatives in Peterborough.

Mrs. A. A. Perrin, who spent the past four months in Philadelphia, Atlantic City and other southern points, has returned to Peterborough. Her mother, Mrs. Hollingsworth, and niece, Miss Dorothy Hollingsworth, accompanied her as far as Whitby and will spend the summer there.

Mrs. A. Roach and Mrs. A. McKay of Toronto are guests of the former's mother, Mrs. Thomas, Rubidge street.

Mr. Robert Harstone leaves today for the west and will be away for some time looking after his interests there.

Mr. George Morrow, Mrs Duncan Walker and Miss Emma Morrow arrived home this evening after a pleasant trip to California. On their return trip they visited friends in New York.

BOY SCOUT NOTES

All troops are requested to assemble at All Saints Church on Thursday April 24th at 8 p.m., sharp to parade to the G.T.R. station and welcome the returned soldiers of the 2nd battalion.

St. Alban's boys meet Wednesday night at headquarters at 7.30.

A bill is to be introduced in the Nova Scotia Legislature providing for 2B per cent. beer.

ODDFELLOWS AT ST. JAMES CHURCH

WILL ATTEND THE ANNIVERSARY SERVICES THIS NEXT SUNDAY EVENING.

The second anniversary of St. James' will be held (D.V.) on the Sunday and Monday, April 27 and 28.

Rev. E. E. Scott of Toronto, one of the foremost pulpit men in Canadian Methodism will preach morning and evening. The Oddfellows and Rebecas of the city will attend the evening service and the choir will render music on that occasion. This being the 100th anniversary of the American Oddfellowship the service will be of special interest.

On Monday the ladies of the church will serve dinner from 5 to 8 p.m. after which Rev. E. E. Scott will deliver his lecture "The Land of the Maples." There will be special music by the choir under the leadership of Mr. Nichols, choirmaster.

"NEW ZEALAND DEMOCRACY"

Mr. James Simpson of Toronto will speak at an open meeting in the "Sons of England" Hall, Hunter st., on Friday night next, at 8 o'clock. Subject "New Zealand Democracy." Everybody welcome. A special invitation to organized labor.

Note—Members of the I. A. of M. will meet at 7 o'clock in the Labor Hall.

BIG DROP IN WOOD PRICES

FUEL AND TRANSFER CO. ANNOUNCE A NEW SCALE OF PRICES THAT IS GLAD NEWS.

The Peterborough Fuel and Transfer Co., announce a good substantial drop in the price of wood. This will be good news to the citizens after the high prices and scarcity of the past two winters. They claim to have the best quality of hardwood in the city, and quote prices as follows:

Best hardwood, 4 ft. length $9.00; cut to stove length $10.00, cut and split $11.00.

Mixed wood, 4 ft. length, $7.00; cut to stove length $8.00, cut and split $9.00.

NEW LABOR PARTY DISCUSS TARIFF

OPEN MEETING TO BE ADDRESSED BY SPEAKERS FROM TORONTO.

T. Tooms and J. McMurray, delegates to the recently held convention of the Independent Labor Party held in Toronto, submitted their reports to the local branch of the organization at its meeting in the Labor Hall last night.

A short discussion on the tariff question ensued, and arrangements were made to have two speakers, a man and a woman from Toronto, address a meeting of the party in this city in the near future upon the advantages of co-operative trade.

The appointment of Mr. J. Crowe as the nominee of the Trades and Labor Council in this city to fill the vacancy upon the City Council caused by the resignation of ex-Ald. Murray was endorsed.

Another meeting of the local branch of the Independent Labor Party will be held May 6.

New York dealers have begun sending out 2 3-4 per cent. beer as a step to test claim it is non-intoxicating.

OBITUARY

FRANK LUSK

The death of Mr. Frank Lusk, which sad event took place at Dr. Turner's Hospital, Millbrook, on Saturday, April 19th, at the age of 43 years, removes a most highly respected resident of the Township of Cavan, where he had resided nearly all his life. Last fall he sold his farm to Mr. Charles Matthews, of Peterboro. Recently he has been taking charge of Mrs. Russell's farm, from where he was taken to the hospital, suffering with pneumonia, and although everything possible was done to relieve his suffering and prolong his life, he passed away on above date.

Deceased was a Methodist and a Conservative. Mr. Robert Lusk is a brother and Mrs George Gibson, of Springville, is a sister, from whose home the funeral took place on Monday, to Frazerville cemetery. Rev. M. W. Leigh and Rev. G. I. Crow conducted the services. The pallbearers were Messrs. M. E. Hutchinson, J. Roddy, O. Pue, H. Dawson, W. Moncrief and Fred. Lewers. The boys of Frazerville placed a very beautiful wreath on the casket, a token of the high esteem in which deceased was held in the community. We join in heart-felt sympathy to the bereaved relatives.

ST. JOHN'S CHORISTERS

All boy choristers singing in the St. George's Evensong in St. John's Church tonight are asked to assemble at 7.30. Eton collars to be worn. Adult choristers assemble not later than 7.45. Please be punctual.

Orillia Board of Trade has induced all the factories to adopt a nine-hour day, at the ten-hour day rate of wages.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my dear son Pte. Samuel McKinley, who was killed at the battle of Langemarck, on April 23rd, 1915, also my beloved husband who died May 26, 1916.

Many one has travelled with me,
Reached that portal long ago,
One by one, they have left me battling with a dark and crafty foe.
They are watching at the portal
They are waiting at the door,
Waiting only for my coming,
All the loved gone before.

Inserted by mother and wife, Mrs. Samuel McKinley, 493 Aylmer street.

ITALIANS LIKELY TO MAKE SEPARATE PEACE WITH FOE

Unless Britain and United States Grant Her Demands Regarding Fiume.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 24.—It was stated in Italian quarters today that should the break become definite Italy would take steps to approach Germany with a view to making a separate peace.

King Victor Emmanuel has telegraphed Premier Orlando commending his action and insisting that there be no recession from the position Italy had taken.

Premier in Conference

Premier Lloyd George called on Premier Orlando before the Council met this morning. The statesmen had a long conference, the British premier endeavoring to secure a change in Italy's position, there was no indication however, of the success of the effort.

Premier Orlando reiterated this morning that he would leave Paris today. He added, "We do not break with our allies, but hand over our interests to their hands, trusting they will loyally fulfill their mission." Other members of the Italian delegation may remain in Paris a few days longer.

Approve Wilson's Statement

It is said that Premier Lloyd George approved President Wilson's statement without reserve and that Premier Clemenceau has described it as "admirable" and has said that he would not change a word. It is explained that the reason Lloyd George and Clemenceau did not join the statement was the fact that they were parties to the treaty of London It was said in an authoritative American quarter that Mr. Wilson's statement regarding Fiume was submitted to Mr. Lloyd George and Clemenceau two days ago.

Demonstration at Rome

Rome, April 23.—An imposing demonstration occurred here today, paraders traversing the principal thoroughfares acclaiming Fiume and Dalmatia and cheering for Premier Orlando and Foreign Minister Sonnino, because of their attitude regarding Italy's claims at the Peace Conference. The British, French and American embassies were each guarded by two hundred soldiers to avoid possible incidents.

Bolshevist Army Driven From Kiev

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Vienna, April 23—The Bolsheviki has been driven out of Kiev, the capital of Ukraine, by revolutionary Ukrainian troops friendly to Petlera, the Ukrainian leader.

DOCK WORKERS OUT OF STRIKE

AND CANADIAN TROOPS ARE HELD UP IN ENGLAND.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, April 23.—A number of first division troops ready to sail for Canada must remain in England owing to the dock workers' strike at Liverpool, which held up the departure of the White Star liner Baltic, upon which they were to make the trip.

Rumanians March Against Budapes

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Copenhagen, April 23.—Rumanian troops continued their advance toward Budapest on April 22, on the entire line between the Theiss and Maros rivers and in the evening were before Debreczin about 120 miles due east of Budapest, according to reports from Budapest today. Hungarians evacuated Debreczin Tuesday night.

FIRM THAT WILL BUILD BRIDGE

RUSSEL-TOWNSEND COMPANY ONE OF THE BEST IN DOMINION.

The Russel-Townsend Company, which has secured the contract of constructing the new Hunter street bridge, is one of the strongest corporations carrying on construction work upon an extensive scale in the country.

The form is composed of three members. The senior partner is John E. Russell, one of the best known contractors in Canada. C. J. Townsend, for many years before becoming identified with the firm, built bridges under his own name and F. H. Navin, the third member of the firm, was a contractor of many years' standing before he decided to throw in his lot with the Russel-Townsend Company.

John E. Russell has been thirty-five years in the construction business. He has been engaged principally upon large harbor work, having built practically all of the structures connected with Toronto harbor. He is general manager of the Toronto Shipbuilding Company, president of the Toronto Drydock Company, and a director of the Dominion Shipbuilding Company of Toronto.

Mr. Navin was in Peterborough yesterday and stated that work would [illegible]mmenced upon the bridge just as soon as the details of the contract are arranged, which will be almost immediately. Mr. Townsend will supervise the work here.

WILL STAND PAT ON THE TARIFF

MASS MEETING AT BRANTFORD OPPOSED TO ANY RADICAL CHANGES

Brantford, April 24.—The following resolution was adopted at the conclusion of the meeting in Victoria Hall for discussion of the future of the tariff in Canada, the motion being carried by a standing vote with only two persons, both farmers, dissenting:

"That at this meeting, called to discuss the tariff issues of Canada,

"It is resolved that in view of the difference in interests existing in Canada today, whereby the Western agricultural classes urge the Government to reduce present tariff schedules on many commodities, and these views are largely opposed by manufacturing interests, with which interests the working classes are very closely allied;

"And having in view the fact that it is essential to find employment for a large number of workers lately released from many industries, and also to find employment for a large proportion of Canada's returning army;

"That in order to supply employment for these workers it is necessary that every manufacturing plant, factory or industry of any nature in Canada should be kept in operation at fullest capacity during the whole period of reconstruction to avoid the danger of unemployment and in order to carry on and expand where possible, it is necessary that confidence in the stability of conditions be preserved;

"And realising that the various interests must recognise that the interests of each are inseparably bound up and are dependent upon the prosperity of the whole, and recognising the injustice of one class seeking to benefit at the expense of another class;

"We urge upon our representatives in Parliament the great importance of careful and wise handling by the Government of this tariff issue;

"And that no changes should be made in the tariff of Canada until a commission is appointed to thoroughly investigate and to revise and administer a tariff which will be equitable, and just to all classes of the country."

Welcome Heroes Home

A reception upon a most extensive scale is being prepared for the eighty veterans who are returning to the city on the 8.26 train tonight.

Automobiles to convey the soldiers from the Grand Trunk station to Central Park where they will be extended a civic welcome have been arranged for by the Automobile Association.

An imposing parade will take place in which will be represented most of the public organizations of the city including the City Council, Board of Trade, Great War Veterans' Association, bands, Boy Scouts, City Reception Committee and returned officers and men.

Every citizen of Peterborough is requested to be in attendance tonight to welcome home the returning men who entrained in Kingston this afternoon at 3.10 and will arrive in this city at 8.26 tonight.

The order of the parade appears below:

57th Regimental band.

Returned officers and Mayor and Reception Committee.

The parade will be down George street to Charlotte and along Charlotte to Grand Trunk station. The return will be the same route to Central Park. If the weather is unfavorable the Armouries will be used.

All bandsmen of the G.W.V.A. are requested to be present at the armories, in uniform at 7 p.m. sharp.

A short program will be given before proceeding to the station, to meet the men of the 2nd Battalion.

The Temple bandsmen are requested to meet at the Temple tonight at 7.15 sharp in full uniform, to help take part in welcoming the soldiers that will arrive in Peterboro tonight.

Members of the G.W.V.A. are requested to be at the Armories at 7.15 sharp in readiness to meet the returning veterans.

A hearty invitation is extended by the War Veterans to all returned men to take part in the parade whether they are members of the association or otherwise.

SOME VETERANS OPPOSE BANQUET

SAY THEY ARE ENTITLED TO MORE TANGIBLE RECOGNITION OF SERVICES

While realizing the good intentions of the city in tendering them a banquet, some of the members of the local branch of the G. W. V. A. feel that the money being expended to acknowledge their services might better be devoted to the purchase of some tangible token of esteem which could be presented to each of the men.

Some cities and towns have provided gold watches, suitably inscribed, others have presented their returned men with rings and pins, and the local men feel that something of this kind would be more suitable than a banquet, which will be forgotten in a night.

Members of the G. W. V. A. feel that there should be a citizens social re-establishment committee appointed to work in conjunction with a committee from the G. W. V. A. and endeavor to solve the local unemployment situation, which cannot be handled, according to their viewpoint, by the Government bureau as satisfactorily as it should be.

The Veterans feel that all civic positions falling vacant should be filled by returned soldiers, if the city is to redeem the promises it made to the men when they were leaving the country.

There are eighty men returning tonight, and with plenty already unsuccessfully seeking employment in Peterborough, the Veterans are of the opinion that a great many of the returned men will have to leave the city to find work unless the bridge construction is started immediately.

Had the bridge committee exercised ordinary business ability, the Veterans declare, work upon the bridge might have been started six weeks ago.

NINE-HOUR DAY

Quebec Harbor Longshoremen Come to Terms With Companies

Quebec, April 24.—The Quebec ship laborers (longshoremen) have come to terms with the shipping companies regarding the scale of wages to be paid in the Quebec harbor this season. It has been agreed that the nine-hour day will prevail in the port work and that the pay will be 57½ cents per hour. All overtime will be paid time and one-half.

Manitoba teachers have formed a federation, and the Alberta Teachers' Federation has started a movement for a Dominion Alliance of Teachers.

A special committee is to report upon the future of the Canadian militia. General Sir Wm. Otter is to be Chairman, and officers of overseas units, old militia forces and present militia units will be included.

CHEQUE FOR $50 FOR VETERAN

LANCE-CORPORAL PICKLE REMEMBERED BY FRIENDS AT ZION

At Foresters hall, Zion, Tuesday night, friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Pickle to meet their son, Lance Corp. Pickle, home from overseas. The young man, who is only 21 years old, enlisted with the 93rd Battalion and was wounded during the fierce fighting in the fall of 1917.

Mr. Joshua Smithson was called to the chair and the hero of the evening was presented with a cheque for $50 by Morley Smithson, who also read the following address:

Dear Harry,—

We have me[illegible]her today to welcome you back [illegible] old home, and I am sure there [illegible] one among us who is not unaff[illegible]glad to shake you by the hand [illegible] are glad to see you. You [illegible] had an experience such as has not fallen to the youth of Canada in the memory of living man and have shown yourself worthy to be ranked with those unnamed thousands from our country and from the kindred nations who were willing to do their share in defending the right and opposing the wrong. I am not here to make an eloquent speech, which is I know a thing which you in common with most other soldiers, dislike, especially when your own achievements are the theme of the speech. I will spare your blushes, therefore, and merely say that we do, everyone among us, recognize that you have shown yourself a worthy son of worthy parents and a citizen of whom Otonabee may well be proud. In token thereof I ask you to accept this small gift from your many friends, coupled with the hope that you may be preserved many years to enjoy their companionship.

Mrs. Thomas Petrie sang several solos and the children of the neighborhood rendered musical selections. The chief speakers of the evening were Col. T. J. Johnston and Reeve Anderson. The latter said he hoped the township of Otonabee would erect some suitable memorial as a recognition of the part its young men had taken in the war.

Savings in Banks Show Increase

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, April 24.—The savings deposits in the Canadian banks are still ahead although the increase during March was not so great as in the month previous. Increase last month was $19,000,000 and in February $28,000,000. Note circulation in March increased by ten millions and deposits in central gold reserve by about five millions.

Owen Sound Council has finally adopted daylight saving.

CONFERENCE DATE NOT YET SETTLED

GERMANS PROPOSE TO SEND LARGE PARTY OF PEACE DELEGATES.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 23.—The date of the arrival of the German peace delegation at Versailles is still not determined and the Allied representatives are apparently not pressing for haste, in view of the fact that the uncertainties of the Italian situation might possibly make an early inauguration of formal discussions between representatives of the Allied and associated powers and Germans impossible. Delays in framing the treaty of peace is also a reason for not desiring a speedy arrival of the enemy plenipotentiaries. The German delegation will be larger than was announced. General Nudant, Marshal Foch's representative at Spa, has been officially informed that in addition to the peace delegates there will be a party of 75 persons.

ALARM OF FIRE BROKE UP PARTY

GUESTS FORM A BUCKET BRIGADE AND SAVE A DWELLING

Out at Drummond Station last evening while friends and neighbors were gathered at the home of Mr. H. Manley a returned soldier to whom an address and presentation was made, the house of Mr. Mark Manley, one of the guests and relative of the host of the evening, caught fire. The house contained a number of sleeping children who were in charge of their grandmother. The party at once broke up and a bucket brigade was formed. The fire was put out, the most serious damage being done by water.

LISTENER HEARS EVIL REPORTS

AND AS SO OFTEN THE CASE THEY CONCERNED HIMSELF

Quebec, April 24.—An interesting test case regarding eavesdropping and talking over the telephone was submitted to the Quebec Superior Court. This latter tribunal will have to decide whether a conversation heard over the telephone constitutes proof of a libel.

The case is that of Joseph Roy, a dealer at Broughton Station, Que. who has filed suit for damages against M. Trottier, Manager of the National Bank at Broughton, claiming that Trottier some time ago held a conversation over the telephone with a certain party, and that in the course of said conversation Trottier spoke of Roy in terms which the latter found detrimental to his credit and good name.

Roy admits that he heard the conversation by eavesdropping, listening in over the party line. He says that in the town the telephone service is furnished over party line, that is, a number of subscribers are all connected on the same line. Roy says that he went to the telephone to call Central but that he found the line busy. He heard his name mentioned over the wire, and says he recognised Trottier's voice and heard Trottier saying things that, to Roy's mind were detrimental to him.

The Court will have to decide whether a conversation heard over the telephone, which is supposed not to be listened to, constitutes proof of a libel.

Orillia board of trade has induced all the factories to adopt a nine-hour day at the ten-hour rate of wages.

Published His Ultimatum in Newspapers Before Submitting it to Those Directly Interested—London Journals Deplore Attitude Taken by the United States.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 24.—It is understood that Great Britain and France, after consultation with President Wilson, will make another effort to draw from the Italians a further declaration as to the situation which has arisen, and the hope is still entertained in conference circles, that in spite of Premier Orlando's decision to leave Paris, a way may be found at the last moment to terminate to the satisfaction of all parties the admittedly grave incident which arose yesterday.

Orlando's Statement.

Premier Orlando, in a statement to the Italian correspondents last night outlined the events of the day. He said that in the morning Premier Lloyd George's secretary took to the Italian delegation a note from the Council of Three, which answered the Italian claims and which specified that Fiume was to be a free city and not under the administration of any power. The delegation then inquired, he said, if this represented President Wilson's opinion and received an affirmative answer.

The Italian delegation met at 4.30 o'clock to take up the note, but had hardly begun consideration before an afternoon newspaper was brought in, and the Italians were dumfounded, the Premier said, to find Mr. Wilson's note printed there. The surprise of the Italians was intense, Signor Orlando continued, to learn that a document so vital had been made public in such a manner, and at first doubted its authenticity. These doubts were soon removed, however, and the delegation at once deliberated upon the consequences of its publication.

After a long discussion, the Italians considered it necessary to make known their surprise to Great Britain and France, and addressed a letter to those two powers, pointing out the impossibility of continuing to participate usefully in the Peace Conference. Regret was expressed that Mr. Wilson's statement, which came at the very moment the Italian delegation was making a supreme effort to reach a settlement, had made that effort impossible, the Premier concluded.

London Press Comment.

London, April 23.—"A thunderbolt," "a bombshell," and "appeal to Caesar," and other descriptive expressions are used by the morning newspapers in connection with President Wilson's declarations on the Italian situation. The President's step is treated as a dramatic development at the Peace Conference by most of the journals. Everywhere Mr. Wilson's action is regarded as having created a most serious situation, the unfolding of which will be watched with anxious interest. Such editorials as appear were manifestly written with an eye to Italy's possible withdrawal from the conference, though Premier Orlando's announcement of his decision to quit Paris had not reached London when the papers were published.

TROOPS FROM ITALY WILL HOLD THE ENTIRE DALMATIAN COAST

Two Hundred Thousand Men Will Be Sent to Occupy the Territory, Including Fiume, Now in Dispute.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 24.—Italian military forces will occupy that part of Dalmatia and other Adriatic territory named in the Treaty of London with about one hundred thousand men, it is said today by Captain Posai, of Premier Orlando's staff. A similar force, the captain added, would be sent to the northern region and around Fiume.

Italian headquarters announced that the parliament of Italy would meet shortly after Premier Orlando's return. Preliminary instructions have already been telegraphed to Rome. The French Foreign Office said today that instead of announcing a complete rupture, Premier Orlando's letter to Premiers Lloyd George and Clemenceau asked whether, in view of circumstances, further Italian participation in the conference would be useful. It is said the premiers will make a joint answer. It was declared by Premier Lloyd George that the Italians would leave Paris today.

WANT SOLDIERS FOR TEACHERS

HON. DR. CODY SAYS THEY WOULD BE USEFUL INSTRUCTORS.

Toronto, April 24.—No person declared Hon. Dr. H. J. Cody, Minister of Education at the annual reunion of members of the alumni of the Faculty of Education yesterday, could teach patriotism to school children, or exert such an influence for good upon them, as the returned soldier. Children were hero worshippers, Dr. Cody said and the influence of the returned hero was proportionately great. Realizing this his department were doing all in their power to induce returned men to enter the teaching profession.

Yesterday, Dr. Cody said, he had been trying to work out the outlines of a scheme to get the returned soldiers into the schools and had, he thought, succeeded in getting the right man to take hold of the new movement. "We must be missionaries and go out after them," the speaker said. "We must organize a propaganda that will bring them into our schools."

UNIONIST PARTY STILL IN ACCORD

PROHIBITION AND GAMBLING QUESTION DISCUSSED AT CAUCUS THIS MORNING

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, April 24.—At a Unionist caucus this morning it is understood that government supporters were invited to express their views as to the action government should take in regard to prohibition, race track gambling and other matters. Considerable diversion of opinion but no serious differences materialized. It is regarded as possible that the government's attitude regarding the tariff and Franchise Act may be deferred until the return of Sir Robert Borden.

A. F. Crosby, returned soldier, has been appointed farmer at the Oxford House of Refuge and Industrial Farm.

The fine weather the past few days has put the higher-lying lands in Ontario county in fine condition, and active seeding operations have commenced.

THE BRIDGE-BUILDING CONTRACT.

ONCE THE ALDERMEN decided to construct a concrete rather than a steel bridge, to adopt the cost-plus plan, and to put up the structure, with slight modifications, according to the original plans, they had no alternative but to accept the tender of the Russell-Townsend Company of Toronto, that being the lowest and the firm reliable in every respect.

Of course, there is sure to be a difference of opinion not only among the aldermen themselves but among the ratepayers as well. There are those who still pin their faith to a steel bridge, while others believe in nothing but concrete. The cost-plus basis is another feature that is likely to prove a fruitful source of debate. Still there must be a general feeling of relief that something definite has at last been decided upon, and that there is a prospect of work on the bridge beginning in the immediate future.

The standing of the Russell-Townsend Company is of the highest in the commercial agencies. The three members of the firm have had long experience in this class of work. In all their business career they have on only one occasion found it necessary to avail themselves of the cost-plus provision in their contract. Their business reputation depends upon their ability to keep within their estimate in this case.

The majority of the local workers engaged upon the bridge will be carpenters. The Carpenters' Union will demand 67½ cents an hour and an eight-hour work day after May 1, and the Russell-Townsend Company is obliged to pay the rate of wages current in Peterborough. The laborers of the city, who will also be employed in large numbers, will demand 50 cents an hour. No one can tell how the labor situation is likely to develop during the two years that will be required to complete the bridge. The markets, too, are uncertain. Even the most astute business man cannot read the industrial future so far ahead. This is the justification for the cost-plus plan. The city in the meantime stands a chance to see the cost of the construction work kept within the $249,200 estimate.

TAXING OUTSIDE CONTRACTORS.

PETERBOROUGH joined with other municipalities in Ontario in a request to the Legislature that the Assessment Act be amended so as to permit of the levying a tax upon contractors from one city who secure business in another. So far as announced, however, no such change has been made.

The Russell-Townsend Company of Toronto, if the present program of the Council goes through, will for the next two years carry on a business in this city which, as a dividend earner, will probably be second to none in Peterborough. The contractors need not worry. Whatever happens in the industrial world, their profits are assured. They will in the meantime pay no taxes in the city, unless their office building is assessed, and the civic revenue from that source would be insignificant. Two local contractors, whose business standing is of the first rank and whose reputations for square dealing have been established, tendered for the bridge, but their bids were too high, the local men probably figuring so as to make provision for the payment of their city taxes.

The labor men of the city are assured of first chance in the matter of employment on the bridge, and this is as it should be. It is unfortunate that some special arrangement in the interests of local contractors could not be made. The outside firm may pay taxes in their home city. It is argued that if they were required to pay a tax here for the privilege of doing business they would increase their tender by the estimated amount of this levy, so that the city would really gain nothing. But even if this were so, it would give the local contractors a chance to tender at a lower figure than those offered by outside firms.

THE CASE OF M'CULLOUGH.

THE MAN UNDER sentence to be hanged at once becomes an object of peculiar popular interest. The shadow of death in which he lingers seems to invest him with a new personality. Even the staid citizens, those who cherish the law as something to be preserved inviolate, cannot withhold their sympathy. The unduly sentimental send flowers and comestibles to the man in the death cell. Foolish maidens fall in love with the condemned murderer.

It cannot be possible, however, that one girl, however clever or devoted, was able, unaided, to arrange for the escape of Frank McCullough from the Toronto jail. If Curr ll, the death watch who was on duty when the murderer escaped, was a go-between, the chances are that he was an innocent dupe and never for a moment imagined that he was doing anything wrong. But who was it that made use of the services of the guard?

There is still honor among thieves and other criminals. It is well known that the fraternity of crooks, especially in the United States, is one of the most powerful organizations in the world. The members never desert an associate who falls into the meshes of the law, provided he has always played the game according to the criminal ethical code and has never "welched on a pal."

And McCullough lived up to the constitution of the society of lawbreakers. He had a partner in the escapade which resulted in his own condemnation for murder. That partner escaped. He was unknown to the police, and nothing the officers could do was sufficient to induce McCullough to reveal his friend's identity. According to the code, then, he had shown himself a criminal of parts. The fraternity will stand by him now until the end, will conceal him from the officers, and even if he is recaptured will not abandon their attempts to at least save him from the gallows.

The girl, who has a name suggestive of a moving picture heroine, was not able to evade the police. McCullough, with the assistance that was at his command, has so far done so, and the chances for his recapture appear to decrease day by day. No man could possibly hide as he has hidden himself if left entirely to his own resources and without money in a city and country in which he was a comparative stranger.

Nearly two years ago a number of American pick pockets were arrested while plying their calling at the exhibition in this city. It is recalled that a large sum of money which they had in their possession was forfeited as bail and that they made their escape to the United States. The fraternity of crooks got in their work again.

The noted criminal captured in a big city may be without visible means, and if he has friends they always remain in the background. Still, the prisoner is almost invariably able to secure the services of the best lawyers to conduct his defence.

THE CITY OF FIUME.

THE INTEREST of the entire civilized world is fixed upon the little city of Fiume, the storm centre of the Peace Conference today. Fiume is a part of Hungary—or was before the war changed the map of Europe and the sovereignty of states—and is situated on a branch of the Adriatic Sea, seventy miles from Trieste, another place that figured so prominently in the events of the war. It had a population of 38,955 in 1900, made up of 17,354 Italians and 14,885 Slavs, the remainder being Hungarians and Germans in about equal proportions. If President Wilson's favorite principle of self-determination should be applied to Fiume, the population would probably elect to become a part of Italy.

Fiume is a picturesque old town and abounds with historic interest. Besides containing some splendid church edifices, it has theatres and music halls, a palace for the Emperor of Austria, a high court of justice for commerce and marine, asylums for the insane, homes for the poor, and excellent schools. It is the only seaport that Hungary boasts, so that its importance is easily understood. A large part of the carrying trade belongs to the Cunard line of steamers.

TROUBLE AT THE CONFERENCE.

THE TREATY OF LONDON, to which Britain, France and Italy were signatories, was really the agreement by which Italy consented to abandon Austria and Germany, her nominal allies, and to take the field against the Central Powers. Italy did not lack justification for this course. She pleaded, with reason, that the Triple Alliance was for defensive purposes entirely, and as the war then declared was one of offensive, she was no longer bound by the treaty.

It cannot be denied that Italy did her part in the war. There were times when she appeared to have weakened, but when the situation on the western front was critical last Fall, Italy made her supreme effort, and the Austrians were forced to give up the conflict. Left to carry the burden alone, the Germans had no alternative but to accept the terms of the armistice.

If the morale of the Italian army at one juncture indicated signs of decline, the reason given was that Italy's allies showed a lack of disposition to co-operate. The spirits of the soldiers, however, revived when fifty thousand French, British and American troops joined the Italian forces. That inspired the Italians with new confidence, and the tide of battle in that section of the war zone was turned. It must be remembered, too, that there were half a million Italians fighting with the Allies on the Western front.

As a reward for entering the war, Italy by the Treaty of London was promised that certain territory, at that time part of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, would be hers in the event of victory. The Italians carried out every obligation, and the time came for the implementing of the agreement. It is unfortunate that there is a grave crisis in the Conference over this question, a crisis which threatens a serious rupture.

England and France, according to the latest cabled reports, appear willing to carry out the terms of the treaty. President Wilson, whose country was not a party to that agreement, objects. He believes that the people of the territory in dispute should determine their own destiny, and claims that the Italians really accepted this principle when they agreed to his fourteen articles of peace.

No man, no nation, could forsee the results of the war. It was impossible to anticipate present conditions. It was inconceivable that two of the greatest empires on earth would be disrupted by the disasters of defeat and that independent states with new national aspirations would spring up everywhere. President Wilson's contention is that if Italy's claims are allowed, the new states will be shut out from access to the sea.

Beyond all doubt there is something in this argument. That much must be admitted even by those who are disposed to question President Wilson's right to attempt to abrogate an agreement in the making of which he had no part. If the United States is not bound by a solemn international obligation, as much cannot be said for Britain and France. Still, the question of an outlet to the sea has caused some of the most serious of the old world wars.

COMMON DUTY OF CANADIANS

(Montreal Star.)

During the war we had a genuine democracy in Canada. Labor leaders united with capitalists; the banker, the merchant, the manufacturer and the workman sat around a common table or stood together on public platforms in advocacy of common causes. With these were associated a multitude of capable, devoted, self-sacrificing women who were signally active in patriotic and relief movements and greatly influential in maintaining the spirit of the nation. The press was the energetic ally of war committees and a multitude of kindred associations. It is doubtful if the country at all understands the value of its services or the measure of its devotion. There were no leisure classes. There were no superior people. There was no evasion of public obligations. For the time the country had the benefit of the advice and the service of all its citizens.

It was discovered that responsible leaders of labor were sound advisers in public affairs, that capitalists were concerned for the welfare of the soldiers and the comfort of their dependents and that farmers were equal to exertion and sacrifice for the Commonwealth. Many people who have held aloof from political activities found a satisfaction in public service greater than could be derived from absorption in their own private interests. It is a habit in Canada to sneer at politicans. But the country must be governed and governed by "politicians." If a man has been successful in private business he is under greater obligation to interest himself in the government of the country. If he thinks the State is bedevilled by demagogues how can he excuse himself if he refuses to make any contribution to sound thinking and wise action? His neglect of duty is the country's loss and the demagogue's opportunity. Senator Borah of Idaho declared in the United States Senate a short time ago that democracy makes political cowards. It does, and a good many of the cowards are among the superior people who evade public duty because political controversy is often distasteful, and because there is sometimes misrepresentation and attack. But it is only by debate that the truth is established. How can the people decide wisely if only the agitators and the revolutionists speak through the press and from the platform?

The country needs the reformer and even the agitator has his uses but it needs also the counsel of successful leaders in business and finance, in manufacture and transportation. This we had during the war and this we should have now and in the future. It is not enough for influential people to get the ear of ministers or organize a lobby. They should speak through the press and through public meetings, in confidence that the Canadian people when they have the facts will pronounce a sound judgment. If they are too busy for "politics" why should they complain if they suffer through "politics." It is desirable that Labor and agriculture should have adequate representation in Parliament. It is doubtful if in the past the representation of either element has been adequate. It is just as desirable that the commercial and financial interests should be represented and that Parliament should express the complex life of the nation. There is no such conflict between separate interests as we sometimes seem to believe. A good deal of suspicion arises through sheer misunderstanding. It is a gross mistake to think that a capitalist must be hostile to labor or that employers desire to plunder their workmen. There are grasping capitalists and greedy employers but there are also demagogues in labor organization who are as unreasonable and unlovely as the predatory element in other classes.

Canada requires the best counsel of the best people in all classes and when all is said those who profess to despise "politics" and hold ward meetings and political conventions in contempt are the worst classes in a democracy and least deserve the goodwill and confidence of their fellows. In Canada we have been wasteful and profligate. We are not making the best of our resources. We have squandered hundreds of millions in doubtful political projects and uncommercial undertakings. We are too easily stampeded by sectional demands. We are too willing to believe that lung power is brain power and that a few strident voices express the settled judgment of the people. Wisdom lingers but knowledge does not come and cannot come until "politics" becomes the common interest and the leaders of all classes accept public service as the first obligation of citizens in a free country.

TO-DAY'S STORY

(By Ruth Russell.)

Sinn Fein canes click-clacked on the floor.

"S-sh!" hissed those who had come for the play alone. In the dim light of the 6-penny pit I could see their breath vaporise in the cold air of Abbey theatre.

In the hut interior on the stage Marie nic Shiubhlaigh was impersonating Ireland in W. B. Yeats' "Cathleen ni Houlihan." It was a tense play for Lady Gregory to present in tense times.

Cathleen let her black shawl fall back. The eyes in her thin, white face burned into the eyes of the boy kneeling at her feet.

"Many have died for me in the past," she slowly intoned, "and many will die—tomorrow."

"Aye—the volunteers!" muttered a thin youth near by, and the cane barrage went off again.

"Will you hush?" protested the drama lovers.

Cathleen left the door of the hut. The boy to whom she brought her message pushed aside mother, father and the girl with the $500 in gold, and followed. Cathleen's voice floated back, chanting:

"Many that are red-cheeked today will be pale-cheeked tomorrow. But they—they shall be remembered forev-er."

"Think shame!" came the quick rebuke of the Sinn Feiners. Meanwhile I resolved to stamp at the first opportunity, for the leather bench was unwarmable, my turned-up cravenette collar stuck with something of the comfort of sheet metal into my cheeks, and my feet were ice.

Up on the stage the boy had disappeared, and the father asked an entering younger son:

"Did you see the old woman Michal followed down the road?"

In one burst of applause, Sinn Feiners and play lovers united. It was an ending that satisfied both eager factions. Outside in the lobby was a tea room where a big black tea kettle was steaming on a gas stove. But few went out. Men and women replaced their hats, and stayed to argue dramatic technique or politics. And before the curtain went up on "The Mineral Workers" benignant Lady Gregory, with her black mantilla over her white hair, expressed to me her regret that few new Irish plays had been written and that she did not expect to go to America again.

"We have been barely able to keep our heads above water during the war. But the Dubliner's interest in art and politics makes him come to the theatre even during hard times. It is filled from the 4 shilling to the 6 penny seats. I have known Irish workingmen to go without lunch to buy 6 penny chairs. Here and now you find tremendous spiritual heat."

Then who minds the absence of steam? Dublin has found the great coal substitute?

Palace Chimney Sweeps.

Soot is not worth half what it was twenty or thirty years ago. At that time farmers gladly paid five shillings a sack, using the sweepings of town chimneys to fertilize their fields.

Mr. Jenkins, whose firm, of Lowndescourt, Golden square, holds the royal warrant for sweeping the chimneys of Buckingham Palace, puts down this drop in value to the increased manufacture of artificial manure.

Discussing the statement made at Bow County Court that a chimney-sweep earned not less than £7 weekly, Mr. Jenkins said: "The small master sweep, whose outlay is confined to £4 for his outfit, may make £7 weekly. The journeyman sweep who works for master sweeps probably earns a fixed wage of not more than £4 all the year round.

"The more general use of gas fires has not hit the sweeps' business as much as people think. There is still sweeping to be done where a gas fire is installed, but the soot is brown instead of black."

Conditions of work are so hard and disagreeable that boys are refusing to be apprenticed to sweeps.

At Last!

There are few cyclists who, when compelled to execute repairs to inner tubes by the roadside, have not longed for unpuncturable tires. This desideratum now seems to have become an accomplished fact in Sweden, where the shortage of rubber has caused great efforts to be made to find a satisfactory substitute for the pneumatic tire. The new device consists of a thin strip of hardened steel supported on the rim by springs, the combination being said to give results comparable with those obtained by the use of rubber. Skidding is prevented by the sharp edge of the steel tread, while such tires are, of course, quite unpuncturable. Whether the new device will survive when rubber again becomes plentiful is perhaps doubtful, but as a war-time measure it has proved very useful.—Chambers Journal.

Disliked His Partner.

He was not a good card player. He admitted it. But that was no reason why his partner should be so disagreeable. After a particularly glaring error the pestering partner turned on him. "Why didn't you follow my lead?" he asked. "If I followed anybody's, sir," exclaimed the novice, hotly, "it certainly wouldn't be yours!" His partner sneered and subsided. But in the next hand he threw down his cards in desperation. "Look here!" he cried. "Didn't you see me call for a spade or club? Have you no black suit?" "Yes, I have," cried the novice with warmth. "But I'm keeping it for your funeral."

Saving Paper.

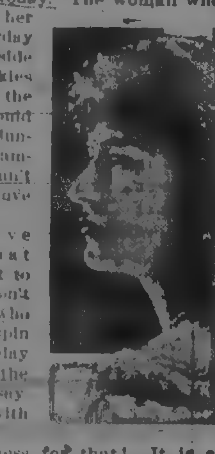
THROUGH THE LOOKING-GLASS.

By EVELYN NESBIT.



The unselfish woman of yesterday does not exist today. The woman who would spend her precious Saturday afternoons inside baking cookies and pastries, the woman who would spend her Sundays cooking family dinners, can't be bought for love or money.

Women have discovered that they, too, want to live. You won't find a woman who will toil and spin 24 hours a day and smile at the end of it and say "All's right with the world."

Thank goodness for that! It is a fortunate thing that the entirely unselfish woman no longer exists or that any woman who still is constituted after this fashion is not appreciated these days.

We don't want martyrs in our homes any more. The day of slaves is gone, the woman who still has no time for self-development—which is what the "selfish" women of today are doing—is out of place. The labor-saving household devices were not invented as ornaments. They were invented so that women would use them and have time to become more wonderful and better as a result.

The world is too wide-awake to be able to tolerate a woman who can speak only of how she starches curtains and how she cooks her potroast tender. The world wants women who read the newspapers, who know something of the progress of science and invention, who take more than a casual peep out their back doors. The unselfish woman who sacrifices herself for her home to such an extent that she cannot develop her mind and soul is a creature of the dark ages. We want the "selfish" women who have learned how to devote the least time to irksome duties and the greatest amount of time to improving their minds and making themselves happy.

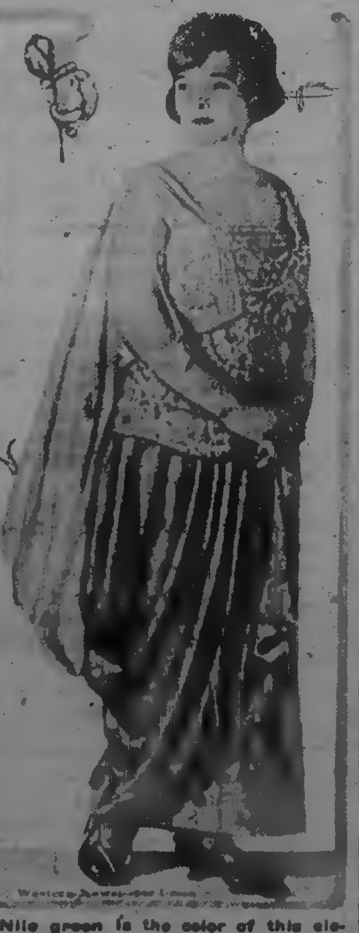
HARMONY IN THE WARDROBE

Combinations of Colors May Be Adopted, Enabling Each to Have Own Color Scheme.

Ever since she became old enough to have any serious thoughts about her personal appearance, a certain girl has had a desire for perfect harmony in dress. The combination of a purple dress, a red hat and a brown coat, for instance, distressed her.

A scant purse made it impossible for her to purchase a complete new outfit every time one new garment was added to the wardrobe, so she conceived the idea of adopting a color scheme for herself. She chose blue and brown, as these had always been favorite and becoming colors. These colors combine beautifully, never clash, and the combination can be found in materials suitable to all seasons and occasions. After she made up her mind she was never tempted to depart from her rule of purchasing garments in some shade of her adopted colors only, and soon perfect harmony prevailed in her wardrobe.

BEAUTIFUL EVENING GOWN



Nile green is the color of this elegant evening gown. The draped skirt is of chiffon velvet, while the basque-like waist is formed of brocaded velvet of the same shade. Large squares of tulle make the sleeves, and there is a touch of silver net at the neck.

Admiral Jellicoe Tells Story of the Grand Fleet During Early Days of War

ADMIRAL JELLICOE'S book about the operation of the Grand Fleet from the time he took command in 1914 until he relinquished it to Sir David Beatty in 1916 does not tell us all we should like to know, but it does contain some important new matter and throws light upon places hitherto dark. Undoubtedly it does give Germany information that she would have spent millions to acquire three or four years ago, especially the fact, disquieting even now, that the British Grand Fleet when the war broke out, and for perhaps a couple of years afterward, did not have that sufficient margin of superiority to set at rest all fears as to the result of a conflict between the two. When Sir David Beatty took charge the margin of superiority was great and increasing every month, until in the closing months of the war the German navy would have had little more chance against the Grand Fleet than would the Swiss navy. It may be, however, that Beatty would have handled the navy better, or rather more daringly, even if he had no margin of superiority in material. Jellicoe seems to have been handicapped by an imagination that caused him constantly to speculate as to the disastrous results of defeat — not the frame of mind for a fighting man, but perhaps proper enough for a civilian administrator.

It would be unfair to a gallant and brilliant officer to suppose that the Grand Fleet was handled under Jellicoe with any timidity. It was looking for the German fleet, ready to carry the fight to it from the day war broke out. But Jellicoe was cautious. He took as few risks as possible. Had he taken greater risks—had he been a man more like Beatty—the German fleet might have been utterly destroyed at Jutland. On the other hand, the British fleet might have been destroyed, and the islands thrown open for invasion. Mr. Asquith said in the House that the possibility of invasion had to be taken account of. In his book, Jellicoe says that the Grand Fleet was practically the whole fleet; there was no reserve of any account. A disaster to the Grand Fleet would have been irretrievable. It would have meant the swift ending of the war. When Nelson fought at Trafalgar, he had under him only a part of the British navy, and that the smaller part. Had it been destroyed, the victorious French would have had to fight even a greater fleet before they could command the seas.

The responsibility for this situation, for the small margin, for a score of defects in ships and docks and equipment, must rest with the politicians who in the days before the war cut the navy's appropriations, disregarded the advice of the experts, and otherwise did their radical best to steer the country toward destruction. When the war broke out the German navy had a great superiority in destroyers, more than [illegible] as against Britain. Her shells were better, and they were better at Jutland. Her guns were better and more numerous. Her torpedoes were frankly feared by Jellicoe, and it was this fear more than anything else that made him [illegible]. The German fleet was [illegible] short of officers, but as Jellicoe says, this was not the case with the British navy, and he blames political pressure in the days before the war. He admits that the German navy lacked the initiative, resource and seamanlike qualities of the British navy but says that the Hun sailors were highly disciplined and well trained.

The Battle of Jutland appears to have been an accident. The German High Seas Fleet went out to capture some British light cruisers reported near the Skaggerack. Here it encountered Beatty with his cruiser squadron. This was early in the afternoon and the weather was thick, but by six o'clock Beatty had [illegible] the enemy's leading [illegible] and was driving them off the [illegible]. Beatty, as a writer in the New York [illegible] remarks, does not seem to have been aware that there was such a thing as a torpedo. At least his report [illegible] no reference to [illegible]. His idea was to hold the enemy in action until the Grand Fleet arrived or to drive him toward the Grand Fleet. When Jellicoe got up, however, he hesitated to close in on account of the torpedoes, and consequently could not get close enough for effective gunfire, for modern torpedoes have almost the range of big guns, and the enemy taking advantage of the falling night and a thick smoke screen was able to disengage himself in the dark and make off. Fear of running into a mined area or a submarine trap made the pursuit cautious.

Viscount Jellicoe's book explains why such mystery was thrown round the sinking of the Audacious. He had such a small margin of superiority that he dared not let Germany know that this great ship had been sunk by a mine. He speaks of the sorrow and even consternation in the navy when the Hampshire with Lord Kitchener aboard was lost. This was due not to a submarine, but to a mine. The disaster occurred in very bad weather, and it is possible that the mine had drifted in the path of the vessel. There was no way it could have been avoided unless Lord Kitchener could have been induced to postpone his sailing until the weather cleared and the track could be again swept, but he never would have consented, and so he went to his death. He was below when the explosion occurred, but was escorted to the deck and a boat was being prepared to launch him and his staff. The storm prevented the launching, and he was not seen after the vessel sank. On the whole, one gathers from the book that Viscount Jellicoe did the best and wisest thing with the Grand Fleet in all the circumstances. He could have done better, many men could have done better if the British Government had given the navy proper backing in the years immediately preceding the war.

Soldiers and the Battlefields.

Battlefield touring, curiously enough, seems to be becoming popular among the troops in France, as a means of passing the time until general demobilization is ordered. The soldiers are invariably interested in the sectors of the front other than those which were scenes of their own exploits. A system of short leaves has been authorized, and lorries detailed for the tours. Ypres, Messines, Arras, and Albert, are easily first as sight-seeing centres, but places of lesser fame, such as Boesinghe and Wood 15, Bois Grenier, Combles and La Prie Farm, Epehy, and Bouries, are all claiming their crowds.

Digestible Cheese.

By experiments on the digestibility of cheese it has been shown that much depends on the special physical character of the food. All fat cheeses are said to be dissolved and digested with great rapidity, because the molecules of casein—the nitrogenous part of the cheese—are separated only by the fat, and so the gastric juice can attack a large surface of the cheese at one time. Whether the cheese be hard or soft does not appear to influence digestion, and there is no connection between the digestibility and the percentage of water present in the cheese.

Glasgow has now supplanted Birmingham in the honor of being the second largest city of the United Kingdom.

AIR PIRATES.

They May Become a Menace in the Future.

The Dutch paper Telegraaf reported that on November [illegible] airplanes dropped bombs on the castle at Swalmen, where the ex-Crown Prince of Germany is staying.

No suggestion is made as to the nationality of the airplanes, except by the parenthetical remark that Swalmen is only three miles from the German frontier. The report does not mention any casualties, nor does it say how the ex-prince bore himself under fire, though it would have been interesting to have known; since, according to popular report, he has had no previous experience during the war of being under fire, having left all that to the German "cannon fodder," which he so recklessly and cynically sacrificed.

The report is vague in the extreme, but whether or not true, it suggests various exciting possibilities in the future. Piracy and smuggling by airplane are possibilities not to be overlooked. Of course, while all Europe is still armed, and the German army resembles a pack of wolves without a pack leader, nothing could be easier than for some German airmen who disapprove of the ex-crown prince's conduct in general and are resolved that no counter revolution shall ever make him emperor, to paint out the national marks on their machines, fly high above the clouds into Holland, dive upon his residence and release their bombs. In any force still retaining its discipline, and the discipline of active service at that, such action would be wildly impossible.

In times of peace such raids would be less easy. All airdromes and their airplanes will, of course, be registered; the movements of aircraft will be even more strictly under observation than those of seagoing ships, for the simple reason that their periods of absence from terra firma are necessarily much briefer.

Moreover, air pirates could never stop a commercial airplane and call on it to "stand and deliver." They could never get away with booty, and therefore their operations could only be destructive and not profitable.

But one must not overlook the possibility that a power as evil disposed and reckless as Germany was in 1914 might suddenly begin a systematic attack on all the aircraft of a rival. The experiences of the past warn us to be cautious in the future.

It will be the task of the Royal Air Force to guard the air merchantmen of Britain. For years their work may be as bloodless as was the work of the navy from Navarino to 1914, but the navy was needed at last, and it would be very rash to declare that the Royal Air Force will never again send a foe down in flames.

We must remain prepared on land, on the sea, and, last, but not least, in the air.

Just Found It Out.

Manuel is a Mexican. He runs a chili wagon on Main street and up to a day or so ago had had a good record. But on the fatal day he found himself before a judge charged with assault and battery.

"Why did you beat that man?" asked the judge.

"He called me something, senor," answered Manuel politely.

"What did he call you?"

"El rhinoceros, senor judge."

"A rhinoceros! When was this?"

"Three years ago," responded Manuel, and the court nearly fell off the bench.

"You mean that you hit a man yesterday on account of something he called you three years ago?" demanded the judge.

"Si, senor! Up until that accursed yesterday I have not seen a rhinoceros. Only yesterday do I learn the [illegible] size of the insult."

OMEMEE

(Special Correspondence.)

Omemee, April 24—Mr. and Mrs Arthur McCrea, of Toronto, were Easter guests at the home of Mr. McCrea's mother.

Miss Blanche Elliott, of Toronto spent the week-end with her aunts, the Misses English.

Miss Baisdon, of Whitby, spent the Easter holiday with her sister, Mrs Norcombe.

The many friends of Miss Jennie Smyth are delighted to see her around again after a most serious illness.

Mr. Charles McCaffrey spent the week-end with his father, Charlie, as he is familiarly called, returned from overseas about three weeks ago.

Mrs. Arksey and little daughter, of Lindsay, were the guests of Miss Jewett on Good Friday.

Among the many Easter visitors to Omemee were Flight-Lieut. James and Pte. William McGhie, sons of Mr. John McGhie, former residents of Omemee, both boys receiving a hearty welcome from their numerous old Omemee friends.

Miss Edith Ferr, accompanied Miss Millard to her home in Fort Erie, where they will spend the Easter holiday.

Miss MacDonagh left for her home in Niagara Falls on Good Friday.

Miss Lillian Bedmead, who has been teaching school at Nunnett, is spending the Easter holiday with Mr. and Mrs. A. Scott.

The 21st convention of the Woman's Missionary Society, Lindsay district, was held in the Methodist church Omemee, on Thursday, the 17, and was largely attended by delegates from all parts of the district.

Mrs. J. M. Whyte opened the morning session, after which the secretary, Mrs. (Dr.) Nesbitt, gave her report. The afternoon session opening exercises were conducted by Mrs. (Rev.) Tilton, of Lindsay, after which greetings from sister societies were given by the president of Christ church society, Mrs. Clarke, and president Mrs. Wilson, of the Presbyterian church. Miss Flavelle, B.A., of Lindsay, gave an interesting address her subject being "Redeeming the Time," after which a conference of auxiliary circles and bands was held. Mrs. (Rev.) Barrett, of Fenlon Falls spoke on auxiliary problems and how to overcome them, following which Mrs. Cuthbert, of Lindsay, spoke on "Is the Mission Band Important?" Solo by Miss Lyons, of Lindsay. Consecration service was then conducted by Mrs. (Rev.) Coon, of Lindsay.

Tea was served in the basement of the church. Following the afternoon session, many delegates left on the evening train. The Rev. Mr. Lewis conducted the opening exercises of the evening session. A report of the afternoon meeting was given, after which Miss Rita Johnson rendered a pleasing solo.

Miss Brooks, a returned missionary from China, was the speaker of the evening and her talk was most interesting.

During the offertory, the choir rendered a splendid missionary anthem.

Mrs. Lewis gave a talk on systematic giving.

Mrs. Murray, of Peterboro, was a visitor to Omemee on Saturday.

Mr. John Morrison, of Peterboro, was in the village renewing old acquaintances on Tuesday.

Mr. McGillvary, of Balsover, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. S. Stinson Easter Sunday.

Mr. Will. White, of Toronto, spent the Easter vacation at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lamb.

Rev. Mr. Langford, of Toronto, is conducting a series of meetings in Christ church this week in the interest of missions.

The grim reaper death visited our village last week, taking away a life-long resident in the person of Mr. William Gardener. Mr. Gardener, who has been in failing health for the past year, had reached the venerable age of eighty-nine years. For many years, the late gentleman served the village as tax collector and the well-known figure will be missed by young and old. The funeral, which was held on Saturday, was largely attended. To the sorrowing wife, is extended the sympathy of the community at large.

The funeral of the late Mr. Valentine Shaw, which was held last week, was largely attended.

Death visited the home of Mr. Frank Fitch on April 15th, taking therefrom the wife and mother of the home. Mrs Fitch, who has been in failing health all winter, had reached the age of 77 years.

The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Lewis on Thursday, the funeral being largely attended.

Left to mourn the loss of a loving wife and mother are the sorrowing husband and one daughter and three sons, viz: Mrs. Foster, of Carberry, Man.; George, William and Samuel, at home.

Pte. Stewart Bannan, who left Omemee when the first call to arms came, although only sixteen years old at the time, returned home, unannounced on Tuesday morning. Stewart has been through the thick of it, and has many interesting tales to tell. He was one of 15 of the old 14th Battalion of Montreal to return. The people of that city gave them a rousing reception on Sunday last.

Pte. Harold Underwood, who signed up to fight for King and country in the early stages of the war and who for many months was a prisoner of war in Germany, returned to Omemee this week and is being given a hearty welcome home by his many old friends.

Miss Murphy, the new principal for our High school, accompanied by her mother, has taken up residence in the village, having rented the house recently occupied by Mr and Mrs. Weaver.

A very quiet wedding was solemnized early Wednesday morning in the Presbyterian church by the Rev. J. P MacInnis when Ethel, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Robert Boyd became the bride of John Windrim. The happy couple left on the morning train for Toronto and points west amid showers of rice, confetti and good wishes. Congratulations.

Have you seen the Hydro Lamp Shop yet? 202 Charlotte street.

CORP. FRED RUSH HOME TONIGHT

OVER THREE YEARS AT FRONT AND ESCAPED WITHOUT WOUND

Corp. Fred Rush, son of Mrs. T. O Rush, 359 Stewart street, will arrive home this evening. He enlisted in 1915 with the 2nd Pioneer at Halifax, was later transferred to the 5th Battery and though he was three years and three months at the front, escaped without a scratch. At the time of enlisting Corp. Rush was an engineer on the Transcontinental Railway. He is 24 years old and married. A host of admiring friends will welcome him home.

A bill is to be introduced in the Nova Scotia legislature providing for 2½ per cent. beer.

HAVELOCK

(Special Correspondence)

J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., was home for the Easter recess.

Mr. A. D. Ormiston, of Toronto, spent Tuesday in town on business.

Mrs. Oscar Brecken, of Toronto, was the guest of Mrs. Sawyer for a few days last week.

Mr. E. Youmans left on Monday for Claydon, Sask., to bring his daughter Mrs. Harry Buchanan, home.

Mrs. Jas. Campbell has returned home after spending the past two months in Sundridge and Toronto.

Miss Mary Crowe is attending the annual convention of the Ontario Educational Association in Toronto this week.

School closed for the Easter recess on Thursday last, and the teachers are spending the holidays at their respective homes.

Mrs. Geo. Barlow, of Madoc, is the guest of her son, Mr. Isaac Barlow. Mrs. Barlow is in her 93rd year, but is still remarkably active and strong despite her very extreme old age.

The members of the Trenton Club play, "The New Co-ed," go to Norwood tonight, where they will put on that popular comedy drama under the auspices of the I.O.D.E. of that village.

Major J. C. Dyer, of Jacksonville, Fla., who has been in Uncle Sam's forces since leaving Canada in 1917 was in town this week renewing old acquaintances. Major Dyer has been retired from the U.S. National army and is going west, where he intends to locate. Mrs. Dyer and children are well but did not come east of Toronto.

Among those who attended the Masonic "At Home" on Monday night were Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ivory, Mrs. White and Mr Jas. White, Mr Tug Wilson and Miss Wilson, of Toronto, Mr. C. I. Pulfer and Miss Edith, of Norwood, Mr. and Mrs. H Bound, of Peterboro.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

Gave Musicale At Nicholls Hospital

MRS. J. H. RENWICK AND PARTY ENTERTAINED THE PATIENTS

A musicale was given at Nicholls Hospital yesterday afternoon, under the direction of Mrs. J. H. Renwick and was much appreciated by the staff and patients.

Miss Lora Logan gave two beautiful violin selections. Mrs. Logan accompanied her. The following young ladies gave well chosen solos, which were much appreciated, Miss Emma Worth, Miss Doris Rathbone, Miss Ida Wilson, Miss Myrtle Saccon and Miss Fern Johnston. Miss Isobel Baird accompanied them and played piano solos. Mr. Jock Renwick gave a mandolin selection.

BOOKS AT LIBRARY

So many juvenile books have lately been received at the Public Library that it is impossible to have them mentioned in the press. When the new children's department is opened, which will be shortly, the boys and girls will have ample opportunity afforded them of roaming among the shelves and examining them for themselves. This list, therefore, will be confined entirely to the books that have been purchased for adult members of the Library.

Open Your Surface Drains.

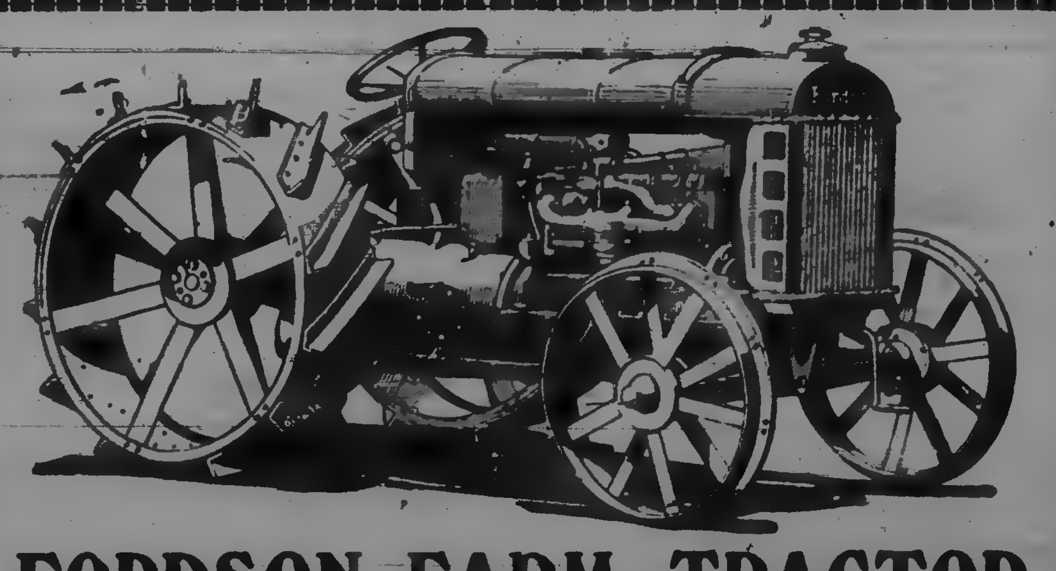
Drainage—either surface or underground—is essential if farming is to be profitable. With the dearth of ditching machinery, the depleted labour market and the increased cost of underdraining, progress is retarded somewhat. Everything, however, has been done which prevailing conditions permit. Yet forty per cent (40%) of Ontario is in urgent need of drainage. The underdrainage of so much cannot be accomplished in a short period of time, hence that which renders timely service, even though only of temporary duration, must be taken advantage of.

Surface draining must be resorted to. Several lines will be necessary. Indeed, if the majority of farmers would leave all "finishing" furrows open in the ploughed ground and connect them by opening up cross channels through the lower-lying parts of the field—cleaning out all the furrows thus traversed—a system would be formed whereby the water could be carried to outlets quickly, efficiently and satisfactorily in the early spring.

Not alone to level fields or farms does this apply. Large areas of Ontario are quite rolling, hence naturally drained. Yet, a small open ditch or deep furrow will pay for the trouble necessary to make a channel by the greater ease with which water can escape, thus permitting quicker disposal of the same, hence hastening the drying of the land.

These surface drains should be opened at least once per year. The best time to do so is in the late autumn after the fall work is done. Labour can be obtained then with less difficulty and at less cost. The work may be done by hand or by the use of a team if water does not prevent.

Surface draining, however, is not recommended to take the place of tiling.—Thos. Cooper, B.S.A., O. A. College, Guelph.



FORDSON FARM TRACTOR
SAVES TIME AND LABOR

FORDSON FARM TRACTORS may be observed in many fields along the country roads. Time is so vital to the farmer that they are now a matter of the hour.

There are hundreds of testimonials which indicate the many practical applications and uses to which farmers are putting this latest farm utility, showing that they realize the tractor's great possibility as a necessary part of their equipment. Never tired they help him all day long and day and night if necessary.

REPLACING FARM HORSES

During the turbulent period just passed it has been the job of the farmer of this continent to assist in feeding the entire world. And the demand for their produce is not likely to see any decrease. It is therefore obvious that the indispensability of the tractor will fast replace farm horses in many instances.

ELIMINATES DRUDGERY

Mechanical farming methods is fast changing from one of drudgery to scientific mechanical production with still greater innovations in sight and a much larger measure of enjoyment.

Let us demonstrate the practicability of the Fordson tractor at any kind of work on the farm.

FATE OF STRIKE IN THE BALANCE

MERCHANTS IN LIMERICK GROW RESTIVE OVER LOSS IN TRADE

Limerick, April 24.—The fate of the strike in Limerick hung in the balance while the executive of the Irish Labor Party conferred with the Limerick strike committee. The conference lasted throughout the entire day.

The meeting which was held in the Mechanics' Institute, continued until nearly 11 o'clock this evening, when the announcement was made to the eagerly waiting crowd that the proposals under discussion were of such importance that a decision on them could not be reached until Thursday.

The people were of the belief that there would be a continuation of the strike and that ultimately the movement would prove successful because of the added statement by the representatives at the meeting that promises of support were coming from all quarters and that the reports of the sub-committees were most satisfactory.

After the announcement the crowd quickly dispersed.

It is reported that the strike leaders are disturbed by a rumor that the merchants are becoming restive over the heavy losses to their profitable trade which the strike involves.

Gen. Shaw, the commander-in-chief in Ireland, who had been in conference with Gen. Griffin, commanding the Limerick district, returned to Dublin today. He was said to be satisfied with the Limerick military situation, which is taken to mean that there will be no extension of the area under military law, which the strikers hoped might be done. It was said at army headquarters today that out of a population of 38,000 in Limerick, 21,000 had applied for and been granted military passes. One pass was issued to Miss Rose Timmins, a leader of the Irish Labor party, who is in Limerick.

An alliance between the Limerick strike committee and the Irish Trades Union Congress and Labor party was arranged at a conference this morning, and a statement has been issued declaring the strike now had become national.

Albanian Honor.

Albania is the step-child of Europe. This lonely race has no affinity with any other stock on the continent, according to the New Republic. Divided between three religions, it can make no single appeal to faith. Its sons are not cosmopolitan traders, permeating western finance and journalism like the enterprising Greeks. There is no one to speak for them save the few travelers who have lived among them. And yet the fact is, that from Byron's day downwards, it would be hard to find a West European who has learned to know the Albanians without admiring them. Consuls, soldiers, missionaries, ethnologists—all come under the spell of this attractive and original race. I have known them myself in all stages of culture. When I survey my own memory's gallery of Balkan character, the men who stand out in it with a certain native aristocracy are nearly all Albanians. They are of all classes and faiths. It was a servant who first excited my curiosity. He was a handsome, spirited lad, and in a time of insurrection I used to employ him to carry large sums of money over a dangerous road. One day when I asked him if he knew a certain short-cut, he answered with the simplest of smiles, "Yes, we always used that path at night when I was with Shahin." Shahin (the falcon) was the most noted brigand of that region. My man then, who had just brought me a big bag of gold, was an ex-brigand. Troubled to know if I dare trust him, I told the story to the Bulgarian bishop. His comment was short and decisive, "The man is an Albanian, is he not?" That was the verdict of an hereditary enemy on this singular race. It has a name for honor.

Knotty Problem.

Here is a queer cause for a law action. A man who was insane determined to throw himself out of the window of an asylum. He made several attempts and was prevented by the servants. Put in a new apartment, he tried again, jumped out of the window, fell on the lawn and injured himself seriously, but, strange to say, the shock cured his mental disorder. At once he sued the officers of the asylum for negligence. The plantiff was nonsuited.

Securing Life's Joys.

The life that knows no setbacks is rare indeed. Even in fiction and the movies a thread of sadness is woven into the garment of gayety. But when the story ends or the curtain falls our sighs give way to smiles, for everything turns out happily after all. Let us accept what comes and be brave and cheerful. Life holds out golden joys to each one of us, but if we do our part to secure them we should not blame fate or circumstances for the showing that we make.

All Are Willing To Act

President J. J. Turner of the Board of Trade is much pleased with the readiness of the representative men of the city to work on the committees now being formed. Among the many cordial letters sent to President Turner, the following are typical comments:

Geo. J. Sherry, Esq., Registrar Supreme Court of Ontario: "I have been waiting for an opportunity and shall be pleased to render such humble service as I may be capable of."

Alva W. Cressman, President Cressman Co.: "It will be a pleasure for me to serve; anything I can do to further the interests of the Board will be cheerfully done."

J. W. Fraser, Manager Bank of Nova Scotia: "I will be glad to 'carry on' for the Board of Trade in whatever capacity it may see fit to appoint me."

Vincent Eastwood, Manager Royal Bank: "Pleased to accept the responsibility."

W. R. Breyfogle, Manager De Laval Co.: "Willing to do what I can to help."

E. H. D. Hall, Esq.: "If the purpose of the committee on research and recommendation is to find out what there is to do and the way to do it, I'll gladly serve."

John I. Allen, Superintendent Prudential Life: "Will do all I possibly can to aid the work of the Board in Peterborough."

Wm. A. Richardson, Secretary-treasurer Peterborough Canoe Co.: "Will be glad to act."

H. W. Cressman, Vice-president Cressman Co.: "Pleased to act on the Board Committee to which I have been nominated."

Wm. Sangster, Canadian General: "Glad to assist in any way I can."

W. H. Dunsford, Manager Bank of Commerce: "Glad to act."

Alex. McGregor, editor The Review: "I shall be glad to accept your invitation. No other department of the work so appeals to me."

Roland M. Glover, Manager Director The Examiner: "Pleased to accept appointment on the Civic Education Committee. Will do all in my power to make the work satisfactory to the Board in the city's interest."

H. O. Fisk, Utilities Commission: "Pleased to do anything I can."

Edgar Worth, Secretary-treasurer Bonner-Worth: "Will be glad to give any assistance that I am capable of."

W. S. Campbell, Traffic Manager Canadian General: "Glad to work for the advancement of the best moderate-sized city in Canada."

Capt. R. E. Layfield, C. G. E.: "Will attend to any matters to the best of my ability."

A. E. Dawson, Manager Imperial Life: "Shall be glad to stand for the sustaining fund committee."

John J. Hartley: "Willing to act in any capacity in which you think I will be of service."

"W. R. Morris, Accountant: "Will be very much pleased to do anything in my power to further the good work of the Board."

The bylaws and governing rules of the Board are in preparation and will be submitted to a general meeting to be held on Friday evening, May 9th.

All the standing and special committees will be completed by that time and passed upon.

Membership applications are coming to the Board daily. It is intended that the membership shall be at least five hundred.

The raising of the Sustaining Fund is in the hands of J. J. Turner, President; Geo. N. Gordon, Chairman; A. E. Dawson, Secretary; D. B. Hall, J. W. Fraser and W. B. Breyfogle. Committees representing all of the sections of the Board are to work with the main committee, the intention being to report the finished job at the general meeting, May 9th.

Soldiers!

Two trench-stained Tommies dishevelled, torn, wounded and highly untidy, were on leave in London. They stood in Trafalgar Square when there approached a detachment of the Windsor Guard in silver trappings, plumed helmets, red coats, long varnished boots shining like mirrors, and kid gloves. The Tommies looked on in silence a moment, and then one nudged the other, and said in an awed voice, "Look, Bill—sojers."

Snakes Once Human.

The pious Hindu believes the snake to be the reincarnation of some human being, possibly a great philosopher, and he has the assurance that the deities he worships will protect him from these venomous reptiles. Sometimes one sees a Hindu before an altar in a temple with a serpent in the folds of his cloak. Suddenly he permits the snake to sting him, showing the blood flowing from an undisputed wound. He then takes a black stone from his pocket, rubs it over the bleeding spot, then, muttering many incantations he makes passes over his body. A few moments later he assures his audience that the bite, which would have been poisonous otherwise, was made harmless by his prayers and incantations offered to the deity.

Starting Early Celery.

The starting of early celery should be done immediately as the seed is slow in germination; requiring about four weeks before ready for the first transplanting. The seed should be sown in flats in a soil very sandy in nature. This soil is pressed down about ½ an inch in the box and then the celery is sown broadcast over it. The box is then watered through burlap and is left covered with burlap or brown paper until the seed germinates. When the plants are showing two or three leaves they are transplanted into flats, 2 inches each way in soil that is sandy in nature but well-filled with good manure and commercial fertilizer, such of a nitrogeneous nature. Good fertiliser is necessary at this stage so that the plants will not receive any check. The plants should be thoroughly sprayer with Bordeaux Mixture when they first break into third or true leaf, so that they will be kept free from blight, and every week after being set in the field.

Another method in use among growers is that of sowing in hot beds. The seed is planted in rows about 4 inches apart; in making these rows they take a piece of wood about an inch wide and press it down on the soil making a furrow about ½ of an inch deep in which the seed is sown. It is then covered with burlap or paper as stated before.

Celery to germinate properly should be kept at a temperature of 70 degrees until the young plants are growing in good shape, when it is well to lower it to 55 or 60 degrees. —A. H. MacLennan, Ontario Vegetable Specialist.

GRAIN MIXTURE VALUES

Oats 34 Lbs., Barley 48 Lbs. the Best Combination.

By Opening Surface to Rains, Many Dollars May Be Made by Increased Crops—Full Directions Given Regarding Starting Early Celery.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

A LARGE amount of experimental work has been conducted at the Ontario Agricultural College in testing grains both singly and in combination for the production of grain. The results of experiments indicate that there is practically no advantage in growing in combination two or more varieties of grain of the same class. Quite decided advantages, however, have been obtained from certain combinations of grain of different classes.

In an experiment which extended over a period of five years in which oats, barley, spring wheat and peas were grown separately and all the different combination which could be obtained by having two, three and four grains in each mixture, it was found that in about ninety per cent. of the experiments the mixed grains gave a greater yield per acre than the same grains when grown separately. Of the different combinations, oats and barley came at the head of the list, giving slightly over two hundred pounds of grain per acre more than when either one was grown alone.

It is important to use in combination varieties which will grow satisfactorily together and which will mature at the same time. Such varieties as the O.A.C. No. [illegible] barley and the Daubeney, Alaska or O.A.C. No. 3 oats give very good results.

Of twenty-five different mixtures with different proportions of oats and barley used for five years in experimental work it was found that the greatest returns were obtained by using one bushel by weight of each or a mixture of 82 pounds (34 pounds of oats and 48 pounds of barley). —Dr. C. A. Zavitz, O. A. College, Guelph.

Palestine's Salt Mountain.

Palestine possesses a remarkable salt mountain, situated at the south end of the Dead sea. The length of the ridge is six miles, with an average width of three-quarters of a mile, and the height is not far from [illegible] feet. There are places where the overlying earthy deposits are many feet in thickness, but the mass of the mountain is composed of solid rock salt, some of which is as clear as crystal.

DIDN'T HAVE WELL DAY IN FIVE YEARS

TORONTO MAN SAYS TANLAC HAS GIVEN HIM A NEW LEASE ON LIFE.

"I went five long years without enjoying a well day till I started taking Tanlac," said Harvey Hamilton, of 4 Gloucester street, Toronto, Ontario.

"Five years ago," he continued, "I had a severe attack of pneumonia, which left me in a badly rundown condition. I lost weight till I was almost a shadow; I had no life nor energy and could sleep but a few hours at night. I lost my appetite, and the little I did eat soured; I had pains in my stomach and sides, and often had dizzy spells, and I would feel so weak and played out I'd have to cut out working.

"I was in this fix when I read of a man who had been relieved of a trouble like mine by taking Tanlac, so I decided to try it, and feel like I have taken a new lease on life. I have a fine appetite, eat three square meals a day, and have no trouble afterwards. Gas has quit forming on my stomach, the pains have disappeared, I sleep like a log, and have gained six pounds. I feel better all over, and my work is no longer a burden, but is a pleasure to me."

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Care of Cow and Young Calf.

Kindness and cleanliness are the two chief points to observe in caring for dairy stock.

About a week before the young calf is expected, the cow should be placed in a clean, well-bedded, comfortable box-stall. The practice of compelling cows to give birth to their calves, tied in the row, is cruelty for the cows, dangerous for the calf, and bad for the whole herd. Privacy and quietness should be the rule at this time.

The cow should be allowed to lick the calf dry, and should be kept tied until the after-birth is removed. The two may be left together for one to three days. Some remove the calf at once, but if it is to be reared, it should be left with the dam for a short time, in order to give the young animal a good start. Leaving cow and calf together for a day or two also tends to remove inflammation from the udder of the cow.

If necessary the cow's udder should be bathed with warm water or some form of liniment such as camphorated oil, or equal parts of turpentine and vinegar and an egg in one quart of the mixture.

In case the cow and calf are all right, they may be separated in not over three days, and the cow be returned to her regular stall. The calf may be allowed to remain in the box-stall, if not needed for another cow, or be placed in the nursery along with other calves, as this will cause it to forget its "mammy" more quickly. It should receive its mother's milk for a week, whole milk for two or three weeks, then skim milk and other suitable feeds for six months, and be kept dry and clean at all times.—Prof. H. H. Dean, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

Trimming and Staking Tomatoes.

This method of handling tomatoes has come into very extensive use in the past few years among the commercial market gardeners, owing to the high price of land and backyard gardens. The plants as a rule are set two feet apart each way and after planting are given one cultivation. The sticks are then set; driving them down about a foot into the ground and leaving from five to five and a half above the ground. These sticks may be made from mill edgings, saplings or anything else of a similar nature about one and a half inches square and strong enough to hold the plants when the fruit is fully grown. After driving the sticks and tying the plants to them the ground should be covered from four to six inches thick with very strawy manure as a mulch. This mulch will keep the moisture in the ground and, at the same time, remove any necessity for cultivation and other disturbance of the roots. In growing tomatoes on the single stem, such as is used in this method, all side branches which appear where leaf stems join the main stem of the plant are removed as quickly as possible. If they are allowed to grow it will take away very valuable plant food from the growing plant. The plant should be tied every eight or twelve inches to the stake and when they have reached the top are cut off.—A. H. MacLennan, Ontario Vegetable Specialist.

Novel Dance.

"The word "ball," as applied to a dancing party, came to be used in the first instance from an ancient "ball play" given in church by the dean and choir boys of Naples during the Feast of Fools at Easter. At subsequent dancing parties in Naples the dancers threw a ball at one another to the sound of their own singing. They whirled about in measured time, and the sport consisted in loosening hands in time to catch the ball.

Pretty, Isn't It?

There is no altar on earth which vies in marble majesty with the altar of heaven—Tien T'ian—in the south of the Chinese city of Peking, which Emperor Lung-le of the Ming dynasty reared in A. D. 1420, with its triple balustrades, stairs and platforms of pure white marble carved miraculously, its great circle covering a wide area in the midst of a vast inclosure. There the emperor knelt once a year.

THEY ACTED in TIME

During 1917, twenty men, all hale and hearty, insured their lives in the Sun Life of Canada. All paid the first premium, none lived to pay the second.

They paid a total of $5078.26 and their beneficiaries received $[illegible],212.60.

The records for 1918, owing to the ravages of the "Flu," will show the above record repeated many times, and all such acted in time.

What are YOU going to do about it? Act in time or be forever TOO LATE.

BISHOP OF OTTAWA PREACHES ELOQUENT SERMON IN ST. JOHN'S

Beautiful Choral Service Conducted by R. J. Devey, and Union Anglican Choir, in Commemoration of St. George's Day.

The annual choral festival evensong of St. George, the patron Saint of England, was held last night in St. John's church, under the auspices of the parish of St. George, South Peterborough, whose rector, the Rev. A. James Price, had secured the Lord Bishop of Ottawa as the special preacher. A large congregation assembled in St. John's, kindly lent by the officials for this occasion and coming in the Easter octave, a most enjoyable service was held. St. George's Day is also the anniversary of the second battle of Ypres, and this year comes near to the fateful day when the Hun must sign peace terms, for which the men of "St. George and Merry England" have laid down so many precious lives. The noble spirit of chivalry that surrounds the mystic figure of St. George has by no means departed from the English race, but has been well and truly upheld to the death, and the sacrifice of hundreds of thousands of valiant Englishmen once again has proved that "England has to herself been true."

Last night's festival also ranked in the week of music now being held all over the Dominion, and all the Anglican choirs of the city united to sing the ancient liturgical service to the centuries' old musical setting of Thomas Tallis. The chancel only held one half of the choir which over flowed well into the nave and despite this seeming handicap, the singing was excellent, both on the office, the hymns and the Hallelujah chorus. A period of silence was followed by the reverent singing of "Nearer My God to Thee," a tribute to the heroes who made the great sacrifice and in connection with the presence of a large number of the members of Lansdowne lodge of the Sons of England. The service was intoned by Canon Davidson; the first lesson read by the Rev. J. Price; the second lesson read by Mr. Sid Whatley, one of the "Old Contemptibles." and the second part of the office was taken by the Rev. W. H. White, of St. Luke's.

Mr. R. J. Devey conducted and was assisted at the organ by Miss Flowers of All Saints, and Mr. G. Chandler, also of All Saints, led the long white robed procession from the school room to their places in the church.

Mrs. W. A. Greenslade, organist of St. Luke's, also ably assisted in the soprano section of the choir. Indeed, all the musical leaders of the Anglican churches attended and helped to success a most memorable service.

The Bishop's Address.

His Lordship, the Bishop of Ottawa, preached a most eloquent sermon last night, taking as his text the following words from the Old Testament: "Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, said the Lord of Hosts."

Commencing his discourse, the speaker referred to the significance of St George's day, to England, the land which so many of us love as the birth-place of our forefathers, and to the British flag with its base—the cross of St. George.

He referred to the manner in which the crosses of St. Patrick's, St. Andrew's, and the crests of the other British Dominions, had been interwoven upon the national banner with that of St. George, and stated that it was characteristic of the harmony which prevailed in the Empire among the peoples there represented.

His Lordship felt that Britain and her Allies were bound to win the recent war because her system of government was founded upon disciplined freedom and justice, and as in the words of the text, "Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit," we had caught something of the spirit of God as a result of the sufferings and sacrifices of the war.

In speaking of the reconstruction period, upon which we are entering, the Bishop enumerated a few of the essential qualities which must be cultivated if we are to succeed and enjoy that continuity of life which has been the lot of the British Empire for so long.

In the first place a nation must observe the spirit of the text which he had chosen as a basis for his sermon. The state must have power—physical power—back of it, but to be forced to use it was a confession of failure. It should be kept in the background and only used as a last resource.

We must exercise the spirit of steadfastness to a high ideal—that spirit which was so exemplified by our soldiers in the war if the reconstruction period is to be productive of any good. Patience must also be exercised in a great degree if the peoples of our country and empire are to be prevented from splitting into factions and if there is to be much needed reform in our industrial and social life.

The speaker denounced the two mottos, "Business as usual" and "The survival of the fittest." After the recent tremendous upheaval His Lordship felt that it would be ridiculous to assume that business could be carried on in the same old way, and as far as the latter slogan was concerned, the German nation was a typical example of what the adoption of such a creed as that would do when woven into the national life.

He felt that all was not well in Canada at the present time. There were many reforms needed in our industrial and social life before the present state of unrest would pass away.

In conclusion, the speaker referred to two traits of character which should be cultivated and which would prove invaluable when applied to our national life in the days to come. These were sacrifice and service.

Sacrifice, as demonstrated by our soldiers and the kind of service which is not for the individual but is given in the interests of everyone and the nation was what was needed according to the Bishop of Ottawa.

The speaker paid a high tribute to the service in the war of the Merchant Marine. Poor sailors who received no decorations, little credit and none of an individual nature went down with their ships in the interests of their Empire. Men whose widows and orphans were not sustained by any fund in the event of the bread-winners death carried out their dangerous task day by day throughout the war.

THE GODS OF MARS

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

How long I slept upon the floor of the storeroom I do not know, but it must have been many hours. I was awakened with a start by cries of alarm, and scarce were my eyes opened nor had I yet sufficiently collected my wits to quite realize where I was when a fusillade of shots rang out, reverberating through the subterranean corridors in a series of deafening echoes.

In an instant I was upon my feet. A dozen lesser therns confronted us from a large doorway at the opposite end of the storeroom from that which we had entered. About me lay the bodies of my companions, with the exception of Thuvia, Tars Tarkas and [illegible] who, like myself, had been asleep upon the floor and thus escaped the first raking fire.

As I gained my feet the therns lowered their wicked rifles, their faces distorted in mingled chagrin, consternation and alarm.

Instantly I arose to the occasion.

"What means this?" I cried in tones of fierce anger. "Is Sator Throg to be murdered by his own vassals?"

"Have mercy, O master of the tenth cycle!" cried one of the fellows, while the others edged toward the doorway as though to attempt a surreptitious escape from the presence of the mighty one.

"What do you here, fellows?" I asked.

"Two from the outer world are at large within the dominions of the therns. We sought them at the command of the father of therns. One was white with black hair, the other a huge green warrior."

"Here, then, is one of them," spoke Thuvia, indicating the Thark, "and if you will look upon this dead man by the door perhaps you will recognize the other. It was left for Sator Throg and his poor slaves to accomplish what the lesser therns of the guard were unable to do—we have killed one and captured the other. For this has Sator Throg given us our liberty. And now in your stupidity have you come and killed all but myself and like to have killed the mighty Sator Throg himself."

The men looked very sheepish and very scared.

"Had they not better throw these bodies to the plant men and then return to their quarters, O mighty one?" asked Thuvia of me.

"Yes. Do as Thuvia bids you," I said.

As the men picked up the bodies I noticed that the one who stooped to gather up the late Sator Throg started as his closer scrutiny fell upon the upturned face, and then the fellow stole a furtive, sneaking glance in my direction from the corner of his eye.

That he suspicioned something of the truth I could have sworn, but that it was only a suspicion which he did not dare voice was evidenced by his silence.

Again, as he bore the body from the room, he shot a quick but searching glance toward me, and then his eyes fell once more upon the bald and shiny dome of the dead man in his arms. The last fleeting glimpse that I obtained of his profile as he passed from my sight without the chamber revealed a cunning smile of triumph upon his lips.

Only Tars Tarkas, Thuvia and I were left. The fatal marksmanship of the therns had snatched from our companions whatever slender chance they had of gaining the perilous freedom of the world.

So soon as the last of the grewsome procession had disappeared the girl urged us to take up our flight once more.

She, too, had noted the questioning attitude of the thern who had borne Sator Throg away.

"It bodes no good for us, O prince," she said, "for, even though this fellow dared not chance accusing you in error, there be those above with power sufficient to demand a closer scrutiny, and that, prince, would indeed prove fatal."

I shrugged my shoulders. It seemed that in any event the outcome of our plight must end in death. I was refreshed from my sleep, but still weak from loss of blood.

I was discouraged. Never had a feeling of such utter hopelessness come over me in the face of danger. Then the long, flowing yellow locks of the holy thern, caught by some vagrant draft, blew about my face.

Might they not still open the way to freedom? If we acted in time, might we not even yet escape before the general alarm was sounded? We could at least try.

"What will the fellow do first, Thuvia?" I asked. "How long will it be before they may return for us?"

"He will go directly to the father of therns, old Matai Shang. He may have to wait for an audience, but since he is very high among the lesser therns—in fact, a Thorian among them—it will not be long that Matai Shang will keep him waiting.

"Then, if the father of therns puts credence in his story, another hour will see the galleries and chambers, the courts and gardens filled with searchers."

"What we do, then, must be done within an hour. What is the best way, Thuvia, the shortest way out of this celestial hades?"

"Straight to the top of the cliffs, prince," she replied, "and then through the gardens to the inner courts. From there our way will lie within the temples of the therns and across them to the outer courts. Then the ramparts—O prince, it is hopeless! Ten thousand warriors could not hew a way to liberty from out this awful place!

"Since the beginning of time, little by little, stone by stone, have the therns been ever adding to the defenses of their stronghold. A continuous line of impregnable fortifications circles the outer slopes of the mountains of Otz.

"Within the temples that lie behind the ramparts a million fighting men are ever ready. The courts and gardens are filled with slaves, with women and with children.

"None could go a stone's throw without detection."

"If there is no other way, Thuvia, why dwell upon the difficulties of this? We must face them."

"Can we not better make the attempt after dark?" asked Tars Tarkas. "There would seem to be no chance by day."

"There would be a little better chance by night, but even then the ramparts are well guarded, possibly better than by day. There are fewer abroad in the courts and gardens, though," said Thuvia.

"What is the hour?" I asked.

"It was midnight when you released me from my chains," said Thuvia. "Two hours later we reached the storeroom. There you slept for fourteen hours. It must now be nearly sundown again. Come; we will go to some nearby window in the cliff and make sure."

So saying, she led the way through winding corridors until at a sudden turn we came upon an opening which overlooked the valley Dor.

A little below us stood the holy thern on watch upon his balcony. His scarlet robe of office was pulled tight about him in anticipation of the cold that comes so suddenly with darkness as the sun sets.

So rare is the atmosphere of Mars that it absorbs very little heat from the sun. During the daylight hours it is always extremely hot; at night it is intensely cold. Nor does the thin atmosphere refract the sun's rays or diffuse its light as upon earth.

The declining sun lighted brilliantly the eastern banks of Korus, the crimson sward, the gorgeous forest. Beneath the trees we saw feeding many herds of plant men.

Thuvia lost no time in leading us toward the corridor which winds back and forth up through the cliffs toward the surface thousands of feet above the level on which we had been.

Twice great banths, wandering loose through the galleries, blocked our progress, but in each instance Thuvia spoke a low word of command, and the snarling beasts slunk sullenly away.

"If you can dissolve all our obstacles as easily as you master these fierce brutes I can see no difficulties in our way," I said to the girl, smiling. "How do you do it?"

She laughed and then shuddered.

"I do not quite know," she said. "When first I came here I angered Sator Throg because I repulsed him. He ordered me thrown into one of the great pits in the inner gardens. It was filled with banths.

"In my own country I had been accustomed to command. Something in my voice, I do not know what, cowed the beasts as they sprang to attack me.

"Instead of tearing me to pieces, as Sator Throg had desired, they fawned at my feet. So greatly were Sator Throg and his friends amused by the sight that they kept me to train and handle the terrible creatures. I know them all by name.

"There are many of them wandering through these lower regions. They are the scavengers. Many prisoners die here in their chains. The banths solve the problem of sanitation, at least in this respect.

"In the gardens and temples above they are kept in pits. The therns fear them. It is because of the banths that they seldom venture below ground except as their duties call them."

An idea occurred to me, suggested by what Thuvia had just said.

"Why not take a number of banths and set them loose before us above ground?" I asked.

Thuvia laughed.

"It would distract attention from us, I am sure," she said.

She commenced calling in a low singsong voice that was half purr. She continued this as we wound our tedious way through the maze of subterranean passages and chambers.

Presently soft padded feet sounded close behind us, and as I turned I saw a pair of great green eyes shining in the dark shadows at our rear. From a diverging tunnel a sinuous, tawny form crept stealthily toward us.

Low growls and angry snarls assailed our ears on every side as we hastened on, and one by one the ferocious creatures answered the call of their mistress.

She spoke a word to each as it joined us. Like well schooled terriers, they paced the corridors with us, but I could not help but note the lathering jowls nor the hungry expressions with which the terrible beasts eyed Tars Tarkas and myself.

Soon we were entirely surrounded by some fifty of the brutes. Two walked close on either side of Thuvia, as guards might walk. The sleek sides of others now and then touched my own naked limbs.

It was a strange experience, the almost noiseless passage of naked human feet and padded paws; the golden walls splashed with precious stones, the dim light cast by the tiny radium bulbs set at considerable distances along the roof; the huge, maned beasts of prey crowding with low growls about us; the mighty green warrior towering high above us all; myself crowned with the priceless diadem of a holy thern, and leading the procession the beautiful girl Thuvia.

I shall not soon forget it.

Presently we approached a great chamber more brightly lighted than the corridors. Thuvia halted us. Quietly she stole toward the entrance and glanced within. Then she motioned us to follow her.

The room was filled with specimens of the strange beings that inhabit this underworld, a heterogeneous collection of hybrids, the offspring of the prisoners from the outside world, red and green Martians and the white race of therns.

Picking our way carefully, we threaded a winding path across the chamber, the great banths sniffing hungrily at the tempting prey spread before them in such tantalizing and defenseless profusion.

Several times we passed the entrances to other chambers similarly peopled, and twice again we were compelled to cross directly through them. In others were chained prisoners and beasts.

"Why is it that we see no therns?" I asked of Thuvia.

"They seldom traverse the underworld at night, for then it is that the great banths prowl the dim corridors seeking their prey. The therns fear the awful denizens of this cruel and hopeless world that they have fostered and allowed to grow beneath their very feet.

"The prisoners even sometimes turn upon them and rend them. The thern can never tell from what dark shadow an assassin may spring upon his back.

"By day it is different. Then the corridors and chambers are filled with guards passing to and fro. Slaves from the temples above come by hundreds to the granaries and storerooms. All is life then. You did not see it, because I led you not in the beaten tracks, but through roundabout passages seldom used.

"Yet it is possible that we may meet a thern even yet. They do occasionally find it necessary to come here after the sun has set. Because of this I have moved with caution."

But we reached the upper galleries without detection, and presently Thuvia halted us at the foot of a short steep ascent.

PETERBORO MAN IN LEADING ROLE

OSCAR O'SHEA AS FATHER KELLY IN "THE ROSARY" TONIGHT.

"The Rosary," which will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House tonight, is a gripping and forceful drama of modern times from the pen of Edward E. Rose. It has been given a magnificent revival by Messrs. Rowland and Clifford in order to satisfy the increasing and insistent demand for wholesome entertainment in the theatre. Rev. Brian Kelly, the priest in this offering, is one of the most lovable characters in modern drama, and his ministrations succeed as an antidote for the poison of suspicion and unfaith in one household. The play is a lesson and a sermon, but a delightful lesson, and a sermon which is lighted by flashes of humor and clean fun. The members of this company have been selected for their fitness for the various roles, and the production has been made without regard to cost or pains. The coming of this play will mark a red letter day, and the play itself will cause discussion long after it has gone on its way to entertain and amuse other people in other cities.

MINSTRELS IN STREET PARADE

GUS HILL'S BLACK FACE COMEDIANS AT THE GRAND MONDAY

The street parade of black faced minstrels is no new thing for points of the tour of travelling Thespians who find in minstrelsy the best avenue for the expression of their many contrasted talents, but the street parade promised with Gus Hill's Big Minstrels, due at the Grand Opera House on Monday evening next is said to be in and of itself something of a pageant. Also the free-before-the-show-concert at the theatre is said to offer novelties that make it a big success everywhere. The Gus Hill Big Minstrels are reported to be making a prodigious name for themselves everywhere and to be attracting turnaway audiences all along the route. The company is said to be the largest black-face organization extant.

Among the ballads to be found, "Somewhere in Ireland," "Any Old Port in a Storm," "Sunshine Jane," "Dolly Gray," "An Island Entirely Surrounded by Girls," "I Can't Be Bothered by No Mule," and "Old Black Joe."

Whether a conversation overheard by listening in on a party line can be used to prove libel is the point at issue in an interesting test case in Quebec.

The second unit of the Rideau Power Co.'s power house at Merrickville is now in full operation, more than doubling the production of power there.

COBOURNS SAW AND TOOK CHANCE

PRODUCED "THE BETTER 'OLE" WHILE OTHERS DEBATED QUESTION.

When "The Better 'Ole," the comedy with music, which will be seen at the Grand Opera House, Friday and Saturday, Matinee Saturday, was offered to American Managers for production, it was declared by some to be too English for the American public; others were reluctant about taking the risk of production on account of the excessive sum asked for advance royalties. It remained for those astute producers, Mr. and Mrs. Coburn, to secure the plum while the others were debating over the advisability of the venture. After one reading the Coburns saw possibilities that, perhaps, other producers overlooked. Undoubtedly, the latter did not take into consideration the fact that the recent war has drawn tighter the tie that binds America to England, as well as the fact that correspondents on the western front have familiarized the American public with British sayings and slang phrases. The wisdom of Mr. and Mrs. Coburn has been proved by the popularity the piece has attained at the Cort Theatre, New York.

AS LONDON SAW FAMOUS PLAY

SO WILL PETERBOROUGH WITNESS "THE BETTER 'OLE" TOMORROW NIGHT.

In presenting "The Beter 'Ole" the comedy with music which will be seen at The Grand, Friday and Saturday, Matinee Saturday, Mr. and Mrs. Coburn, happily have not deviated to any great extent from the London production. They have not hampered the delicious humor of the three famous British characters, "Old Bill," "Bert," and "Alf," by an overdose of Americanism. The stage pictures have been drawn to true life; the atmosphere remains typical and the three old "muskrats" with their cockney accent have been allowed to retain their English slang phrases, which have become so familiar to every American. The Boston Company with Edmund Gurney, Leon Gordon and Percy Jennings, all English actors—as the modern three modern musketeers will appear here.

Physician's High Privileges.

In England the only civilian who has a right to pass through marching troops is the court physician on his way to a royal residence. He can make even the household cavalry open their ranks to him.

Uncle Eben.

"Dar's a heap o' selfishness in human nature," said Uncle Eben. "A lot o' men wishes everybody 'Happy New Year' on January first an' takes it all back on January second."

Disqualified.

"I should get a divorce at once," said Mrs. Hittem-Uppe, Jr., "but I haven't sufficient costumes to last through the prolonged trial that my social standing demands."

Optimistic Thought.

Shadows heighten the bright tints of life's picture.

CO-OPERATIVE EXPERIMENTS

How to Obtain the Most Practical Kind of Information.

Kindness and Cleanliness Two Chief Points to Observe in Caring for Dairy Stock — Cow and Young Calf Should Be Separated in Not Over Three Days.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

CO-OPERATIVE experiments have been conducted in agriculture throughout Ontario annually since 1886. Previous to the war the number of farmers conducting these experiments reached over 5,000, and in 1918 (the last year of the war) the number was slightly over 3,600. Some of the leading varieties of crops now grown in general cultivation throughout Ontario were introduced through the medium of the co-operative work, such, for instance, as the O.A.C. No. 21 barley, Marquis spring wheat, O.A.C. No. 72 oats, O.A.C. No. 3 oats, Dawson's Golden Chaff winter wheat, O.A.C. No. 61 spring rye, Canadian Beauty pease, O.A.C. No. 81 Soy beans, Rye Buckwheat, Golden Bantam sweet corn, Early Amber sugar-cane, Dwarf Essex rape, Irish Cobbler potatoes, Yellow Leviathan mangels, Grimm and Ontario Variegated alfalfa, etc.

The co-operative experiments enable practical farmers to obtain information regarding varieties of field crops, mixtures of grain for grain and for fodder production, ways in increasing soil fertility, etc., for their own particular farms which they cannot possibly get in any other way. They furnish hundreds and even thousands of object lessons annually, which form centres of interesting study along the lines of progressive agriculture. They enable farmers to get a supply of pure seed of the leading varieties of field crops which rapidly increase in quantity and which furnish seed for sowing and planting in large areas and for selling at good prices. The whole work leads to a substantial increase in farm profits and to a steady advance in agricultural education throughout Ontario.

The plan of the co-operative work for 1919 is printed in circular form and has already been sent to all the successful co-operative experimenters of the past few years. Other interested farmers could secure a copy of the circular by applying to the Department of Field Husbandry, Agricultural College, Guelph, Ontario.—Dr. C. A. Zavitz, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

Kindness Makes for Service.

It was once commented upon by Joseph F. Smith that, wherever men are kindest to their animals, there do those animals give the best service to man. As example, the writer cited Holland and Denmark, where the utmost affection and care are bestowed upon the cows, which there give freely of their milk, and the dairying industry flourishes.

FULLERTON SAYS CLEVELAND SHOULD WIN THE PENNANT

Baseball Expert Thinks This Season's Race is Between Haps and Red Sox.

Hughe Fullerton is at it again with his pre-season baseball dope. In his opinion, Cleveland or Boston ought to represent the American League in the World's series, while either New York or Chicago should be their National League opponents. At that rate, Hughie calls last year's winners to figure again in the big series this year. Perhaps he is building his hopes on Chicago on account of the return from overseas of the mighty Grover Cleveland Alexander. He, however, makes a stipulation when he says, "Which team will win, depends almost entirely upon the judgment of managers in selecting pitchers to work in critical games, as in both leagues the leaders figure so closely together, that a manager, by outguessing his opponents, by using an unexpected pitcher and saving a strong one, may turn the entire tide."

The Chicago Cubs will not have George Whiteman, the batting hero of last year's world series. He is right in our own city of Toronto, and will in all probability stick here until the season is over.

In Hughie's opinion, Cleveland, who have never figured in the world series, will this year have the strongest and most constatent team in Ban Johnston's circuit—a well-balanced, logical team with strength distributed through all nine positions and with the greatest array of pitching talent. "In fact," he says, "if it were certain that Myers will return from the army in top share, I would not hesitate to predict that Cleveland will figure to win."

Commenting on the chances of the White Sox to duplicate their performance of 1917, he says:

"On the other hand, if I could be certain that Al Walters will be as good a catcher as he was season before last, I would make my annual wager of one hat on the Red Sox. Chicago has a chance, but not a logical one. New York has an outside chance of hammering its way to a pennant by sheer strength, but the fact that the team is the slowest in either league is a heavy handicap, even with the wrecking crew hitting the ball against the fences.

"It may be a surprise to find Philadelphia ranking up within good striking distance of the leaders. The team hustles, plays the game, and is going to be a hard proposition. The shock in the dope will be to find Detroit figuring absolutely last due largely to congenital pitching weakness. The team will not make as many runs per game as it has been doing for ten years, and, besides pitching weakness, it shows spotty strength all around.

"The outfield will be almost as good as ever, as Shorten is a speedy and acceptable ball player, but the infield is uncertain and the great stars are slowly dwindling to the second dimension. Cobb's delay in joining the team makes it certain that Detroit will get another late star—and, with only 140 games to go, late starts count much more in the finals than they have done."

Sporting Gossip

"Jiggs" Donohue, reported to have died several years ago in an Ohio insane asylum—although the report was later denied—has been the subject of many reminiscent stories, but one of his claims to fame, and one which is rarely mentioned, is that he was the last ball player to wear whiskers. Long after other players had discarded the hirsute appendages "Jiggs" clung to his facial ornament. The great first-baseman was led to dispense with the beard by an incident that occurred in Nashville, Tenn. The outer garden of the Nashville grounds was overgrown with bushes and brambles, and "Jiggs" was stationed in right field during an exhibition game. He chased a long fly into the thicket, caught his right foot on something, and dived head first into the mass of thorny bushes. Most of his whiskers had to be cut off before he could be extricated, and after that "Jiggs" visited the barber regularly.

While the beard was tabooed after that, many players continued to sport mustaches. Jim O'Rourke, of the Giants, and Fred Titus, of the Phillies were perhaps the last diamond stars to wear brushes on their upper lips. O'Rourke's mustache was long and flowing, and was the pride of his life until a certain day when it blew into his eyes and caused him to muff a ball at a critical period of a game. Then Jim went to the tonsorial artist and kissed his mustache goodbye.

GET ON LAND EARLY

The Dates to Plant for Heaviest Yields.

To Make Most Money From Wool Shearing Must Be Done Properly and Wool Handled Carefully—A Few Hints Which Have Saved Farmers Dollars.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THERE is a best time to sow each class of farm crops to secure the highest returns. It is difficult, however, to know which are the most favorable dates for the best returns of the different crops in all seasons. The results of experiments conducted over a series of years form a good general guide. Some crops give best results from later seedings. Seasons vary so much that in some years the grains are practically all sown by the dates at which it is only possible to start sowing in other years. It is of the utmost importance, however, to start cultivating the land as early as it is dry enough to work to good advantage. The first cultivations should take place for those crops which should be first sown. In this connection it is interesting to study the results of an experiment which was conducted in each of five years at the Ontario Agricultural College. Spring wheat, barley, oats and peas were sown on each of six dates. One week was allowed between each two dates. The experiment was conducted in duplicate by sowing with the grain drill and broadcast by hand in each instance. The following table gives the average results for the ten tests in the five-year period:

	Bushels of Grain Per Acre.
Seedlings.	Spring Wheat.	Barley.	Oats.	Peas.
1st	21.9	46.2	75.2	25.4
2nd	19.2	45.9	76.0	28.8
3rd	15.4	39.8	64.2	28.5
4th	13.0	37.1	55.8	25.5
5th	8.4	27.6	45.2	21.5
6th	6.7	18.4	37.0	19.5

It will be seen that the spring wheat gives decidedly the best returns from the first date of seeding. There is not much difference between the first two seedings of barley and oats, but there is a slight advantage from the first date in the case of barley and from the second date in the case of oats. The peas, however, gave the highest returns from the second and third dates, and even the fourth gave a higher average yield than the first date. After the first week was past there was an average decrease per acre for each day's delay as the season advanced of 27 pounds of spring wheat, 47 pounds of barley, 48 pounds of oats, and 20 pounds of peas.

These results are of special interest and are worthy of careful attention at this particular time.

Sheep Shearing.

Shearing and Tying the Fleece.—Shearing should only be carried on under the most favorable conditions; upon bright, warm sunshiny days when the sheep are dry of fleece and the wool has "risen" somewhat from the body. Cleanliness and care in the removal of all fleeces is very essential and the shearing floor should be swept after each fleece has been removed and tied. This will eliminate a great deal of foreign matter which, although it may add weight, does so at the expense of quality.

Dung Locks or Tags.—It will be noticed with many fleeces that there are certain hard dung locks or tags adhering to the britch ends. These contain a great deal of moisture and if left on and rolled into the fleece produce a damp heavy condition that means a higher shrinkage and hence less value. They should, whenever present, be snipped off with the shears before the sheep is shorn or else pulled off by hand after the fleece is spread out for rolling. They can very easily be packed and shipped separately, bringing more money this way than if left upon the fleece. The same is true of all paint clotted locks as well.

Rolling the Fleece.—Spread the fleece out on the floor, being careful not to pull it apart and with the flesh side down. Then fold the belly wool and both sides in until your fleece represents a strip about 18 inches wide. Starting at the tail end, roll tightly toward the neck, thus leaving the shoulder wool, which is always the superior portion, on the outside of the roll. The grader always estimates the grade by the appearance and quality of this wool over the shoulder and heart-girth, that over the hindquarters usually running a grade or two lower.

Tying the Fleece.—Having rolled tightly, tie both ways with the special paper twine supplied by the Department. Never under any consideration use binder twine as the fibres become attached to the wool and follow right through into the cloth where they always show up quite prominently. Many mills have refused to have anything whatever to do with clips that have been tied with binder twine. If the paper twine is not available use any stout cord other than binder twine. Tie each fleece separately, never tying two or three together in the same bundle. Furthermore, avoid as much as possible the shipping of loose wool. If you have two or three different breeds of sheep, possibly a grade flock and a pure-bred flock, it is wise to keep the wool from each breed separate and pack it so.—Director R. W. Wade, B.S.A., Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Winston Churchill's Pet Was Ready for Action.

Bigger Than "Big Bertha"

SINCE "Dora," the British Defence of the Realm Act, lost her sting stories of mystery ships and strange happenings in the war have been published, but at least one other story remains to be told. It concerns "Winston Churchill's pet," as the proud artisans of Sheffield named it.

"Winston's Pet" is not a mystery ship or anything of the sort that puts out to sea, but a great land gun to out-Bertha the notorious German "Big Bertha." It was so called because the Minister of Munitions had set his heart on having his gun just to show those Germans what the British can do when they want to. When the Minister made his last great munition tour a few weeks before the armistice was signed he was able to see his brand new pet on the stocks in the famous Vickers' works ready for going forth to battle. "The boys" had chalked in a conspicuous place on the housing: "Winston's Pet. To Beat the Huns."

Standing beside this "toy" of a gun one felt a mere pygmy or like a microbe in a world of matter. The width across the breech end was almost as great as a moderate sized man is tall, and the length of the barrel was eighty-three feet or more. She was said authoritatively to be capable of firing a shell 80 miles. Others presumed to be well informed said that she would be destructive beyond that distance.

She was, as far as an interested layman could judge, made on almost identical lines with the mammoth naval super-guns of which Sheffield has produced many, but with the vital difference that double strength most beautiful scenery in Hampshire, addition of another inner tube so that she would fire an eight-inch shell instead of a fifteen-inch shell. The breech charge apparently remained the same, so that the same explosive force used to propel a fifteen-inch shell was behind the lesser and much lighter projectile. These conditions, therefore, apparently gave the gun its wonderful range.

"Winston's" eye beamed with delight as he walked up and down and around the gun and viewed its splendid points and marvelled at the engineering skill that could fashion such a monster from masses of rough steel.

It was not difficult to imagine with what delight the gunners would watch it bark shells on the Rhine town—Cologne for preference—for that was what everybody, and men who were likely to know, said it was to do. Alas, for all the enthusiasm and skill and hope of Sheffield workers and Sheffield captains of industry had put into the new creation, "Winston's Pet" never had the chance to speak to the Germans. She had not been gone long for her trials when the armistice was declared. The making of the gun was a marvel of Trojanlike activities, and undoubtedly when the full story is told it will in this respect alone prove a romance of the great war.

England, largely through Sheffield, has been always miles in advance of Germany with the power, range and quality of naval guns.

Talking of Sheffield guns and war, it is permissible now to state that a Zeppelin once found that great arsenal among the Yorkshire hills and bombarded it. On the night of the raid, Sept. 25 and 26, 1916, the Zeppelin missed the city, but found its bearings by a naked light left flaring all the time on a railway siding in the bombarded area. It returned over the city, passing harmlessly from northwest to east, over or near the barracks, the large gas works and the great electric power station to the east end, and then crossed right through the heart of the armament works.

Despite wild rumors that were afloat in the country at the time not a pennyworth of military damage was done. Two bombs dropped harmlessly in the open yard of the world famed armament works of John Brown & Co.

Deer, or Sheep?

Is the deer forest doomed? During the past four or five years the Highland landowner whose main source of income has been rents from his sportings, has been very hard hit, and apparently the get-rich-quick man of the war is not showing any desire to take costly shootings in the north. Not long ago Lord Lovat decided to convert his deer forest of Braulen, in Inverness-shire, an area of 50,000 acres, into sheep and cattle pasturage, and now a large part of Mar Forest, the Princess Royal's big Deeside domain of over 100,000 acres, is being let for sheep-grazing. Deer are wasteful feeders, and spoil a great deal more grass than they eat. On the area necessary for one deer a dozen sheep or three cattle could live.

A Chinese Altar.

There is no altar on earth which vies in marble majesty with the altar of heaven—Tien T'ian—in the south of the Chinese city of Pekin, which Emperor Yung-le of the Ming dynasty reared in A.D. 1420, with its triple balustrades, stairs and platforms of pure white marble carved miraculously, its great circle covering a wide area in the midst of a vast inclosure. There the emperor knelt once a year and worshipped "the only being in the universe he could look up to"—Shang-ti—the Emperor of the world above, whose court was in the sky and the spear tips of whose soldiers were the stars.

Possibly He Had.

A strange bequest was that of Jabez Hollister, an Englishman, who left a set of albatross toothpicks to his sons "in order that they might never have occasion to sit in a dentist's chair."

Preferred Creditors.

War has taken less from Sir Arthur Currie and given more to Sir Arthur Currie than war has taken and given in dealings with other Canadian soldiers and their next of kin.

Canada owes more pressing war debts than any debt this country may owe to Sir Arthur Currie or any other general.

War has proved "a bountiful jade" to army leaders who are better off in war than they ever were in peace.

Canada's preferred creditors in this war are the soldiers who have put in everything at $1.10 per day and taken nothing out but death, wounds, tortured bodies and crippled limbs.—Toronto Telegram.

Baboons Fierce Fighters.

When they are being hunted with dogs an old baboon that is cornered seizes an attacker with one hand by the nearest limb, and, gathering up a fold of skin in the other hand, tears it off, and throwing aside his victim, waits for the next. In this way he will often kill several dogs before he gives up the fight.

To Carry Heavy Loads.

One way of carrying two buckets of water with the least possible expenditure of energy is the hoop-carrying method of Macedonia. There a small boy will carry a man's load by walking inside a hoop which keeps the weight free from the body and distributes pressure.

Tree Trunk Doesn't Grow.

Tree trunks do not grow in length between the tap root and the lowest branch. Also the tap root when cut off at a special length always remains the same length, for it is but the trunk or body below the soil. Both root and body may branch, or lengthen by new leaders.

FULLERTON SAYS CLEVELAND SHOULD WIN THE PENNAN.

Baseball Expert Thinks This Season's Race is Between Haps and Red Sox.

Hughie Fullerton is at it again with his pre-season baseball dope. In his opinion, Cleveland or Boston ought to represent the American League in the World's series, while either New York or Chicago should be their National League opponents. At that rate, Hughie calls last year's winners to figure again in the big series this year. Perhaps he is building his hopes on Chicago on account of the return from overseas of the mighty Grover Cleveland Alexander. He, however, makes a stipulation when he says: "Which team will win, depends almost entirely upon the judgment of managers in selecting pitchers to work in critical games, as in both leagues the leaders figure so closely together, that a manager, by outguessing his opponents, by using an unexpected pitcher and saving a strong one, may turn the entire tide.

The Chicago Cubs will not have George Whiteman, the batting hero of last year's world series. He is right in our own city of Toronto, and will in all probability stick here until the season is over.

In Hughie's opinion, Cleveland, who have never figured in the world series, will this year have the strongest and most consistent team in Ban Johnston's circuit—a well-balanced, logical team with strength distributed through all nine positions and with the greatest array of pitching talent. "In fact," he says, "if it were certain that Myers will return from the army in top share, I would not hesitate to predict that Cleveland will figure to win."

Commenting on the chances of the White Sox to duplicate their performance of 1917, he says:

"On the other hand, if I could be certain that Al Walters will be as good a catcher as he was season before last, I would make my annual wager of one hat on the Red Sox. Chicago has a chance, but not a logical one. New York has an outside chance of hammering its way to a pennant by sheer strength, but the fact that the team is the slowest in either league is a heavy handicap, even with the wrecking crew hitting the ball against the fences.

"It may be a surprise to find Philadelphia ranking up within good striking distance of the leaders. The team hustles, plays the game, and is going to be a hard proposition. The shock in the dope will be to find Detroit figuring absolutely last due largely to congenital pitching weakness. The team will not make as many runs per game as it has been doing for ten years, and, besides pitching weakness, it shows spotty strength all around.

"The outfield will be almost as good as ever. As Shorten is a speedy and acceptable ball player, but the infield is uncertain and the great stars are slowly dwindling to the second dimension. Cobb's delay in joining the team makes it certain that Detroit will get another late start—and, with only 140 games to go, late starts count much more in the finals than they have done."

Deer are wasteful feeders, and spoil a great deal more grass than they eat. On the area necessary for one deer a dozen sheep or three cattle could live.

A Chinese Altar.

There is no altar on earth which vies in marble majesty with the altar of heaven—Tien T'ian—in the south of the Chinese city of Pekin, which Emperor Yung-le of the Ming dynasty reared in A.D. 1420, with its triple balustrades, stairs and platforms of pure white marble carved miraculously, its great circle covering a wide area in the midst of a vast inclosure. There the emperor knelt once a year and worshipped "the only being in the universe he could look up to"—Shang-ti—the Emperor of the world above, whose court was in the sky and the spear tips of whose soldiers were the stars.

Possibly He Had.

A strange bequest was that of Jabez Hollister, an Englishman, who left a set of albatross toothpicks to his sons "in order that they might never have occasion to sit in a dentist's chair."

Daily Thought.

Applause is the spur of noble minds, the end and aim of weak ones.—C. C. Colton.

Preferred Creditors.

War has taken less from Sir Arthur Currie and given more to Sir Arthur Currie than war has taken and given in dealings with other Canadian soldiers and their next of kin.

Canada owes more pressing war debts than any debt this country may owe to Sir Arthur Currie or any other general.

War has proved "a bountiful jade" to army leaders who are better off in war than they ever were in peace.

Canada's preferred creditors in this war are the soldiers who have put in everything at $1.10 per day and taken nothing out but death, wounds, tortured bodies and crippled limbs.—Toronto Telegram.

Baboons Fierce Fighters.

When they are being hunted with dogs an old baboon that is cornered seizes an attacker with one hand by the nearest limb and, gathering up a fold of skin in the other hand, tears it off, and throwing aside his victim, waits for the next. In this way he will often kill several dogs before he gives up the fight.

To Carry Heavy Loads.

One way of carrying two buckets of water with the least possible expenditure of energy is the hoop-carrying method of Macedonia. There a small boy will carry a man's load by walking inside a hoop which keeps the weight free from the body and distributes pressure.

Tree Trunk Doesn't Grow.

Tree trunks do not grow in length between the tap root and the lowest branch. Also the tap root when cut off at a special length always remains the same length, for it is but the trunk or body below the soil. Both root and body may branch, or lengthen by new leaders.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

McARTHUR—McQUAIG

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. David McQuaig, 474 Sherbrooke street, a pretty wedding was solemnized when their daughter, Kathleen Eunice was united in marriage to James McArthur, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. McArthur, Brownton, Rev. B. J. Greatrix officiating.

The bride looked charming in a dress of tan satin with overdress of beaded georgette. She carried a shower bouquet and wore the groom's gift, a pearl sunburst. To the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march played by Miss Greta Mills and followed by her two pretty flower girls, Miss Doris Wilson, her neice and Miss Rena McArthur, the groom's little niece the pretty bride entered the drawing room on the arm of her father. She was attended by her sister, Miss Lottie McQuaig, while Mr. John Smith supported the groom. Miss Greta Mills acted as maid of honor. During the signing of the register, Mr. John Smith sang "Until." After the ceremony about fifty guests assembled in the beautifully decorated dining room, where a buffet luncheon was served, after which amid showers of confetti Mr. and Mrs. McArthur left by the 3 35 train for a short honeymoon in the west.

On their return they will reside in Orillia.

The many and valuable gifts received testified to the esteem in which the young people were held.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pitts, Madoc; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. De Mille, Madoc; Mr. and Mrs. R. C. McQuaig, Blairton; Mr. W. J. McFaul, Havelock; Mrs. Sam Knox, Fenelon Falls; Mrs. Norman Martin, Fenelon Falls; Mrs. D. McQuaig, Belleville; Mr. M. P. Weff, Kingston.

Miss Horsfield and Miss Verne Zealand have returned from Toronto after attending the mid-summer millinery openings.

PISONER BREAKS OUT OF OWEN SOUND JAIL

Owen Sound, April 24.—The free and balmy breezes of springtime apparently have a big influence on prisoners generally or else it is that the escape of Frank McCullough from the Toronto Jail has set an example for prisoners to follow. Whatever the reason a prisoner from the local jail breathed the air of freedom for a few hours this morning. It was Arthur Douglas, colored, who caused the jail officials considerable anxiety. He was finally discovered hiding among the cobwebs under a floor in a small house at the outskirts of the town. His capture was largely due to two other prisoners, who trailed Douglas to his hiding place. He was doing two years on sentences for theft and burglary.

Clergy and Choir Were Entertained

BY MR. C. COLEMAN AFTER ST. GEOGE'S DAY SERVICES.

At the conclusion of the choral festival evensong of St. George's Day, held in St. John's church last night, the Bishop of Ottawa, the clergy and the combined Anglican choirs of the city were splendidly entertained in the schoolroom by Mr. Charles Coleman, an old chanter and lover of all good music. A splendid supper was thoroughly enjoyed, and a fine social time spent. The Bishop of Ottawa introduced by Rev. J. Price, expressed the great pleasure he always felt at services when parishes combined and complimented the fine body of singers in their singing of the office as well as in the grand old Hallelujah chorus. The thanks of the choristers to Mr. Coleman was well expressed by Mr. R. J. Devey, in moving a vote of thanks, seconded by Mr. G. Chandler, to Mr. Coleman, which was carried with musical honors. Mr. Coleman expressed his great pleasure in any way helping along church work and singing with which he had always been associated, and he thanked them for their kindly appreciation which was prompted. He assured them by the spirit of service, which the Bishop had so eloquently urged upon them all in his sermon. The singing of "Blest be the Tie," "Auld Lang Syne," and the National Anthem, brought a memorable St. George's Day celebration to an end shortly after 11.00.

HOUSE DEBATES STATE RAILWAYS

AMENDMENT AFTER AMENDMENT PROPOSED AND ALL ARE VOTED DOWN.

Ottawa, April 24.—Keen continuous fighting characterized the day's proceedings in the house. Afternoon and evening the government bill to incorporate the Canadian National Railway Company—the company which is to administer the government railway system — was under consideration. There was amendment after amendment. At the outset the opposition endeavored so to amend the bill as to secure what they claimed to be parliamentary control. Mr. McMaster had an amendment that the directorate of the company should be chosen from a list of fifteen furnished by the house, 60 per cent nominated by the government and 40 per cent. by the opposition. On behalf of the government it was argued that the amendment would easily introduce a "vicious" patronage that there could not be a division of responsibility between government and opposition. Eventually Mr. McMaster withdrew his amendment.

Major Power moved that one at least of the directors should be a returned soldier. The motion was defeated by 38 to 23. Mr. Cahill moved that the first clause of the bill (the clause under consideration) should be referred to a special committee of the railway commission. It was ruled out of order.

Mr. Lapointe had an amendment that at least two of the directors should be representative of the employes. The amendment was lost. Sir Thomas White declaring it to be unsound in principle.

FRENCH ARE WITH ROUMANIANS IN ADVANCE IN EASTERN HUNGARY

Reign of Terror Continues in Budapest—Town Twenty Miles From That City Attacked by Invaders and Likely to Fall.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Geneva, April 25.—Czecho-Slovak forces have attacked the city of Waitzen, twenty miles northeast of Budapest, which is expected to fall soon. French troops are said to be aiding Rumanians in their advance in Eastern Hungary, according to advices received here from Vienna.

The Story from Berlin

Berlin, April 25.—Hungary has hermetically closed all her borders in an effort to control the Rumanian invasion and prevent unfavorable news from escaping from the country. Reports from Budapest, therefore are contradictory, but all indicate the situation is grave. The days of the Soviet Government are, perhaps, numbered. The Entente powers are said to have 60,000 Colonial troops in Neusatz which are advancing as a Rumanian reserve. Czecho troops are believed to be preparing to attack, the people of Transylvania have revolted and are advancing with the Rumanians because of the agrarian measures imposed by the Soviet regime. Panic is reported to reign in Budapest where the Communist authorities are said to be ruthlessly arresting scores of bourgeisie.

PAID $500 FINE WITH COSTS FOR IMPORTING ALCOHOL

J. W. Tucker, an Enterprising Barber of Orillia, Was Captured by Clever Detective Work of the Local Police.

To order five gallons of alcohol and have the same shipped under a fictious name to Orillia, his home town, and then to have the police at Peterborough remove the precious liquid while it was in transit, and send the empty case forward as a trap, and to fall into that trap hard and fast was the experience of J. W. Hucker, of Orillia, who in Police Court this morning paid a fine of $500, and costs amounting to $22.55.

On April 10th Constables Boyd and Lawrence noticed at the C.P.R. station here a large chest and addressed to J. W. Graham, Orillia, and bearing in roughly painted characters the inscription, "Tools, for the Hydro Electric."

Suspicious of the big box and feeling sure that if it was the property of such an opulent institution as the Hydro Electric Commission a painter capable of making an artistic job of lettering the chest would have been engaged, the officers opened the box and found therein five gallons of pure grain alcohol contained in tins resting snuggly beneath a tray in which were a few old tools and the arm of a barber's chair which had been evidently placed in the case to make it rattle and keep up its reputation as a tool chest.

Upon thinking the matter over the police decided to set a trap for the Orillia man. They removed the cans of concentrated elixir and sent the box forward without changing its external appearance to the slightest degree.

Detective Sergeant Newhall, of the Peterborough Police Department, went to Orillia and as a result of his investigations there the man who had sent for the alcohol was found to be J. W. Tucker, a barber of that town.

This morning before the police magistrate here he pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined as described above. He admitted that this was the third journey the box had made upon a similar mission and it was estimated that had he got the last shipment to its destination safely, over $2,000 would have been the result of his three ventures. As it was and taking into consideration the heavy fine he paid this morning it is very doubtful whether Mr. Tucker is not a long way ahead of the game.

He stated that upon each occasion when the box had been dispatched it had been sailing under different colors in the truest sense of the term having received a fresh coat of paint for each journey and having its appearance otherwise changed so that when the police scraped some of the red paint from the side of the chest this morning it presented an appearance which would rival Joseph's famous coat.

Mr. Tucker was asked if he would like to have the box forwarded to Orillia as a souvenir, but he declined, stating that he did not care to be reminded of its last exploit, even though its first journeys to and from Montreal were crowned with success.

It was thought that in making whiskey for his retail trade the Orillia man would use about two or three inches of the pure and powerful alcohol in the bottom of a quart bottle and as he stated that water was the cheapest thing obtainable in Orillia, the remainder of the "crock", with the exception of a little coloring would be donated free of charge by Lake Couchiching and would represent clear profit. The bottle would sell for $[illegible]

World Is Back To War Bread Basis

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 25.—An increase in milling percentage which will virtually put the world back to the war bread basis, for the next three months is part of the program adopted by the Supreme Food Council under the chairmanship of Herbert C. Hoover.

Natives of India Die By Millions

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, April 25.—Almost five million persons have died in British India from Spanish influenza and fully one millions others are believed to have died in native states from the same cause, according to a report of the Indian Government made public here.

ARE UNANIMOUS AGAINST TITLES

SPECIAL COMMITTEE OF HOUSE HOLDS ITS FIRST SESSION TODAY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, April 25.—W. F. Nickle, Kingston, mover of the resolution on titles, in the House, which resulted in the appointment of a committee to consider the question, was elected chairman at the first meeting this morning. He stated that the Premier was anxious that the committee proceed with the inquiry without delay and make a report to the House. The whole subject of titular distinctions, including recognition of war service, would be considered.

The general discussion made it clear that the committee was almost unanimously of the opinion that apart from distinction for those who have meritorious war service to their credit, titles should be abolished in Canada. The only definite conclusion reached was that hereditary titles should cease with the death of the present holders.

Another meeting will be held on Wednesday, when the committee expects to make a report.

TENDER OF R. SHEEHY FOR THE BRIDGE $10,000 LOWER THAN THE ONE ACCEPTED

This Was on Cost-Plus Basis—Mr. Sheehy Withdrew Certified Cheque When Assured by Aldermen That Nothing but Lump Sum Bids Would Be Considered.

The tender of Mr. R. Sheehy for the construction of the Hunter Street Bridge was it now appears, $10,000 lower on the cost plus basis, than that of the Russell-Townsend Company whose tender has been accepted by a majority of the aldermen in session as the committee of public works and which action has yet to be approved at the regular meeting of the city council. From present indications there are likely to be legal steps taken to prevent the city council from confirming the contract with the Toronto firm. The case of Mr. Sheehy forms an interesting chapter in the history of the bridge negotiations to date.

Mr. Sheehy tendered for the bridge when the matter was first opened last fall. When the council advertised for another set of bids on the cost plus basis Mr. Sheehy was again in the field and submitted the following offer:

Mr. H. Phelan,
Chairman Board of Works
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir:

Re Hunter Street Bridge

I hereby propose to construct, reinforced concrete bridge as per present plans and specifications prepared by Mr. Barber on the "Cost plus basis" as per the following:

I agree to construct this bridge for the cost as herein described plus a fixed sum of ($19500.00) nineteen thousand, five hundred dollars.

It is agreed that cost where used in this agreement shall be deemed to include all expenditures whatsoever in connection with the above bridge.

It is further agreed that the fixed sum above shall include and cover the use of contractor's equipment for the entire construction. This is tendered to include a double equipment, one for each side of the river to be worked simultaneously.

Tender for Bridge Nine Feet Narrower

For the fixed sum of ($18600.00) eighteen thousand and six hundred dollars on the same conditions as enumerated in tender Number 1.

Later Mr. Sheehy was assured by members of the committee that the majority of the aldermen were opposed to the cost plus plan and that the bridge contract would be let only on the lump sum basis. He refused to tender again being tired of the delay and undecision and asked that the certified cheque that he deposited as a guarantee be returned to him. This was done, it being understood by Mr. Sheehy at the time that no more was to be heard of the cost plus plan. If he had known that the last set of tenders would have been considered by the committee he would have returned his cheque and remained in the game until the last.

The tender of Mr. Ed Conroy, the other local contractor, was still lower than that of Mr. Sheehy, the amount of profit which he asked for being $12,000, plus rental of machinery as against the $19,500 mention by Mr Sheehy. The cost plus of the local contractors and the Toronto firm whose tender has been semi-officially accepted, may be compared as follows:

Ed. Conroy	$12,000
Russell-Townsend	$29,000

Practical bridge builders and other contractors say that the $249,200, the cost of the bridge as estimated by the Russell-Townsend people really means nothing. They are not bound by it in any way. All they do is stake their reputation that the estimate is approximately correct. Even if the cost ran up to $300,000 or over the city would have no redress but the contractor would be sure of his profits whatever happened. Local contractors, too, have business reputations to protect, as well as those from Toronto or other points.

The Review yesterday expressed regret that this work could not go to a local employer just as the wage list is to be made up of workingmen in Peterborough. It was intimated that there bids were too high and the inference was justified seeing that neither was accepted. Mr. Sheehy's statement, however, puts an entirely different face upon the matter.

STRIKING MINERS RETURN TO WORK

LABOR TROUBLES IN GERMANY SEEMS TO HAVE PASSED CRISIS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, April 25.—Almost as suddenly as the recent strikes began Germany appears to be quieting down again. Coal miners in the Ruhr district are returning to work in increasing numbers and yesterday those in the Dussbug and Muehlheim districts as well as half a dozen other places, returned to collieries.

The fact that men are resuming work is remarkable because the Communists at recent meetings have urged a continuation of the strike. Men who merely heeded this appeal have rejected it almost unanimously. The big factor in the situation has been the distribution of food, which has proved a special attraction to the laboring men. An increase in coal production is already noticeable in Upper Silesia where the situation has been improved by the nullification of a majority of the depositions of mine directors.

Soldiers Anxious To Reach Homes

Many of the people who were at the station and on the streets last night to welcome home the returning soldiers were struck with the comparative scant number which stepped forth from the train after the announcement that there were about eighty in the party.

The invariable modesty of the returned hero explains this as a large number of the men who did not relish the idea of a civic welcome which would delay them in making their way to their homes, dropped off the train as it passed throrgh the yards and in that way escaped from the attentions of the welcoming horde.

Dr. Chas. W. Ryan new mayor of Battle Creek, Mich., will appoint a council of 25 persons from all walks of life to advise him in the conduct of city affairs.

CITY COUNCIL TO BE ENJOINED

Mr. R. R. Hall, acting on behalf of a number of prominent citizens all of whom are heavy tax payers, will, The Review is creditably informed this afternoon begin legal proceedings to restrain the City Council from closing a contract with the Russell-Townsend Co., for the construction of the Hunter Street Bridge as decided at the recent meeting of the Board of Works. This action was fore-shadowed in The Review two weeks ago when it was stated that the supporters of a steel bridge would take such steps in case the Alderman failed to consider such a proposition.

It must not be assumed that any active interest Mr. R. Sheehy is taking in the matter is due to any selfish motive. He is not anxious to secure the contract. His only object is to save the ratepayers the difference between the cost of a steel bridge, estimated at $235,000 or less and the concrete structure as now planned. The estimated cost of a steel bridge was furnished by Mr Sheehy to the Aldermen some two weeks ago, the figures having been prepared by the Dominion Bridge Company.

In the contemplated legal proceedings it will be maintained that as the total amount authorized by the ratepayers for the construction of a bridge was $260,000 that every alderman who is a party to spending anything in excess of that sum is personally liable for the difference. This is a point which is likely to give some of the members of the City Council a jolt of surprise.

The cost plus amounts of the different contractors were as follows:

Lewis Construction Co.	$24,750.00
Ed. Conroy	12,000.00
Concrete Constructors	18,000.00
Russell, Townsend Co.	29,500.00
John O'Toole	31,300.00
J. H. Tromanhauser & Co.	38,000.00
Can. Eng. & Contg. Co.	28,600.00
Jas. A. Wickett	18,000.00
R. Sheehy	19,500.00
Chambers, McGuigge & McCaffery Co.	25,000.00
Ritchie Construction Co.	17,000.00
Raymond Concrete Co.	25,000.00
Fraser, Brace & Co.	33,000.00

ITALIAN TROUBLE MAY BE SETTLED

MOST HOPEFUL FEELING PREVAILS TODAY AT THE PEACE CONFERENCE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 25.—The German official couriers in advance of the German delegation to the Peace Congress arrived at Versailles today. A distinctly more hopeful and less irreconcilable feeling prevailed at the Italian headquarters today. No longer [illegible] there talk of a break with the Peace Conference but intend it was said. "All may be settled within a fortnight. Premier Orlando has gone to Rome to consult, Parliament. Thereafter we shall see."

A plenary session of the Peace Conference will be held Monday to consider the revised draft of the League of Nations Covenant and also such portions of the peace treaty as may be completed by that time. The session will be open to the public. It is understood that if the Covenant is approved it will immediately be made public.

CROWDS THRONG THE STREETS TO WELCOME THE VETERANS HOME

Despite the Wintry Weather the Returning Soldiers Were Given an Enthusiastic Reception—Mayor and Ald. Turner the Speakers.

In spite of the fact that the weather last night was as cold, blustery and miserable as anything that has been experienced this year and the more keenly felt on account of the fine warm weather which prevailed for some days, the streets of the city and the station platform were lined with people to welcome home a detachment of Peterboroughs returning soldiers last night.

The men were to arrive at 8.26 and it was no surprise to the people who were shivering in the cold blast to note that in accordance with the general run of hard luck as regarded conditions favorable to the reception, the train was marked up twenty minutes late.

This meant a most tiresome wait in the cold but the people did not complain as they were there to welcome home the boys who had been gone from the city for what seemed like a decade and everyone had some dear one, or old friend in the company which was expected back.

At 9.15 the train pulled into the station and amidst scenes of the wildest enthusiasm, the men were conducted from the coaches to waiting automobiles and the procession got under way. The parade was formed up as follows.

57th Regimental band.

Returned officers and Mayor and Reception Committee.

Escort composed of returned men of the 2nd Battalion and 4th Battery.

Salvation Army band and boy scouts.

Slow progress was made by the procession, owing to the crowded condition of the streets and the eagerness of the people to encroach upon the line of march in order that they might obtain a closer view of the returned men and see if there particular friends were there or not.

It had been decided to hold the formal reception in Central Park. The warm weather on Wednesday night justified such an idea, but there was no thought of carrying it out last night as with bands playing the parade moved along Charlotte street and north on George, through little clouds and whirlpools of swirling snow which were driven before a wind as cold as has been felt this season.

In case the weather proved unfavorable arrangements had been made to use the armories and these were thrown open last night and the reception tendered there.

Upon the platform with the veterans were the members of the City's Reception Committee, Col. Mills, Secretary Whatley of the G.W.V.A. and others.

Mayor Duncan's Address.

Mayor Duncan delivered the following address to the men after which they were heartily cheered by the big crowd which almost filled the huge building:

Soldiers, it is with feelings that cannot be expressed that we welcome you home. We have had the opportunity of meeting and bidding welcome a number of returning soldiers, many of whom have come singly or in small parties, and we are glad to welcome the men who went from here to do their part in the great war. The return of men of the 2nd Battalion takes us back to the time in the summer of 1914 when the world was startled by the declaration of war by Germany and the beginning of the great struggle, and to the departure of the first men who went from Peterborough to help to drive back the ruthless invaders. We saw you go with great pride in your courage and devotion, and our pride in your courage, our gratitude for your devotion and our sympathy for you in your sufferings increased as time went on and your

The Feeling in London.

London, April 25.—The Peace Conference crisis continues to be the paramount topic of comment in the morning newspapers. The support they give to Italy's and President Wilson's views are respectively about evenly divided, but, with two or three exceptions, opinions are expressed cautiously and with a manifest desire to show friendliness for both Italy and Mr. Wilson, and to avoid saying anything likely to hinder the speedy restoration of harmony. Four newspapers emphatically champion President Wilson's viewpoint although with one exception, with cautious moderation. Two others, with equal moderation, sympathize with Italy's claims.

RODE BICYCLE ON SIDEWALK

AND THE STUNT COST LESLIE PLUNKETT A FINE OF $5.10.

Leslie Plunkett appeared in Police Court this morning and was fined $2 and $3.10 costs for riding a bicycle upon the sidewalk in the south end of the city.

This practice, the police state, is becoming very prevalent and they advise the "cyclers" of the city especially those who practice upon the pavements in the outskirts, to confine themselves to the roads otherwise they will be given an opportunity to study the interior of the Police Court from a position in the centre of the room, from which an excellent view may be obtained of the magistrate's desk.

AMERICANS ARE UNABLE TO AGREE

ON REPORT OF COMMISSION AS TO RESPONSIBILITY FOR WAR.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 25.—It has become known that the American delegates have been unable to agree to certain portions of the report adopted by the majority of the Commission on the responsibility for the war, and as presented to the Council of Four. The report contains a memorandum setting forth the American reservations. They objected to the principal that persons accused of offences against the "laws of humanity" should be subjected to criminal prosecution, contending that the laws and principles of humanity constitute a standard too uncertain to be rightly applied in legal proceedings.

TAG DAYS FOR DOGS

Dog tags are now obtainable at the Police station for 1919. These must be secured before May 31st and the people who own dogs are advised to come early and avoid the rush.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

FRIDAY, APRIL 25, 1919

THE ORILLIA BOARD OF TRADE

THE MEMBERS of The Trades and Labor Council in this city, by a narrow majority, declined to send representatives to the local Board of Trade. The suggestion of refusal certainly did not come from the members who represented the labor organizations on the Board of Trade last year, every one of whom brought back favorable reports of their associations with those supposed to belong to another class. It was those who had no first hand knowledge of the Board who condemned it.

Let local labor take a leaf from the book of experience of their fellow unionists in Orillia, that stirring little town that has been made famous chiefly by the Packet newspaper, the sage editorial philosophy of which is quoted by contemporaries the Dominion over. In Orillia the labor men and the Board of Trade got together. It may be that extremes were represented but the amalgamation was able to accomplish in a few weeks what labor alone has been vainly striving to achieve for years. The leading manufacturers of that town have consented to reduce the hours of labor from ten to nine a day, or fifty-four hours a week, the same scale of wages to prevail under the reduced working time. All this was done without the slightest sign of discord, without a single threat of a strike. What an alliance of labor and capital, if such it may be called, was able to do in Orillia can be effected by the same peaceful and rational process in Peterborough.

Some will assert by way of making light of the industrial reform that labor's aim is an eight hour day, hence the Orillia arrangement is merely a compromise. The cool-headed and reasonable minded leaders of labor do not expect to turn the industrial world up-side-down in a day, even if there is considerable talk that would lead to another popular conclusion. They recognize the fact that all reforms are brought about slowly. The pinnacle of earthly ambition is attained only by short stepping stones the negotiation of which is often painful. Nine hours a day with the ten hour scale retained is certainly a trimuph in Orillia or elsewhere. That much may have been secured by labor alone in other places but too often other than pacific measures were employed. The good feeling engendered by the Orillia co-operation is the best assurance of the permanency and unqualified satisfaction of the new system.

THE TROUBLE OVER FIUME

"WHY," asks the New York Commercial, who in this issue is supporting the stand taken by President Wilson at the Peace Conference "does Italy covet Fiume to the extent that, in order to get possession of it, she would jeopardize the peace of the world?"

Why does any nation covet the territory that is won in battle. Why for example did Japan insist upon retaining possession of the colonies in Asia from which she expelled the Germans? Why is human nature avaricious? Why is there so much wickedness in the world? Why is anything in the economy of nature not different and better.

Premier Orlando understands the temperament of the Italian people much better than does President Wilson or even the New York paper above quoted. It required diplomacy to enlist the sympathy of that section of the Latin race in the war against the Central Powers. The masses were slow to perceive the wisdom of deserting an alliance with two other powers at that time, apparently on the highway to military triumph to espouse a cause that must, to the unthinking at least, have looked doubtful. But the Italians were finally aroused. They did, later, it is true fall partial victims to the German propagandist but the tact of their leaders overcame what assumed all the grim aspects of a revolution.

The Italians were kept up to the proper pitch of martial enthusiasm by the hope of reward which it seems was actually promised them by the treaty of London. They fulfilled all the conditions that were demanded of them. The signing of the armistice found them occupying, after a valorous conflict the very territory which they are now said to "covet" and which with the possible exception of the city of Fiume, which it seems was not actually included in the bond, had been pledged as the price of victory.

Just as murder will out so will the minor secrets of the dark lantern diplomacy be eventually revealed. The treaty of London was drawn up, signed, sealed and delivered in diplomatic darkness. The terms are now in the possession of the public and the secret conclaves of statesmen have received another body blow.

The Germans were regarded as the personifications of evil when it was announced that they were offering the possessions of other powers still unconquered as an inducement to neutral nations to join the Central Powers. Some alarmists even had a nightmare which pictured Canada as the price of neutrality on the part of the United States. Let us be fair in these matters instead of burdening ourselves with over righteousness. England and France had their compact with Italy. Italy accepted their pledge and now expects that pledge to be redeemed. If France and England have not forsaken their ideals of national honor—and no one for a moment imagines they have, that agreement with Italy will be implemented at any cost.

As before stated Premier Orlando knows the temper of the people whom he serves. He makes no secret of the fact that Italy is on the verge of a revolution and that a trifle would start a general uprising. If he returned to Rome a party to the peace treaty which denied the Italians their promised reward his life would probably be the forfeit. How would the French premier, for example fare if he signed a peace treaty that left Alsace-Lorraine in the hands of the Germans? What would be Lloyd George's reception in England if he, on behalf of Great Britain waived all claim to an indemnity? What would the American nation do to President Wilson if he meekly submitted to any peace terms Germany might suggest

THE PROFESSION AND UNION

At the annual meeting of the Ontario Educational Association held this week in Toronto, the question of forming a provincial federation—or union—of teachers was again brought up and the idea was advanced several stages. The teachers as a class complain of their present rate of compensation and say that only by cooperative action can they hope to better their condition.

In every Ontario city the teachers have their association but the operation of these is merely local. To be really effective any organization must be provincial in its scope. In the event of the teachers in one city holding out for an increase it is now possible for School Boards to break the "strike" by securing a staff from outside. The proposed federation would prevent any such practice.

Why should not the teachers of Ontario have an organization call it union or assocaition—when all other professions have banded together to promote the financial welfare of the members? The judges have their association and some time ago made a concerted move on the Government for higher compensation which demand is likely to be granted. The doctors and the lawyers have their regular schedule of charges and the man who essays to cut rates is promptly read out of the association.

Recently the professional and amateur musicians of Peterborough extended a farewell banquet to Mr. and Mrs. John Allan, on the eve of their departure for their new home in Brantford. At that function the idea of forming an organization of the musicians was brought up and discussed.

If there is a class in this city who really stand in need of a defensive organization it is the musicians. At least two of the bands are already organized and no reference to them is intended. The organists, the soloists and those skilled in other branches of the art are the real victims of the present system. The musicians require years of training and heavy outlay is often necessary before anything like success is achieved. And of all trained artists the musicians are beyond question the most poorly paid. No others are so often asked to donate their services in some public cause and no others in Peterborough so often and so cheerfully respond to the many calls made upon them and for which no material reward is received.

NATIONAL BENEVOLENCE

The benevolent citizen who interferes in a dog fight on the street corner almost invariably bring disaster upon his own devoted head. The altruistic individual who in the goodness of his heart and with the highest of motives, throws a handful of pearls to a herd of swine is simply flirting with trouble. The unappreciative animals may consume the jewels but, are as likely as not to turn upon their benefactor to his undoing.

Nations in their works of alleged benefaction are almost certain to meet with the general fate of the individual. To set up a sponsorship over alien races never fails to create responsibilities and often to bring about war. The benevolence that nations exercise over the weak and unenlightened races is often so much effort wasted. It is the story of the man, the pearls and the swine over again. The motives may be of the purest but the invading power is often suspected of mere mercenary designs, of an ambition to lay hands upon all the moveable assets in the new field.

After the Civil war the misguided statesmen of the north sent their emissaries into the conquered territory to teach the Confederation the highest type of citizenship. The experiment was a rank failure. The fly-by-night contingent from the north misunderstood their sacred mission and pillaged their victims.

England has not had altogether an easy pathway in its efforts to assimilate by benevolence alien lands and races. Its secular missionary work in India and Egypt has not been an unqualified success. A large portion of India is now under military rule—millions of natives started a revolution. There is also trouble in Egypt, where the native population seems to be of the opinion that the aliens are getting the best of it in a commercial sense.

The motive of the principal may be all right but the end in view may be defeated by the action of the agents. Benevolence and military coercion, do not blend as a rule. The occupation of a foreign country always raised up an army still more offensive to the population than the actual armed forces. There are the camp followers, the idlers, the club bag it used to be the carpet bag—adventurers who are looking for easy prey and the quick accumulation of fortunes. The system, idealistic as it may be in design, is apt to break down through defeats in administration.

GIRLS! MOISTEN A CLOTH AND DRAW IT THROUGH HAIR

IT BECOMES BEAUTIFULLY SOFT, WAVY, ABUNDANT AND GLOSSY AT ONCE.

SAVE YOUR HAIR! ALL DANDRUFF GOES AND HAIR STOPS COMING OUT.

Surely try a "Danderine Hair Cleanse" if you wish to immediately double the beauty of your hair. Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; this will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or any excessive oil—in a few minutes you will be amazed. Your hair will be wavy, fluffy and abundant and possess an incomparable softness, lustre and luxuriance.

Besides beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff, invigorates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

You can surely have pretty, soft, lustrous hair and lots of it if you will spend a few cents for a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter and try it as directed.

Save your hair! Keep it looking charming and beautiful. You will say this was the best money you ever spent.

Made in Canada

WHAT ONE BOARD OF TRADE DID

The Council of the Orillia Board of Trade interviewed the manufacturers of Orillia in referenceto re-arranging hour of labor uniformly, and have found that the manufacturers are willing to institute a 9-hour day and 54 hour week commencing May 1st.

This takes the place of the 10-hour day and 60 hour week which has been in effect in Orillia.

Canada Wood Speciality,
Electric Foundries,
Fisher Motor Co.,
Long Mfg. Co.,
C. J. Miller & Sons,
Tudhope-Anderson Co.,
Tudhope-Carriage Co.

On May 1st these factories will commence on the basis of 9-hours a day, 54 hours a week with the same pay as is now in force for 60 hours. In other words the new arrangement means the same pay for 9-hours work as was formerly received for ten.

The Carss Mackinaw Co., has for some years been on an 8-hour basis.

The Orillia Worsted Co., is now on a 9-hour basis, 50-hour week and will continue on this basis.

The majority of the employes of both of these two firms are women and girls.

The Orillia Furniture Co. will have a special arrangement which is in force in all furniture factories in Ontario, which amounts to practically the same arrangement as above outlined.

J. R. Eaton & Sons, Limited, adopted a 9-hour day, 54 hour week the first of April last, with Saturday half holiday May to September, and bonus arrangement with men who continue with them during the summer months, that will offset the time lost.

UNCLE SAM'S OWN PROBLEM

(Journal of Commerce.)

While President Wilson is busy at Paris helping to set aright the affairs of the world generally, his Cabinet at home is called upon to deal with a problem of its own of an international character—the question of what is to be done with the Philippines? When the United States smashed the alleged navy of Spain the Phillipine Islands, along with other colonial possessions of Spain, came under the American flag. Often since that time many Amerihans have regretted that their nation won the Philippine prize. The government of a distant and uncivilized people was not a task to be coveted. It brought burdens and difficulties that sometimes proved very embarrassing to American tatesmen, many of whom would willing have given Filippinos freedom. It was easier however, to take the Phillipines than to let go of them. So Uncle Sam took up this part of the "white man's burden" with the best grace that could be found. The Republicans in the main held that the Philippines were a desirable acquisition. The Democrats expressed much doubt of this and made it their declared policy to give the islands independence whenever the people should give evidence of ability to maintain a stable government.

On the whole, America has done its work well in the islands. The capacity of the people for self-government has been developed. Now the time has come when the Filippinos feel they should have their independence. A delegation of forty, headed by Manuel L. Quezon, President of the Philippine Senate, has come to Washington to ask for the fulfilment of the promise of independence. Secretary Baker, who received them, gave them a favorable message from President Wilson and added his own opinion that the day of independence was close at hand. The American Governor General of the islands Mr. Francis B. Harrison, thinks the obstacles to independence that formerly existed have been removed. But it is Congress only that can grant independence, and much doubt is expressed whether the new Congress, with a Republican majorty, will be willing to cut the painter that connects Washington with Manila. Many American journals told that, while the Filippinos have made gratifying proress in the art of self-government, they are not yet fit to be an independent nation. Fear is expressed that if America's protecting power be withdrawn the islands will soon fall into the hands of Japan, a prospect not pleasing to Americans. Against this Senator Quezon says the Japanese differ from the Filippinos in religion, race and political views, and that the Japanese have no desire to acquire tropical possessions.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

A man of ripe experience is too wise to monkey with green fruit.

Every time a battle is fought another scrap of history is made.

When a man is up and doing much depends on what or whom he is doing.

Don't get the idea that distance lends enchantment to man's view of pay day.

You can always judge the wheels in a man's head by the spokes that come from his mouth.

WIT AND WISDOM

A New Ram.

Quite a number of years ago a member of the New Brunswick Legislature, whose agricultural knowledge was rather hazy, was speaking of the excellent work done by the Government in introducing pure-bred stock into the province. "The Government," he declared, "have brought in the Clydesdale horses, the Shorthorn cattle and the Hydraulic ram."

Genius Has Faulty Memory.

Prof. Harry Thurston Peck, at a literary dinner in New York, discussed men of genius in his usual brilliant manner.

"There are," he said, "many different opinions as to the true definition of a genius, but all authorities agree that it is generally unsafe to lend the fellow money."

Horrible Fear.

Marie—"Don't cry dear. You must be brave while Jack is away with the army. Remember the war won't last forever, and then he will return to you."

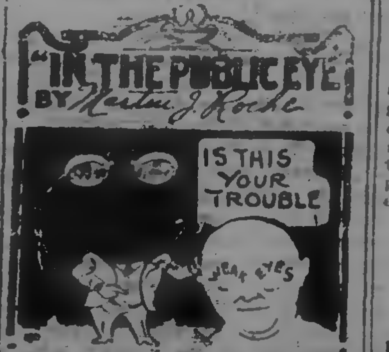
Betty—"Y-yes; but I'm afraid that before he comes back some other hateful man will marry me."

Taking a walk on an empty stomach is said to cure indigestion—but you should be careful whose stomach you walk on.

If a man could yell as loud in proportion to his size as a baby can telephone companies would soon be unable to declare dividends.

Wood's Phosphodine.

The Great English Remedy. Tones and invigorates the whole nervous system, makes new Blood in old Veins, Cures Nervous Debility, Mental and Brain Worry, Despondency, Loss of Energy, Palpitation of the Heart, Failing Memory. Price $1 per box, six for $5. One will please, six will cure. Sold by all druggists or mailed in plain pkg. on receipt of price. New pamphlet mailed free. THE WOOD MEDICINE CO., TORONTO, ONT. (Formerly Windsor.)



If your eyes are weak a pair of resting glasses may assist them back to their former strength. This, however, is not a matter to be guessed at. We will look into the structure of your eyes and discover the exact, or causes of your failing eyesight and will specify the Lenses that you need to bring them to their proper focusing strength. Our prices are reasonable.

Returned Soldiers Seeking Work

Returned soldiers wanting employment either in skilled or unskilled capacity, should have the preference with employers over all other applicants. This is one of the many ways in which their service to the Empire can be fittingly recognized.

The Review will co-operate in this matter by inserting FREE the want advertisements of returned soldiers. Show a service button when placing copy.

IF YOU WANT TO BUY ANYthing at a bargain price, let the people know through The Review columns. You're sure to get it.

THIS WOMAN FOUND HEALTH

And Escaped an Operation by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Hazelhurst, Ga.—"I have used your remedies for only ten months, and they saved me from an operation. Before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was so ill from a female trouble that I was forced to stay in bed for a week at a time with weakness and pain, but your medicine has done so much for me that I am recommending it to all suffering women. It certainly is a great medicine and is a sure road to health for women. You may publish this letter if you like."—Mrs. W. C. LITTLE, R.F.D. A, Hazelhurst, Ga.

Women who suffer from headaches, nervousness, backache, the blues and other symptoms of a functional derangement should give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial.

For forty years it has been overcoming such ailments of women after other medicines have failed.

If you want special suggestions in regard to your condition, write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of long experience is at your service, and your letter will be held in strict confidence.

COBOURG TOWN LEAGUE

Free Trip to Toronto Fair is the Prize Offered

Cobourg, April 25.—Cobourg will have a Town Baseball League this season. Last year the teams in the local league put on some good exhibitions of ball, and a goodly number of players are again available for this season. As an incentive to get busy and set the ball rolling a citizen has offered a free trip to Toronto Exhibition to the winning team.

The "Neponset" Demonstration

Do not fail to take advantage of the 7 Day Demonstration Sale of this wonderful Floor-covering.

"NEPONSET" is in a class by itself. There is no other Floor-covering just as good. To show their absolute faith in its wearing qualities, the makers have instructed us to place it on the sidewalk wher it would get the hardest wear possible in Peterborough. You will see it in front of the Royal Theatre and our own store on George street, right on the sidewalk where it will get harder, rougher wear in one day than in the average home in a year.

"NEPONSET" must be good or the makers would not dare put it to such a test.

There is a "NEPONSET" pattern for every room in the house. Many new and attractive designs to select from. Do not be misled by imitations or "just as good" articles, which are inferior in quality. There is but one "NEPONSET." It is in a class by itself, and sold in Peterborough only at "TURNBULL'S."

Special 7 Day Demonstration Price, per square yard 95c

Signet Ring For Pte. Harry Manley

Wednesday night at the home of Mr. John Manley, Zion, Mr. Harry Manley who recently returned from overseas, was presented with a handsome signet ring on the occasion of his departure for the west. A suitable address was read to the young hero by Mr. Benjamin White and the presentation was made by Mr. Frank Graystock.

The following was the address:

Dear Harry,—

We, your sincere friends and neighbours of Otonabee, are come together to shake hands and to express our regard for your loyalty in sacrificing your prospects in the west in order to do your part in the great effort of the world has made in the cause of liberty and national rights.

Wishing you every success in all your plan sand endeavours for your best interests in the future, we ask you to accept this signet ring and gift of money as a slight token of our good will and appreciation of the stand you have taken in defence of home, country and empire sacrifices for your King and country, for civilization and for righteousness became greater and greater. No one who was old enough to have any understanding of what had happened will ever forget the great and mixed emotions with which the news of the second battle of Ypres was received four years ago. That hellish device of the Germans, poison gas, was first used there and the almost superhuman bravery and steadfastness of the Canadian soldiers on that occasion will live in history and in the hearts of men so long as history and civilization shall endure. It was after that battle that our hearts were wrung with the knowledge that so many from Peterborough had laid down their lives for the great cause, and we read with grief of the death of Major George Bennett and the other gallant men and lads who gave themselves to check the onrush of the foe. Since then you have continued to fight the great fight; and we mourn and yet glory in the sacrifices made by those you have left behind and who will no more return. You did not fail those who rest in the fields of Flanders and France, but did your part bravely until the foe was forced by the gallantry and courage of yourselves and your comrades-in-arms to acknowledge that he was beaten and that his dreams of conquest had ended in defeat and disaster. It is with full hearts that we see you return to your homes and that we welcome you back.

CROWDS THRONG

Ald. Turner's Welcome.

Chairman Turner of the Reception Committee followed the address of the Mayor with a short speech, in which he welcomed the boys back to Peterborough and concluded by informing them that automobiles were waiting outside to convey them to their homes or wherever they wished to go.

A number of returned men arrived in Peterborough on board the C.P.R. 9 o'clock train last night in addition to those who had come G.T.R. No notice had been received of the expected arrival of these men by C.P.R. and they did not reach the armories in time to be included in the civic reception there, although they were taken to their homes in automobiles.

TEACHERS MAY FORM A UNION

THAT IS THEIR ONLY HOPE TO SECURE HIGHER SALARIES.

Toronto, April 25.—Principal Chas O. Fraser in his speech at the Public Scool Section of the O. E. A. presented the unsatisfactory condition of salaries for teahcers and the necessity for concerted action. He showed the movements in various Provinces of Canada to remedy this condition. Some are combining as unions and demanding an increase in their pay which in other places like the north west had set a minimum salary. He said it would be a source of greater strength to the teachers as a body as a profession if they would combine and refuse to take less than a stated amount and the adoption of a modest scale.

He suggested the following:

First year of experience	$600
Second year	650
Third year	700
Fourth year	750
Fifth or subsequent years	800

The principal suggested ways of carrying on a campaign and announced that a salary committee of the General Association had been appointed and appealed for support.

At the combined meeting of the Elementary and Kindergarten sections of the O. E. A. it was decided to accept the minutes as read, since they had been published.

The request of the Home and School Club to be associated with the department met with the approval of the meeting.

W. I. Chisholm, Associate Inspector of Schools for the province and formerly of Peterborough gave an address on consolidated schools, recounting the growth of these institutions in the United States.

WILL SOLDIERS HAND IN NAMES?

COMMITTEE DESIRE TO MAKE PREPARATION FOR BANQUET MAY 1st.

Attention is called to the resolution passed at the meeting of the Reception Committee last night by virtue of which returned soldiers living in the immedate suburbs of the city are invited to attend the banquet which the city of Peterborodgh is tendering to the returned soldiers on May 1.

Every returned soldier in the city and in the immediate suburbs is asked to register with the city clerk without loss of time. The reason for this is to ensure that no veteran is missed, and to obtain an idea of the number to prepare for.

As it is impossible to get in touch with all the returned soldiers as the great majority of their addresses are unknown to the civic officials, the only way to get in touch with them and give them an invitation, is to have them hand in their names to the city clerk.

Every returned soldier in the city suburbs and in the city proper are asked to register and be the guest of the city at the big banquet in the armories on May 1st.

DONATE $100 TO 57TH REGT. BAND

57TH CHAPTER I. O. D. E. WILL GIVE LIKE AMOUNT TO BABY CLINIC

The regular monthly meeting of the 57th Chapter I.O.D.E. was held at the Y.W.C.A. Thursday afternoon at 3.30 with the regent, Mrs. J. C. Davidson in the chair. The knitting committee reported:

28 pairs socks received and two spindles of wool given out.

A resolution was carried to send 150 pairs socks to the navy. A committe was formed to place flags on the graves of the soldiers on Empire Day.

Dr. Jessie Birnie gave a short address concerning the baby clinic about to be opened in Peterborough and towards which the Chapter is donating $100. A resolution was passed to give $100 to the 57th Band. A Committee was formed to decide upon some entertainment to be held in May.

After a short discussion about holding a military euchre the meeting adjourned.

NO SMALL TOWN STUFF ALLOWED

BOWMANVILLE DROPPED FROM CENTRAL LEAGUE FOR CASE OF SULKS.

Bowmanville baseball Club having notified the executive of the Central Baseball League that they would withdraw if not provided with a home game on May 24th, the schedule calling for them to play at Cobourg on that date, it was officially announced that the Grand Trunk Athletic Asociation of Belleville had been substituted for Bowmanville.

Belleville has already wired its guarantee bond and entrance fee. The league now comprises Belleville, Peterborough, Cobourg, Oshawa, Port Hope and Lindsay. Mr. W. J. Thompson of Belleville will be the councillor on the C.B.A.L. in the place of Mr. Geo. James, Bowmanville.

The executive of the league will not stand for any small town stuff from any club and the rules must be observed.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

Says Backache is Sign you have Been Eating Too Much Meat

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

JUDGE ALDEN AT CONSERVATORY

DELIVERED AN ELOQUENT ADDRESS ON "NEEDS OF THE HOUR."

Judge George D. Alden's address "Needs of the Hour," at the Conservatory hall last night was the last attraction of the Redpath Lyceum course which was arranged for by the Conservatory management and which has proved such a success. The final attraction last night was quite up to the high standard of the former ones and was considered by many to be the most instructive of the series.

Judge Alden is one of the foremost platform speakers of the United States. It is said that he has spoken in every state of the Union and there is not an important city of the United States or Canada where he has not given an address.

He has come to be recognized as one of the great powers for good in the moulding of public opinion and in the shaping of character. He is well equipped as a public speaker having had a varied experience in politics, in the practice of law in Boston and New York and has served ten years upon the bench in Massachusetts.

In his address upon "Needs of the Hour" in the Conservatory hall last night Judge Alden dealt with his subject under four heads, domestic, political, religious and commercial. The point he brought out was that to achieve success individual or from the collective standpoint one must never sacrifice self respect.

Unfortunately last night the Conservatory orchestra was unable to take part in the program owing to the home coming of the soldiers which required the presence of the band.

Miss Florence Scott of the Conservatory staff sang "The Valley of Laughter," with violin obligato which varied the program pleasantly.

The entire Redpath Lyceum series has been a srtiking success. Each of the attractions have ben of the highest standard which has been a source of gratification to the management of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music which was responsible for the inclusion of this city upon the circuit of the organization.

The prodigal son went wrong, but came back all right.

The Old-time Painter Says:

"Whether I paint the home of a millionaire or the humblest cottage I always remember that they both meet the same kind of weather. I use

MAPLE LEAF PAINT

It Makes Good Because It's Made Good.

—the millionaire can't buy better paint anywhere.

—and the man who owns the humble cottage can't save money any surer way than with MAPLE LEAF.

MAPLE LEAF PAINT is the sum total motor driven adding machine of paint progress when it comes to comparison with the old pot and paddle days I had to go through.

For the "old man" with his shirt sleeves up and nothing to do on a Saturday afternoon—but a little job of painting—there's nothing to it but MAPLE LEAF and follow the directions on the can. Perhaps he won't need my services, but here's my advice to him:—go to it strong with MAPLE LEAF and the eternal smile will become a permanent fixture on his face—for every time he'll look at the job he'll say MAPLE LEAF for mine every time.

The man with the MAPLE LEAF around his store is the man to buy paint from, look him up in your town."

CHAPTER VIII.

The Black Pirates of Barsoom.

"ABOVE us," Thuvia said, "is a doorway which opens on to the inner gardens. I have brought you thus far. From here on for four miles to the outer ramparts our way will be beset by countless dangers.

"Guards patrol the courts, the temples, the gardens. Every inch of the ramparts themselves is beneath the eye of a sentry."

I could not understand the necessity for such an enormous force of armed men about a spot so surrounded by mystery and superstition that not a soul upon Barsoom would have dared to approach it even had they known its exact location.

I questioned Thuvia, asking her what enemies the therns could fear in their impregnable fortress.

We had reached the doorway now and Thuvia was opening it.

"They fear the black pirates of Barsoom, O prince!" she said, "From whom may our first ancestors preserve us."

The door swung open. The smell of growing things greeted my nostrils the cool night air blew against my cheek.

The great banths sniffed the unfamiliar odors, and then with a rush they broke past us with low growls swarming across the gardens of the therns beneath the lurid light of the nearer moon.

Suddenly a great cry arose from the roofs of the temples, a cry of alarm and warning that, taken up from point to point, ran off to the east and to the west, from temple, court and rampart until it sounded as a dim echo in the distance.

The great Thark's long sword leaped from its scabbard. Thuvia shrank shuddering, to my side.

"What is it?" I asked of the girl.

For answer she pointed into the sky

I looked, and there, above us, I saw shadowy bodies flitting hither and thither high over temple, courts and garden.

Almost immediately flashes of light broke from these strange objects There was a roar of musketry and then answering flashes and roars from temple and rampart.

"The Black Pirates of Barsoom, O prince!" said Thuvia.

In great circles the air craft of the marauders swept lower and lower toward the defending forces of the therns.

Volley after volley they vomited upon the temple guards. Volley on volley crashed through the thin air toward the fleeting and illusive fliers.

As the pirates swooped closer toward the ground thern soldiery poured from the temples into the gardens and courts. The sight of them in the open brought a score of fliers darting toward us from all directions.

The therns fired upon them through shields affixed to their rifles, but on, steadily on, came the grim black craft. They were small fliers, for the most part, built for two to three men. A few larger ones there were, but these kept high aloft, dropping bombs upon the temples from their keel batteries.

At length, with a concerted rush, evidently in response to a signal of command the pirates in our immediate vicinity dashed recklessly to the ground in the very midst of the thern soldiery.

Scarcely waiting for their craft to touch, the creatures manning them leaped among the therns with the fury of demons.

Such fighting! Never had I witnessed its like before. I had thought the green Martians the most ferocious warriors in the universe, but the awful abandon with which the Black Pirates threw themselves upon their foes transcended everything I ever before had seen.

On, Steadily on, Came the Grim Black Craft.

Beneath the brilliant light of Mars' two glorious moons the whole scene presented itself in vivid distinctness. The golden haired, white skinned therns battled with desperate courage in hand to hand conflict with their ebony-skinned foemen.

A little to one side stood Thuvia, the Thark, and I. The tide of battle had not reached us, but the fighters from time to time swung close enough that we might distinctly note them.

The Black Pirates interested me immensely. I had heard vague rumors little more than legends they were during my former life on Mars, but never had I seen them nor talked with one who had.

They were popularly supposed to inhabit the lesser moon, from which they descended upon Barsoom at long intervals. Where they visited they wrought the most horrible atrocities and when they left carried away with them firearms and ammunition and young girls as prisoners.

All about us in the garden lay their sinister craft, which the therns for some reason, then unaccountable to me, made no effort to injure. Now and again a black warrior would rush from a nearby temple bearing a young woman in his arms. Straight for his flier he would leap, while those of his comrades who fought near by would rush to cover his escape.

The therns, on their side, would hasten to rescue the girl, and in an instant the two would be swallowed in a maelstrom of yelling devils, hacking and hewing at one another.

The "Three Musketeers" in "The Better 'Ole" at the Grand tonight and Saturday, matinee and night

DOUGHBOYS LIKE "THE BETTER 'OLE"

RETURNED SOLDIERS SAY "OLD BILL" STILL IS THE GOOD.

There isn't a week goes by that "Old Bill," the rambunctious hero of the "Better 'Ole," which is to be presented at the Grand tonight, Saturday matinee and evening, doesn't receive scores of letters from returned soldiers giving their impressions of his acting and the play. Some of them are serious, others controversial, most of them are slangy and all of them are interesting, because they give rare glimpses into the psychology of the American doughboys.

"Say, Old Top, you're all to the good!" wrote one of these soldier critics. "I sure gotta hand it to you because you've got this soldier stuff down pat. The great trouble with a lot of plays that I have seen about the war is that they are too darned serious. I guess the folks back home thought more seriously about this war than we fellows did who were on the job in France.

"But take it from me, Bill, us guys who smelled powder all the time and were gunning for Huns in No Man's Land wanted to forget the war whenever we got a chance and have a good laugh. If you didn't laugh over there you went 'bugs.' That's why I like you and your show. It's human and it's the right dope."

"Ullo yourself, Bill," wrote another. "Likewise greetings from a gink that was over there and has a game leg to prove it. It's some relief to sit through a show that ain't always pulling soft stuff and break-the-news-to-mother junk.

"Gee, when a guy comes back to God's country looking for amusement, he don't want to go to no show that makes war out even worse than it was. Lord knows it was strenuous enough while it lasted to make us all want to forget it whenever we get a chance."

DUKE FOUND GIRL IN HIS BEDROOM

AND HIS VISITOR PRETENDS TO BE A SLEEP WALKER.

Miss Bessie Barriscale, who is featured in a new Exhibitors Mutual picture, "All of a Sudden Norma," based on a fast action story by Thomas Edgelow, is herself responsible for the somnambulist scene in which, when caught in the sleeping apartment of the Duke of Suffolk in her pretty pajamas she pretends to be a sleep walker and gets away with it on the spur of the minute.

Before Miss Barriscale thought of this solution of the sensational scene there was a touch of the risque about it that Bessie didn't like. She had to have a reasonable excuse for being caught in the middle of the night under such circumstances and thus attired. The sleep-walking idea came like a flash during rehearsal one day, and from that minute it became one of the strong points of the play.

To see Miss Barriscale skidding down a rope from the fourth story of the veranda of a country house is worth going fifty miles to see. She's a graceful little woman and agile as a cat.

It isn't every motion picture actress trained as picture actresses are to do the many varieties of stunts, who can stage such a precarious descent and keep the audience amused and expectant at the same time. This incident is featured in the show running at the Empire today and tomorrow.

An Auburn, Ind., girl dreamed she had "bobbed" her hair. A few nights later she got up in her sleep and really cut it off.

AT THE GRAND

"The Rosary" has been presented at the Grand Opera House in previous years, but never before quite so well as it was staged last night by Oscar O'Shea, supported by an excellent company of artists. Aside from the play itself the performance contained a touch of local color from the fact that Mr. O'Shea is a native of this city, one of the many who, in strange scenes, have brought honorable fame to their birthplace.

Twenty-two years ago Mr. O'Shea, who had a bad case of juvenile stage fever, left this city with the Marks Brothers' show, to which he attached himself in a humble capacity. After a long lapse of years he returns to his old home town at the very summit of his chosen profession. Last night was his second appearance here this season, as only a few weeks ago he presented another admirable play, "The Little Mother."

Mr. O'Shea's mother was one of the audience last night. If there came to her during the performance any regret that her son had ever adopted the stage as a profession, that regret must have been due to her conviction that he would have attained even greater heights if he had studied for the church. Only a man with the instincts of a clergyman, with a clear idea of what is required of the man who wears the clerical garb, could have played the role of Father Kelly as Mr. O'Shea did last night. His Irish brogue was perfect, his devotion had no taint of assumption, his zeal in his work never failed him for a moment, his love for and faith in humanity was unbounded. He understood men and attracted them to himself. Fools who doubted were finally convinced. A home broken up was restored. Right and justice triumphed in the end, thanks to Father Kelly's kindly and tactful offices.

Every member of the company was up to the mark, but among them all no part was better taken than that of Miss Ella Malmroes, the stoical serving maid from Bellows Fall, who had an extravagant regard for the value of maintaining a grave deportment.

FORDSON FARM TRACTOR

SAVES TIME AND LABOR

FORDSON FARM TRACTORS may be observed in many fields along the country roads. Time is so vital to the farmer that they are now a matter of the hour.

There are hundreds of testimonials which indicate the many practical applications and uses to which farmers are putting this latest farm utility, showing that they realize the tractor's great possibility as a necessary part of their equipment. Never tired they help him all day long and day and night if necessary.

REPLACING FARM HORSES

During the turbulent period just passed it has been the job of the farmer of this continent to assist in feeding the entire world. And the demand for their produce is not likely to see any decrease. It is therefore obvious that the indispensability of the tractor will fast replace farm horses in many instances.

ELIMINATES DRUDGERY

Mechanical farming methods is fast changing from one of drudgery to scientific mechanical production with still greater innovations in sight and a much larger measure of enjoyment.

Let us demonstrate the practicability of the Fordson tractor at any kind of work on the farm.

SATURDAY'S MEETING OF N.L.U. IS LIKELY TO MARK REVIVAL

Ottawas, Nationals, Shamrocks, Cornwall, Caughnawaga Indians and M.A.A.A. Likely to Form Eastern Series, Which is Ready for Reorganization.

Ottawa, April 25.— The annual meeting of the National Lacrosse Union, which is called for Saturday next at Montreal, will likely mark the first step towards a healthy revival of the Canadian national summer game. Secretary Ernie Butterworth, of the Ottawa Lacrosse Club, has received a notice of the meeting and will travel down to attend it. President Booth, of the Ottawas, may also go along. Secretary Desse Brown is completing the arrangements and it is expected that at least six clubs will be presented.

The Ottawas as a matter of fact, were suspended last season by the National Lacrosse Union, but the latter was then operating merely as a patriotic series, and there is no doubt about the Senators, who captured the championship last summer, being welcomed back. Eddie St. Pere, general manager of the National Amateur Athletic Association, has been organising thoroughly and it is likely that the N.L.U. will operate on a stronger basis than ever before.

The Ottawas are ready to re-enter and it is likely that the M.A.A.A. will also be in the field again. They have not played since the summer of 1915, having abandoned sport for the duration of the war. The Nationals and Shamrocks will be very much in the field again and it is likely that the Caughnawaga Indians will also be on hand with an application. The Cornwall Club, which was out of lacrosse last summer, has already made arrangements for reorganization and will, according to reports from the Factory Town, be able to place a strong team on the field. If the Caughnawagas are admitted there will be six teams in it and the league would be splendidly balanced. This would give each club five home games, operating a single schedule of home and home matches. The Ottawa Club will likely hold a meeting Thursday evening for the purpose of completing plans to be represented at Saturday's meeting.

As far as material is concerned, the Ottawas appear splendidly for[illegible]. They have all of last year's [illegible], with the exception of Art [illegible], their big cover point player, who may possibly return and one or two veterans who do not intend to play again. These include a home man, who is just recovering from an attack of appendicitis. Norman Harshaw is here from Toronto and will likely play and there are one or two other outsiders who may be available. President Booth said yesterday that the outlook appeared exceptionally bright and that the Ottawas would get down to practice at Lansdowne Park early in May. In a week or so, in fact, the gutted stick artists will be cavorting around the sward at Lansdowne Park. Bouse Hutton and Alf Smith will again do the coaching.

For the past few seasons, the Ottawas have applied all their proceeds to patriotic funds but it is likely that the club and the players will work along co-operative lines for the coming season, as Shamrocks have decided to do.

CANADIAN LADY WON BIG PRIZE

MRS. DOROTHY CAMPBELL HURD ADJUDGED BEST GOLFER AT PINEHURST

Pinehurst, April 25—Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd has been awarded the season's prize for the best Ringer score made by a woman player on the Number One course at Pinehurst. The famous golfing champion played the 18 holes in a total of 67, as follows:

4 4 4 4 4 3 3 4 4—34
4 2 4 3 4 4 4 5 3—33—67

Par on this course is 35-34, 69, and the distance is nearly 6,000 yards (5,919 yards, to be exact).

Mrs. Hurd has done most of her playing on the Number Two (championship) course this season and it is unfortunate that no official record was kept of her rounds on that course. She has quite a number of birdies to her credit, on Course Two, and only two on Course One, these being her 4 on the 437-yard 3rd hole and a 2 on the 11th. Mrs. Hurd led the field by a margin of 8 strokes in the season's contest and her card would represent the best ball of all contestants if it were not for the 18th hole, where Mrs. Roland H. Barlow, the North and South champion, won the Silver Foils title by going down in 2.

"SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE"

One of the Features in Gus Hill's Minstrel Show

"Somewhere in France" is the title of the ollo drill in the big program of Gus Hill's Big Minstrels to be seen here at the Grand Opera House Monday evening only. It is described as a picturesque effect, electric with the military fervor of the hour, and made glittering with a broadsword evolution and clash effect. The Hill amalgamation is one of the biggest of travelling minstrel companies, no less than 50 actual entertainers being listed in the combination in addition to various supplemental members, musicians and other aides.

BRILLIANT PIANIST AND ORGANIST AT ST. PAUL'S

Mr. Frank Tattersall, formerly of Manchester, Eng., will preside at the organ in St. Paul's church tomorrow. On Monday evening he will give a piano and organ recital in the church, to which the public is invited. Among the numbers he will give on the piano is "St. Francis of Assisi Preaching to the Birds", by Liszt. Silver collection.

ALEX. J. COLLINS IS PROMOTED

FORMER PETERBOROUGH RESIDENT MADE MANAGER OF BANK AT TAVISTOCK.

Mr. Alex J. Collins, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Collins, McDonnel street, Peterborough, has been appointed manager of the new branch of the Bank of Montreal in Tavistock, Ont.

Mr. Collin's promotion to the head of the Tavistock office will be noted with pleasure by his many friends in this city. His business career commenced in the Peterborough branch of the Bank of Ontario in the days before that institution was taken over by the Bank of Montreal. He went from here to Mount Forest where he was stationed for 13 years and it was while there that the two banks amalgamated.

He continued with the Bank of Montreal and his appointment by that Corporation to the charge of an office which has just been established and where a new business field is opened up comes as a recognition of efficient service.

FREE PASSES FOR THE VETERANS

MANAGER DAHN INVITES SOLDIERS WHO RETURNED LAST NIGHT TO ATTEND THEATRE.

Manager Dahn of the Grand Opera House has extended an invitation to the soldiers who returned to the city last night to be his guests at the play, "The Better 'Ole," at the Grand Opera House tonight. They can obtain tickets by applying to Secretary Whatley of the G. W. V. A. at his office in the hall on George street up to 7:30 this evening.

This invitation applies to this evening only, and as the play is one of the most popular upon the circuit and will appeal especially to soldiers just returned from the scenes which it describes; there is no doubt that the veterans will enjoy themselves.

It is felt that the difficulty will be in notifying all of them of the invitation, and in this connection Secretary Whatley called upon the papers for their co-operation and asks that anyone knowing men who returned last night will pass the word to them so that they will be able to take advantage of the offer of the manager of the Grand.

Sergt. W. C. Hele Is Home Again

Sergt. Wm. C. Hele, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Hele, Spohia St., of the 1st contingent, returned last evening with the 2nd Battalion. Sergt. Hele was one of the first to enlist when the call came. He has been in France ever since and returned without a scratch. Sergt. Hele, before enlisting, was a member of the 57th Regiment.

GOVERNMENT CLAMPS LID ON DEBATE ON STATE RAILWAY

House Adjourned at 3 O'clock This Morning After Non-Cyntertion Clauses Had Been Disposed of—Opposition Objects to the Closure

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, April 26—About 3 o'clock this morning the House of Commons adjourned till Monday, after the Government had applied the closure rule. This adjournment was made after three days' strenuous discussion on the bill to incorporate the Canadian National Railway Company. All non-contentious clauses were disposed of, and the contentious clauses will be taken up early on Monday. The bill must be disposed of by the House before 2 o'clock Tuesday morning, and the discussion on Monday will be limited.

This morning, when the Opposition was made aware by Hon. Arthur Meighen that the closure was to be moved, they protested vigorously. They declared that they were entitled to further discussion, more particularly in regard to additional lines. This opposition was voiced particularly by Leader McKenzie, who said that because the members of the Opposition asked for further particulars they were laughed at and told their faculties were failing. Hon. Arthur Meighen said the Government must make headway with the bill, and the adjournment was made.

ST. LUKE'S CHURCH HONORS HEROES

SPLENDID RECEPTION TO RETURNED MEN WAS HELD LAST EVENING

The ladies of St. Luke's Church held a reception last evening for all the returned soldiers of the congregation. The reception was in the form of a tea, and the program given by members of the choir. Some of the soldiers present were: Sergt. H. Kelcy, M.M., Capt. Harry Rogers, Pte. George Eggerton, Pte. Fred Storey, Sergt. J. B. Mackin, Sergt. Alex. Butcher, Sergt. Bryer Carpenter, M.S.M., Pte. Wm. Whitworth, Sig. Arthur Carpenter, Capt. C. H. Rogers, M.C., Sig. Albert Thompson, Gr. Robert Hamilton, Tpr. Sam Whitehouse, Pte. James Marshall.

Mr. R. B. Rogers acted as chairman for the evening. Short speeches were made by Rev. Mr. White, rector, Mr. J. J. Turner, Pte. Jas. Marshall, Captains Harry and Claude Rogers. Mrs. Greenslade accompanied all the musical numbers, which were given by Miss M. Green, Mrs. A. G. Northcotte, Frank Whitehouse, and Mr. W. A. Greenslade.

An impromptu number was given by Mr. R. B. Rogers. Earle Maniece was in charge of the lantern, while the slides of St. Luke's soldiers were being shown.

Refreshments were provided by the ladies of the church, while the Girls' Bible Class served. The meeting broke up with the singing of the National Anthem.

NO EIGHT HOUR DAY FOR NURSES

ONTARIO ASSOCIATIONS ARE OPPOSED TO ANY REDUCTION IN HOURS.

Kingston, April 26.—That the memorial for nurses who died in war service take the form of a fund for nurses disabled or broken down in health was the recommendation of the Ontario Graduate Nurses Assembly at the annual meeting here.

The plan is to have money advanced to the nurses to pay their maintenance at a sanatorium.

The meeting discussed an eight hour day for nurses but it did not meet with approval. It was felt that while hospitals had the right to regulate the hours of nurses in training in private nursing, the service should be twelve hours.

Hot Dispute Over Railway Problem

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, April 26—Dr. Michael Clark and Leader D. D. McKenzie had a lively tilt in the Commons over the railway question in the West.

Northwestern University, Illinois, wants as president the "biggest executive available," and a committee to select him was appointed.

U. S. OFFICIAL ON ITALIAN CRISIS

SECRETARY LANE SAYS ITALY HAS NO CLAIMS ON FIUME

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, April 26.—In a statement today, Secretary of the Interior Lane said that Fiume was not to be given to Italy under the provisions of the London treaty. Under the treaty Fiume was to go to Crotia, now part of Jugo-Slavia. The question of giving Fiume to Italy becomes a question of good judgment. He said: "President Wilson and Premiers Lloyd George and Clemenceau unitedly concluded that to give Fiume to Italy would be unjust to the new republics east of the Adriatic."

He said that the Italian claim is based on the fact that the majority of the population are Italians.

Nurses Elect A New Committee

The nurses belonging to the Central Registry Office for Graduate Nurses had a pleasant meeting yesterday at the Public Library. There were ten nurses present: Miss Bixon, Mrs. Gamey, Misses Sloan, Robertson, Green, Roche, Jones, Cavanagh, Deyell, and Miss Peck, of the Registry Office.

The principal object of the meeting was to select the new committee, the old committee having for various reasons resigned. Those selected were: Miss M. Deyell, Miss Thornton, Miss L. O'Brien, Miss Jones, Miss Sloan and Mrs. Gamey.

DONATED USE OF THEIR AUTOS

CITIZENS WHO HELPED IN TAKING VETERANS TO THEIR HOMES.

The following car owners responded to the Automobile Association's request to meet the returned soldiers on Thursday night. On account of the number of returned men being less than expected many of these cars could not be filled, but the whole-hearted response of the members is appreciated by all friends concerned. Those who gave the use of their cars were:

E. G. Patterson, H. W. Morphet, E. W. Barbridge, Mark Burnham, A. Brown, Edgar Worth, P. P. Westbye, J. E. A. Fitzgerald, A. A. Fowler, Bert Watts, J. J. Duffus, G. Walter Green, R. J. Kidd, A. C. Cressman, A. H. Stratton, M. J. Maher, E. T. McFadden, R. L. Dobbin, S. D. Hall, W. G. Freeburn, J. Sands, S. King, H. Taylor, George W. Hatton, W. G. Morrow, C. E. Canfield, J. J. Turner & Sons (2 cars), G. A. Gillespie (2 cars).

'Tis believed in London that the big three will stick to Wilson's policy regarding Fiume and that eventually Italy must give in.

PREMIER ORLANDO IS GIVEN AN OVATION BY ITALIANS

Immense Throng Greets Him on His Arrival Home—Populace Approves His Stand at Conference and the Parliament is Ready to Back Him Up.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Rome, April 26.—An immense throng greeted Premier Orlando on his arrival here from Paris. The Premier made a short speech defending the stand taken by the Italian delegation at the Peace Conference, a demonstration following in the crowd voiced its approval vociferously. Similar enthusiasm followed speeches by Signor Barsilai and General Diaz.

Dispatches say that Senators are arriving on all trains and show confidence that the Cabinet will approve Premier Orlando's action and proclaim the necessity for a united front by all parties in defense of Italian interests. Circulars distributed in Rome at places frequented by officers and men of the Allied armies invited citizens of the Allied nations now staying in Rome to participate in a demonstration arranged for the arrival of the Italian delegates.

Paris is Hopeful

Paris, April 26—Premier Orlando and his colleagues will appear before Italian parliament on Monday next according to a Paris newspaper. The newspaper says: "We are able to affirm that, whatever the outcome of this session of the Italian parliament, Premier and his fellow delegates will immediately start for Paris and that the Italian delegation will be in full strength at Versailles on May 1."

ANOTHER SESSION FOR LEGISLATURE

PREMIER AND OPPOSITION LEADERS AGREE TO A FURTHER EXTENSION

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, April 26.—Premier Hearst and Opposition Leader Proudfoot have agreed to extend the present parliament over another session.

25,000 WORDS IN PEACE TREATY

DETAILS OF FINAL DRAFT WILL BE SENT TO OTTAWA

Ottawa, April 26.—It is learned that the Dominion Government expects to receive the detailed draft of the Peace Terms. If this draft is received here, as anticipated, it will be released for publication at Ottawa the same time as at Washington. Just when that will be of course is impossible to say at present.

It is known that the G. N. W. Telegraph Company has been notified to be in readiness to copy the terms at any time, and it was understood today that the despatch would commence to come in to-morrow morning. It is stated that a day or two may elapse before the Treaty commences to come over the wires.

It has been stated in Paris cables that the draft of the Treaty will contain at least 25,000 words.

Noble Sacrifice Made By Mother

MRS. STEELE OF HAILEYBURY GAVE HER LIFE TO SAVE DAUGHTER.

Haileybury, April 26.—The King Edward Boarding House is in ashes and a number of other houses are slightly damaged as a result of a fire which broke out here early yesterday morning in the first-named building, and in which Mrs. Henry Steele wife of the proprietor, received burns which later caused her death. A fifty-mile gale was blowing straight down from the north, accompanied at times with driving flurries of snow. As the fire fighters valiantly attempted to check the onrush of the flames, so intense became the heat that two lengths of fire hose through which water was pouring were shrivelled up like so much paper.

All the occupants had escaped when Mrs. Steele, believing her fourteen-year-old daughter was still in the house rushed to the rescue and was soon overcome with the intense heat and smoke. She was rescued by members of the fire bridge, who arrived a moment later, but to live only a few hours.

WAR TIME BLACK LIST IS LIFTED

BAN REMOVED FROM ALL THOSE WHO TRADED WITH ENEMY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, April 26.—The Canadian mission in London has cabled the Canadian Trade Commission that all war time black lists have been suspended. The list contained the names of several thousand merchants all over the globe who had intimte relations with either the enemy or with the traders of enemy nationality.

Soviet Army Is In Full Flight

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berne, April 26—The Hungarian Soviet army is in full flight before the Rumanians. Three armies are advancing against Budapest.

Racing Fraternity Are Disappointed

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, April 26.—There is much disappointment in racing circles over the Government's declining to remove the ban on race track betting.

DEFAULTERS FINED.

But Another Man, Considered Not to Blame, Allowed Off.

Niagara Falls, Ont., April 26.—Orin Smith and Geo. Henry Smith, both of Dunnville but not related, were each fined $25 by Magistrate Fraser here for being defaulters. Both neglected to obey orders to go for medical examination. Lloyd Ellis, of Welland, who was ill when the summons came to the factory where he was employed and the letter was sent back to military headquarters, was allowed off on suspended sentence, as it was considered that he was not to blame, and in any event he could not have passed the medical examination.

TRAPPERS' GOOD LUCK

Muskrat Hunters Near Lindsay Have Good Luck

Lindsay, April 26.—The Scugog River and its many tributary creeks is perhaps the busiest place of any water in Ontario at this season of the year. It is reported that more muskrats are sent from Lindsay and vicinity of the big buyers than from any other town in Eastern Ontario. This year muskrat trappers report a good season, and the price is high, namely, $2.30 and $2.40 a pelt.

Today the north country is covered with a blanket of snow and the mercury is standing only a few degrees from the zero mark.

TITLES IN CANADA TO BE ABOLISHED

IF FINDING BY SPECIAL COMMITTEE IS ENDORSED BY PARLIAMENT

Ottawa, April 26.—Scarcely fifteen minutes elapsed before the Commons committee appointed to come to some conclusion on the titles controversy decided unanimously that hereditary titles in Canada should cease on the death of the present holders of such titles. Just how this should be brought to pass was not decided. The prevailing opinion, however, appearing to be that it could best be accomplished by making a petition to the King and his imperial advisers that this policy should be adhered to in Canada in the future. So far as titular distinctions were concerned, Hon. W. S. Fielding thought that most people would be satisfied with the elimination of "Sir" and "Baron" and other non-professional prefixes. None objected to a C.M.G. or an I.S.O. Col. "Si" Peck, V.C. himself, unblazoned with decorations won on the European battlefilds, believed a time limit should be put, so that those who had merited Knighthood or similar distinctions by distinguished service in the war might be honored before doing away with the practice altogether.

Mr. A. R. McMaster feared this would create a military autocracy in Canada, and further discussion revealed a general belief that titles should go, apart from distinctions for soldiers with splendid war records.

PROHIBITION TO BE MODIFIED

BUT ORDER-IN-COUNCIL WILL BE EXTENDED ONE YEAR

Ottawa, April 26—It is understood that as a result of the Government caucus the prohibition bill will be modified so as to conform with provincial legislation. The Government's measure will only be supplementary to provincial statutes. There was a strong feeling expressed by the majority of the private members against imposing prohibition on a province which had voted against prohibition. It was felt that it was an interference with provincial autonomy.

The Government's bill will extend the order-in-council prohibiting the manufacture and importation of spirituous liquors for another year, with exceptions to meet provincial legislation. At present there is prohibition all over Canada except Quebec where the sale of beer and wine alone will be permitted after May 1st.

Diversity on Racing

There was considerable difference of opinion expressed at the caucus in regard to racing and it is a question whether the Cabinet was much enlightened by the gathering, so divergent were the views expressed.

It is likely that racing will be again allowed, but with restrictions to prevent abuses. The British Columbia members for instance, at the caucus were almost unanimous against a return to the old conditions on the coast claiming that racing did not encourage horse breeding in that province and had led to serious gambling abuses.

Hundreds Jailed In Budapest

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Budapest, April 26—The situation here is tense and hundreds of citizens are being thrown into jail. There have also been a few executions. Joseph Pogany, a Soviet leader, is making speeches demanding "blood" and warning the Hungarians who have welcomed the Rumanians or Czechs in invaded districts that they will be called to account later for working against the Bolshevik regime.

CONFERENCE BADLY SHAKEN BY THE ITALIAN SITUATION

In French and Italian Quarters the Crisis is Regarded as Desperate—Italians May not Take Part in Plenary Session to Discuss Covenant

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 26.—The Peace Conference has been severely shaken by the Italian crisis, and the extent to which its work will be affected is receiving the anxious attention of the delegates. The American storm has broken and the air has cleared in that quarter, but in other quarters a less optimistic view is taken, the feeling being that an element of confusion has been introduced which will result in more or less delay at the moment the German delegates are arriving.

In French and Italian circles the situation is regarded as serious, and some quarters even represent it as desperate, but this extreme view is not generally held. Several of the committees met today with Italian members present, and the secretariat of the American delegation said that no notice had been received of the withdrawal of Italian participation. Pending formal action, no break in relations would be assumed, it was added, but the departure of the Italian delegates and the announcement of the departure of Foreign Minister Sonnino and former Minister Salandra, to occur today, creates an anomalous situation, as it is not known whether Italy will be represented at the plenary session of the conference on Monday when parts of the treaty, including the League of Nations covenant, will be finally passed upon.

SAYS ORLANDO IS BLUFFING

BUDAPEST IS ELATED OVER SIGNS OF CONFLICT IN CONFERENCE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Vienna, April 26—The withdrawal of the Italian legation from the Peace Conference was received here with elation, people generally being glad to see the Allies in conflict with each other. The Neue Freie press says: "Premier Orlando is bluffing, probably in order to square his position in Italy toward the interventionists. 'Tis impossible for Italy to withdraw as she is fed by America."

The teaching of German is excluded from Pennsylvania schools.

WHERE DEMOCRACY HAS REACHED THE HIGHEST DEGREE OF GROWTH

"Jimmy" Simpson Tells Audience in the Sons of England Hall That New Zealand Has the Most Up-to-Date System of Government in World

Jimmy Simpson, of Toronto, celebrated socialist worker and editor of the Industrial Banner, gave an address in the Sons of England hall last night upon "Democracy in New Zealand."

In commencing, he gave his audience to understand that in speaking of democracy the term must be clearly understood to mean only the stage which democracy has reached as he does not consider it to be very far advanced in any country and in many lands it is only in its initial stages.

His description of conditions in New Zealand, political, industrial, and commercial was most interesting, and according to his statement this colony of England must be conceded to have the most progressive policy of government in the world.

In New Zealand the railways, telephone lines, telegraph lines, wireless and many other utilities are controlled by the Government. In addition to this a most satisfactory system of Government life and fire insurance has been in operation for some time, which has cut down the rates of the private corporations in a surprising manner. Mothers' pensions and old age pensions are granted there and all the executive work connected with the carrying on of all these enterprises is centred in the post office department and transacted through their branches.

National Railways.

Speaking of the nationalization of railways and Mr Simpson evidently felt that this was a question which would bear detailed treatment before a Canadian audience at the present time. He intimated that in New Zealand they had gone about the matter right from the start, and as a result did not have to finance the enterprises and then buy back at a fabulous price what really belonged to them after a small army of private promoters had waxed rich as a result of their exploitation.

Mr. Simpson claimed last night that it was the most brazen effrontery for railway promoters to demand that the Government of any country in taking over their line pay for it upon a capitalization basis instead of according to the actual cash investment.

He cited cases where railway magnates had inflated the capitalization of railway companies beyond all reason and expressed this opinion that the purchase price of such a road should not be based upon its capitalized value as set forth in the statements prepared by its officials.

Land grants to the Canadian Pacific Railway came in for considerable criticism from Mr. Simpson last night and in this connection he referred to the detrimental influence this policy had proved in regard to the progress of education in the west. There the large tracts of land, granted to the C.P.R., had been exempt even from school taxes.

In New Zealand Government ownership of railways had assisted education as children were transported free of charge if need be to the nearest school every day in order that their education should not be neglected.

Travelling in the Island Colony was much cheaper than in North America. There Mr Simpson purchased a ticket for himself which was good for seven weeks and which gave him the privilege of travelling as much as he wished and as often as he found it necessary during that time. He paid $70 for the ticket and had he travelled on a Canadian or American road, as extensively as he did in New Zealand, it would have cost him a small fortune.

There were twelve or fourteen different kinds of tickets issued on the New Zealand railways to suit the various needs of the people. There were students' tickets, workingmen's tickets and family tickets. Mr. Simpson felt their railroad policy was a long way in advance of that of Canada and the United States.

Nationalized telephone, telegraph and wireless systems were other steps in advance of the rest of the world. Mothers' pensions made the mind of the widow easy and relieved her of anxiety in regard to the rearing of her large family and old age pensions ensured the people against poverty and its attendant hardships in the evenings of their lives.

The speaker gave great credit for the advanced form of democracy enjoyed in New Zealand to the administrative ability and far sightedness of the

THE HUMORS OF SPELLING.

PROF. D. R. KEYS, one of the most distinguished English scholars in Canada and now instructor in that subject in Toronto University, gave an address on the above topic at the recent meeting of the Ontario Education Association in Toronto. One feature of this orthographical levity that Prof. Keys detects is the fact that the "u" in some words of English origin has been so frequently juggled by the blacksmiths—or jokesmiths—of the language. Not so very long ago the "u" was regarded as a member of the alphabetical conglomeration in good standing. Later it was eliminated, and still later restored in all its phonetic uselessness. There is at present an agitation to have it cast out again, although the affiliation of the present Minister of Education appears to be against the idea.

The "u" is the fifth wheel that all agree the wagon does not require. But the trouble is that its use or disuse is regarded as a thermometer that denotes the degree of patriotic enthusiasm of the nation. To discard that letter is in some quarters regarded as a reflection upon the wisdom of the dictionary makers in the mother country.

We fail to see the humor that Prof. Keys alleges he is able to locate. Is there not rather more of tragedy in a system that still preserves the old fogyism, the perpetuation of which has made the acquisition of orthographical proficiency an academic goal which may be dreamed about but is seldmon attained? But the learned professor is optimistic above the ordinary. Like so many others, he believes that marvelous reforms are to follow as so many direct or indirect results of the war. Spelling reform is one of these. The new era upon which the world is entering is to see a change in this regard. The humorists alone will stick to the old forms proceeding upon the same grounds, probably, as the writer who makes the world smile by recounting some of the incongruities that were vogue in ancient days.

BASIC LANGUAGE LAWS.

THEY HAVE THEIR language problem, too, in the United States, and the war has brought the discussion of the question to a head. Even those of high military caste are taking a hand in it. For instance, General Leonard Wood said the other day that "the time has come when we should have only one language in our grade schools, and that is the language of the declaration of independence."

Legislation is being advocated in various states, including Illinois, embodying this vital principle. Pending bills dealing with the language question vary somewhat in detail, but the central idea is the same in all. In Nebraska and Kansas the people call them "language compromise" measures. This term should not be misunderstood. The principle is not compromised. English, under the provisions of the legislation alluded to, is made "the basic language" of every school, public or private. No foreign language is to be permitted to overshadow that of the country in any grade, while in some of the bills the teaching of foreign languages is prohibited below the seventh grade.

There is virtually no opposition to this sort of legislation. It was a painful surprise to Americans—though it need not have been a surprise at all—to discover after the nation's entry into the war that in many states there were schools in which the English language was neither taught nor used. It was a shock to find that a large proportion of the men summoned to the defence of the republic under the selective service act did not understand the language of the country, the only language in which the American army and navy conceivably could be given commands. Such a situation should never be possible again.

National sentiment approves the measures requisite to make the English language the basic language in every school or public institution of the country. Extreme proposals directed against the use of foreign languages by lodges or at meetings or by newspapers and periodicals have been abandoned or sensibly modified. While there is to be no gratuitous or unjust interference with individual preferences or needs, the moral unity of the republic must be assured, and the foundation of that unity is the national language.

THE WORLD'S SOLE SECURITY.

THE WESTMINSTER GAZETTE believes in the League of Nations as the world's one last hope of security and peace, all other means of defence having dismally failed.

Security, it appears, is a very elusive object, and we may add that it was never more so than at the present moment. If there is one lesson more than another which we have learnt in the last stage of the war, it is that no militarist can ever be sure that his best and most elaborate preparations may not be rendered wholly useless by the brilliant improvisation of an unprepared opponent. A new gas, a new kind of tank, still more, the development of aircraft, may turn all the far-sighted preparations of a general staff into nonsense on an instant, and leave them positively at a disadvantage against an enemy who is free to develop new ideas. Who, when he reads of the military gentlemen at the Paris Conference laboriously working at a scheme of "security," on the supposition that a big army on a "strategic frontier" will be a barrier against attack—who can help having an uneasy feeling that ten years from now all this may be as antiquated and foolish as the construction of a Chinese wall? For if aircraft does half that its enthusiasts claim for it, there will in that time be no frontiers at all that any earth-bound force could defend, and the problem of security may have resolved itself into a perplexed groping for a precarious defence against destruction from the air.

But suppose otherwise, suppose the delegates go back from Paris, each to their own countries, and announce to their peoples that they have one and all determined never again to be in the insecure position that they were in in 1914, that in future they are going to have vastly greater armaments than they had before the war, armaments pitched to the scale of the last years of the war, armaments which will render them absolutely secure against a revival of Germany or a combination between Germany and Russia—have they security then? We may judge from their extreme reluctance to announce any such decision. For every one of them knows that if this is the conclusion, they do but exchange external for internal danger. At the end of that passage stands—Bolshevism. Budgets will not be balanced nor recovery be possible; permanent poverty, crushing loads of taxation, discontent, resistance to military service, agitation and perhaps revolution, will be the lot of the victorious as of the defeated. When the old statesmen have finally brought Europe to this pass and confessed themselves helpless before their own monsters, there will quite certainly be found new and disturbing ways of relief in which humbler people will claim to play a part. But these certainly will not be the ways of "security," as understood by comfortable citizens of the world.

Such being the prospects for all the nations, is it not worth while for them to try another and different kind of experiment, the experiment of the League of Nations? True, there is no certainty even in that way, for it is and must be an exploring of new ground. But it is at least a promising and hopeful adventure, whereas all the others end eventually in blind-alley.

A NINE-HOUR DAY.

(Orillia Packet.)

THE ADOPTION of the nine-hour day by Orillia's industrial plants on Thursday next is a matter for felicitation, both for the shortening of the hours of labor, in keeping with the tendency of the times, and for the manner in which the change has come about. It is much better all round that there should be a voluntary reduction of the hours on the part of the manufacturers, made on a reasonable basis, and accepted in the spirit in which the concession is offered, than that, as in many places, there should be a struggle over demands which employers feel to be extreme and beyond their power to concede, followed by a compromise that satisfies nobody and leaves a feeling of estrangement. The agitation which has been going on throughout Canada for shorter hours and higher wages has undoubtedly been a factor in retarding the restoration of peace activity in industry, as there seemed danger that the movement might be pushed to a point where it would upset the whole industrial system of the country. Nine hours now becomes the standard in Orillia, without loss of income to the workingman, and it is to be hoped that all classes will now settle down to co-operate with hearty good will in making the town as prosperous as possible. Nine hours is doubtless not the final goal, but it is a substantial step in that direction, and the manufacturers assert that it is as much as present conditions will warrant.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

THESE DAYS a simple application for a lease on a house seems sufficient to boost the rent another notch or two.

HUNGARY'S FORM of government seems to be as capable of variation as the average alderman on the bridge question.

WHY NOT STAND UP to every municipal issue squarely and dispose of it, instead of going from one adjournment into another?

RUSSIA, TOO, it seems, joined in the promise to give the Dalmatian coast to Italy, but just now Russia's word is considerably below par.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

PLAINLY STATED.

(Indianapolis News.)

That league of nations scheme seems to have got around to the question of what to do to the bleacherite who throws a pop bottle at the umpire.

HIGH QUALITY.

(Vancouver Province.)

The little town of Owen Sound, Ontario, is a justly proud community. It is the home of the youngest V.C. in the British Empire and of Major Bishop, the premier "ace."

ONE EXPLANATION.

(Guelph Mercury.)

Quebec took a look at "Bone dry" Russia, and then at Toronto, supposed to be bone dry, shrugged her shoulders, and said: "What's the use? I might as well be drunk as the way I am." The majority was almost one hundred thousand.

ONLY PROLONGING THE MISERY.

(Kingston Whig.)

The abolition of titles in Canada was defeated the first time by the Premier, and on the second occasion by the acting premier. The old rule of "three times and out" must in the end prevail. The Government is only prolonging the misery.

MUST NOT EMPLOY CHILDREN

NEW TAX LAW IN UNITED STATES PROVIDES SEVERE PENALTIES FOR VIOLATIONS.

Washington, April 26.—The interpretation of the provisions of the new tax law by the Internal Revenue Bureau places a very severe penalty on the employment of child labor. According to the bureau's opinion, an employer can be assessed ten per cent. of the net profits of his business for the taxable year if he employs one child for even one day in conflict with the child labor tax provisions of the new revenue law, which becomes operative today.

On and after this date the profits of any mine or quarry in which children under 16 years of age are employed, or of any mill, cannery, factory, workshop or manufacturing establishment in which children under fourteen years are employed or permitted to work "during any portion of the taxable year" is subject to the ten per cent. tax.

A single specific exception is made of boys' and girls' canning clubs, such as are recognized by the Department of Agriculture.

Plans for the enforcement of the law have been virtually completed. There is being formed in the Bureau of Internal Revenue a division to be known as the child labor tax division.

While it is the purpose of the Bureau of Internal Revenue to enforce the law strictly, its aim is to administer its provisions in a way to cause as little inconvenience as possible to the business world and to offer no injustice to employes.

It is its intention to accept in confirmation of the age of the child, with certain restrictions as to revocation and suspension, the age of the certificate, working or employment certificate or permit, or other similar permit issued under the laws of the state.

The plan is for federal agents to visit localities in such states where establishments employ child labor, and issue the certificates in person.

The act imposes a penalty of a fine of not more than $1000 or imprisonment for not more than three months, or both fine and imprisonment, for knowingly presenting false evidence in relation to a birth certificate or application therefor.

The law provides that in none of the industries within the scope of the law shall children within the age limits be permitted to work more than eight hours a day or more than six days a week, or before the hour of 6 a.m. or after 7 p.m. without the assessment of the tax.

Such industries will be required to keep a time record for the information of federal inspectors, showing the hours of employment of each child between the ages of 14 and 16

RHEUMATISM CAN BE CURED

In the days of our grandfathers rheumatism was thought to be the unavoidable penalty of middle life and old age. Almost every elderly person had rheumatism, as well as many young people. Medical science did not understand the trouble—did not know that it was rooted in the blood. It was thought that rheumatism was the effect of exposure to cold and damp, and it was treated with linaments and hot applications which sometimes gave temporary relief, but did not cure the trouble. In those days there were thousands of rheumatic cripples. Now medical science understands that rheumatism is a disease of the blood and that with good, rich, red blood any man or woman of any age can defy the trouble. Rheumatism can be cured by killing the poison in the blood which causes it. For this purpose the blood making, blood enriching qualities of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is becoming every year more widely known, and it is the more general use of these pills that has robbed rheumatism of its terrors. In proof of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to cure this trouble, Miss Jennie Stockdale, Hall's Bridge, Ont., says: "Two winters ago I was taken with a bad attack of rheumatism, and was in bed for over two months, most of which time I could not sleep or enjoy rest day or night. The trouble also affected my nerves, which were very bad. I tried several remedies but did not get any help from them, and then, acting on the advice of a friend, I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I soon felt that the pills were helping me, and after taking eight boxes I am glad to say I was able to go about again as usual, and am now enjoying the best of health and plenty of good, rich blood which makes me feel like an altogether different person. I earnestly advise those suffering from rheumatism nervousness and kindred troubles not to delay using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as, like myself, I am sure they will find a cure through their case."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CIVIC STRIKE IN BRANDON

Police and Firemen Out and More Trouble Likely

Brandon, Man., April 26.—A complete deadlock still exists between the City Council here and the civic unions the members of which body, approximately 100 strong walked out on strike.

All street cars are in the barns. There is only the chief left on the police force and three men on the fire brigade who have been left there by the union to look after emergency calls. The men in the pumping station are expected to come out. At a meeting of the Teamsters' Union a sympathetic strike vote was taken, and it was unanimously decided to go out on strike. This will affect between 90 and 100 men.

STREETS OPEN TO RAILWAY?

Toronto Asked by Hamilton to Protest Against Bill

Toronto, April 26.—Toronto may join in the protest to the Dominion Government against the bill incorporating the Canadian National Railways.

Hamilton asks Toronto's aid in fighting the bill, alleging that the provisions of the bill as framed leave the streets of every municipality at the mercy of the Canadian National Railways.

The Board of Control passed the matter over to the City Solicitor for a legal opinion on the bill.

"NOTIONS" IS LIQUOR

Big Seizure is Made at Fort William

Fort William, April 26.—License Inspector A. R. Elliott seized, in the Port Arthur freight sheds, thirty-six gallons of liquor shipped to H. B. Wilkins, of Port Arthur, each of the four cases being marked "notions." The shipment came by freight from Montreal. Last week Wilkins was up in court for having received by express twenty-four gallons of liquor and was fined $300 and costs. Wilkins denies having ordered this freight shipment. The case is pending until word is received from Montreal that the goods were shipped to Wilkins order.

AUTO-INTOXICATION OR SELF-POISONING

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Absolutely Prevents This Dangerous Condition.

The chief cause of poor health is our neglect of the bowels. Waste matter, instead of passing from the lower intestine regularly every day, is allowed to remain there, generating poisons which are absorbed by the blood.

"In other words, a person who is habitually constipated, is poisoning himself. We know now that Auto-intoxication, due to non-action of the bowels, is directly responsible for serious Kidney and Bladder Troubles; that it upsets the Stomach, causes Indigestion, Loss of Appetite and Sleeplessness; that chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Pain In The Back, are relieved as soon as the bowels become regular; and that Pimples, Rashes, Eczema and other Skin Affections disappear when "Fruit-a-tives" are taken to correct Constipation.

"Fruit-a-tives" will protect you against Auto-intoxication because this wonderful fruit medicine acts directly on all the eliminating organs.

BROUGHT HOME A BELGIAN GIRL

BUT THIS CANADIAN SOLDIER ADOPTED AN OPTION OF FOUR YEARS.

A month ago a Canadian soldier in France cabled his father and mother in Toronto that he was returning home immediately with a Belgian girl. His father and mother, very prominent in the social life of Toronto, were somewhat embarrassed by the telegram, for they thought their son of twenty-three, who had been three years at the front, had without notifying them maried outside their social circle.

This particular Canadian soldier arrived home the other day and with him was a Belgian girl four years old. His father and mother were much relieved when he told them how he was walking through the streets of Brussels one day and the little girl ran and caught hold of his hand and said to him, 'I want you to take me home." He could not resist the child's request, and Canada is the richer by one little Belgian girl four years old, and she is richer by a foster father and mother to take the place of those she lost during the war.

A returned member of the Canadian Aviation Corps has a little French boy, whom he adopted under the laws of France, because the little chap was an orphan and had only his grandmother, dying of an incurable disease, to take care of him. The little nine-year-old French boy will grow up to be a worthy citizen of Canada.

Many returned Canadian soldiers are bringing with them wives they married across the sea, who will aid their husbands in establishing homes and create additional foundations to progressive Canadian citizenship. They are coming to Canada with every ship, and Canadian life should be the richer for their arrival.

These new citizens of Canada, be they children or women, should receive a cordial welcome from all those with whom they come in contact. It may be natural for the Canadian mother or sister to assume an attitude of aloofness to the wife of the Canadian soldier whom he found across the sea, but if the war has taught us anything it has taught us that charity—meaning loving kindness—is the greatest possible virtue.

By patience and loving kindness and warm-hearted generosity the newcomers to Canada will be assimilated into the community life and become important factors in advancing Canadian ideals.

HOW FESTIVE BURGLARS ROB BANKS IN CHICAGO

Operate in Broad Daylight and Citizens Who Witness Their Operations Make no Effort to Interfere.

Chicago, April 26.—A man dropped into a drug store at Ogden avenue and West 12th street for a glass of soda water.

"Oh say!" exclaimed the druggist. "What do you think. They're robbing the bank in there."

He turned his thumb toward the Dressel Commercial Savings bank at 2322 West 12th street. He seemed vastly interested in the affair.

His customer looked at him skeptically, then decided to go out and take a look. Sure enough! All along the sidewalk pedestrians had stopped to fasten their gaze on the bank. Their eyes wandered from the bank door to the young man who sat nonchalantly in the automobile in front of the building.

Crowd Watches Bandits Depart.

In a minute four men came out of the bank. They walked deliberately to the car, pulling off the handkerchiefs tied about the lower part of their faces and stuffing revolvers in their pockets. They got into the automobile and drove away, turning north in Campbell avenue.

The man who wanted soda water was the first to resolve his uncertainty into action. He rushed into the bank. Mrs. Blanche Dressel, wife of the head of the institution, sat in one of the cages.

"Shall I call the police?" he inquired excitously.

"I don't know," gasped Mrs. Dressel. "I haven't got my breath yet."

The man went outside again to see if any one else had turned in an alarm. Knots of citizens were gathered in the street talking of the robbery. It had not occurred to any of them to summon the police. A few minutes later Dressel walked into the bank. He immediately called up the Warren avenue station and in another five minutes eight policemen rushed up in the patrol wagon to catch the robbers.

Take $2,000 from Woman.

The robbers' loot was estmated at nearly $2,000, consisting of currency which lay out on the counter and liberty bonds.

Only Mrs. Dressel and the bookkeeper were in the bank when the robbers entered. They had drawn revolvers before they came in the door, so that passers-by were informed of their purpose. Two of the robbers went to Mrs. Dressel's cage and the other two remained on guard at the door. They brushed up the money and bonds that were in sight and called on the woman for the keys to the cash drawer. She was on the point of surrendering them when a customer came up to the door. The two guards shouted to their companions. The latter turned from the cage, sized the situation and all four took their departure.

The bank was held up several months ago and lost more than $5,000.

"I've taken out insurance since that time," said Dressel.

Girl Foils $30,000 Theft.

Safeblowers in the 4th ward headquarters of the liberty loan organization, where was held $10,000 collected from victory bond purchasers and $20,000 in other funds, were driven away by the police.

The robbers escaped so hastily they were forced to leave behind all their materials, including several sticks of dynamite, a brace and drills, a heavy jimmy and fuses. One of the men left his overcoat, but it contained no marks of identification.

Headquarters of the loan organization is in the private bank of Frank Palt, 3205 South Morgan street. Palt is ward chairman. He lives above the bank. At his home resides his sister-in-law, Miss May Rogek.

Miss Rogek came in from a party shortly after midnight with her escort Vincent Witkowski. As they stood in upper hall they were startled by sounds coming up through the speaking tube, the lower end of which opened into the banking room. Convinced burglars were at work, they awakened Palt. Palt dashed to the telephone to call the Deering police.

Police Frighten Bandits.

Lack of caution by the police is believed to have warned the robbers that they were near capture. The patrol wagon sped up the street to a point near the bank and its glaring headlights shone full in the window.

The police leaped from the wagon and surrounded the building and then rushed it. They burst into the banking room to uncover evidence of the operations that had been in progress there, but to find none of the safeblowers.

The combination had been knocked from the door of the safe and the drills had been set out ready for use. It was the pounding due to attempts to break the combination that alarmed those in the upper halls.

THE BEST MEDICINE FOR LITTLE ONES

There is no medicine for little ones to equal Baby's Own Tablets. The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative; pleasant to take; do not gripe and never fail to relieve the little one of constipation, indigestion, colic or any of the other minor ailments. Concerning them Mrs. Jos. Monzerolle Eel River Ridge, N. B., writes:—"I believe Baby's Own Tablets are the finest medicine for little ones I have ever used. From my own experience I would recommend every mother to keep a box on hand." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

For the Liver and Bowels

Tell your druggist you want genuine "California Syrup of Figs." Full directions and dose for babies and children of all ages who are constipated, bilious, feverish, tongue-coated, or full of cold, are plainly printed on the bottle. Look for the name "California" and accept no other "Fig Syrup."

TWO CHOIRS TO CHANGE PLACES

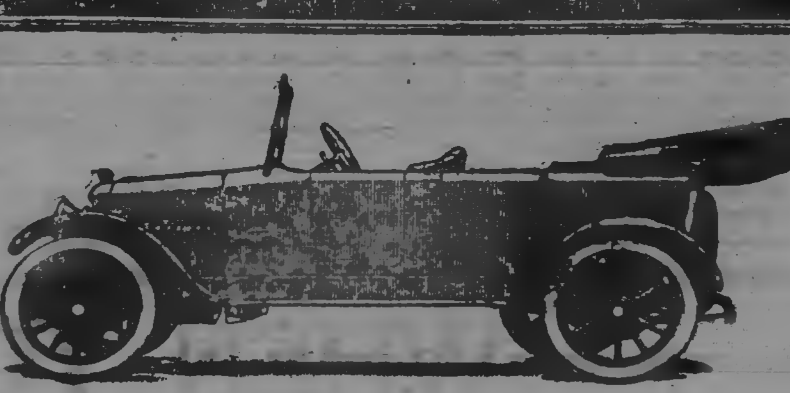
MURRAY STREET AND ST. ANDREW'S SINGERS NEXT SUNDAY EVENING.

At Murray Street Baptist Church tomorrow morning another baptismal service will be held when a number will be received into membership by that ordnance.

In the evening the choir of St. Andrews church with Miss Helen McLaren as soloist will be in charge of the music while the Murray Street Choir will occupy a similar place in St. Andrews Church. Each church should profit by this exchange which is unique in Peterborough, and will doubtless be a helpful arrangement. Of course each organist will go with his choir and every member will take his or her own gown to the other church.

Orillia Pastor At Trinity Church

Most interesting services will be held in Trinity church tomorrow. The Rev. W. B. Smith B.A., of Orillia, will address the Brotherhood at 3 p.m. Mr. Smith is an able preacher, and a treat is in store for those who hear him. All are welcome at these services.



A Maxwell Grows Better the More You Drive It

THAT is the test of anything good. The more you use a good watch the better it runs. The older your friends grow the better you like them.

Hardly a day goes by that some Maxwell owner doesn't take his pen in hand and write that he is now passing a mark of 30,000 miles or 20,000, or 50,000.

But these Maxwells of today are far better cars than those of yesterday.

For it is the policy of the Maxwell Motor Company to keep on building and building on the original chassis plan set down 5 years ago.

300,000 Maxwells have been built on this program.

1000 refinements have been made since the first car was built.

Each new Maxwell is better than yesterday's.

For doing one thing always results in doing it well.

This Maxwell you see today is so vastly improved in appearance that you may think it a new model.

But it isn't. Just a better looking Maxwell. And a better car.

PATRIOTIC FUND REPORT

The local auditor for the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, Mr W. R. Morris, has submitted to the committee his audit for the last nine months, in carrying on the operations of the fund. Heretofore, that audit has been made half-yearly. But at the end of December last it was intimated from the head office that the audit should be made so as to bring up the accounts locally, to agree with the general audit term or fiscal year, which ended on March 31, last. This has been done and the results submitted.

It may be of interest to state that from the 1st of January, forward the only revenue coming in to the fund all over the Dominion has been any arrears of subscriptions made previously and remaining unpaid. No appeals were made to the people and none will be made. In the last four years, the executive of the fund, anticipating the period of demobilization when it would come set aside a rest or surplus account, and this sum is now available to carry on the work until the function of the fund expires. And to do so without asking financial aid from the Government as was at one time anticipated would be the case. No are municipalities being asked for further grants, leaving the contributing field open for appeals for other patriotic objects.

The accretion of funds in the hands of the executive committee has resulted from two sources. As dependents who were on the fund lists and whose husbands (or sons) fell in battle, the pension took place of allowances. The home coming of many automatically resulted in removel, after an interval, from the fund lists, thus decreasing the amount required from month to month. In the course of events and with the fairly rapid demobilization it is anticipated that by the end of August next the fund will have finished its work and cease to distribute.

Despite the withdrawal on the part of the County Council of the instalments for November and December, ($8,000.00), the local branch has been enabled to finance the allowance lists thus far in the year, and will possibly continue so to do for another month. Afterwards the head office will provide what will be needed. So that citizens are relieved for the future from any appeal or from civic contribution to the objects of the fund. Some time a general review of the work may be given, that it may be made a matter of municipal record and handed on as one of the city war achievements of the last five years. Following are the statements made by the auditor, the figures being condensed from the general report for purposes of publication:

eterborough Relief Association. 1919.

To some extent allied and working with the Patriotic Fund is the Peterborough Relief Association. This was formed at the coming in of 1915 a part of the moneys accruing from the first Patriotic Fund canvas, that of December, 1914, being set aside as a fund, in anticipation of being required for "assistance to those in adverse circumstances on account of the war," and to afford relief during the severe unemployment season of the first four months of 1915. In that time nearly $8,000.00 was expended under supervision of the committee and the money was of the greatest possible assistance to those in straightened circumstances. In addition to weekly and monthly gifts, sums were advanced and loaned to people out of work and hard-up, and in such way opened the door for assistance without the anxiety of negotiating loans from banks, money-lenders or others. Repayments have been made of such sums as advanced, so soon as those benefitting found work.

By the middle of 1916 it was apparent that the funds need not be further drawn on except in exceptional circumstances, and the balance was placed in bank and further on invested and there now remains to the credit of the association nearly $9,000.00. In general the principle sum has remained intact, the interest from the investments and bank balances being enough to cover allowances and grants made from time to time. As a result it is gratifying to know that there is in sight a fund sufficient to meet any even extreme emergency of the future should such come up, and to do so without appealing to either private munificience or to municipal aid. Of necessity the expenditures and grants have to be carefully watched and investigated, lest moneys by disappeared on grounds not sufficiently apparent. The committee in undertaking this work have done a piece of public service that is most commendable, the bulk of the duty falling on the chairman, ex-Mayor William Buller, Walter Stocker, Henry Rush, Henry Stabler, James Lynch and from time to time two members from the G.W.V.A., those in office just now being Comrades S. Whatley and Thomas Williams. Adjt. McElhenney was for a long time and until his withdrawal from the city, a member, and his place on the committee has been taken and ably filled by Adjt. Wallace Bunton, the local charge-de-affairs for the Salvation Army. The only recognition these gentlemen receive in return for their five year service is a sense of having done a public service that has been onerous often vexations and at times bothersome, in the sense, that fault is found where no fault has existed. No doubt they will remain in office for some time as yet.

The above explanation is made as there are now in the city very many people who have come in during the last four years and who do not know of the Relief Association and its local work. Following is the auditor's statement:

Statement of Receipts and Disbursements.
January 1st 1918, to March 31st, 1919.

Balance in Dominion Bank, Jan. 1, 1918		$ 8400 20

Interest on Victory Loan at 5½ per cent	330 00

NORTH MONAGHAN COUNCIL REFUSES DAMAGE FOR INJURY TO HORSE

The North Monaghan Council met at the Court House, Peterboro, Saturday, April the 19th. All the members being present. The reading of the minutes of the last meeting were dispensed with.

Moved by Mr Forster and seconded by Mr. Henry that the reeve be authorized to pay for and to demand the plan of the Brinton Carpet Co.'s property from Mr. F. W. Wilkins. Carried.

Mr. J. G. Guise-Bagley wrote the Council and claims unstated damages for a horse driven by Dr. D. C. King near the corner of High and Brown streets, by the faulty condition of a culvert. The Council viewed the place on the road where the accident is said to have taken place and they say there is no culvert on this section of the road, therefore, there was no action taken in the matter.

Archie Patterson wrote asking for fifty dollars damages for a heifer killed by a C.P.R. train. Said heifer together with other cattle got out of the field through the gravel pit fence then out through the gravel pit gate which was open and onto the railway track. The accident happened on December 22nd and the cattle guards were lifted at that time. Moved by Mr. Forster and seconded by Mr. Henry that the whole Council be a committee to investigate the gravel pit fences and any other points connected with Mr. Patterson's claim. Carried.

Wm. T. Henry wrote making application for the position of sanitary inspector. Moved by Mr. Bell and seconded by Mr. Wilson that Wm. T. Henry be appointed sanitary inspector for the township at the usual salary.

The following bills were passed and ordered to be paid:

B. Morrow	$ 2 25
Sawyer-Massey Co., bits and bolts	11 00
Peterborough Examiner, printing and supplies	154 25
J. B. McIntosh express on grader blade	75
H. B. Taylor & Son coal for charity	12 00
Total	$180 25

Moved by Mr. Forster and seconded by Mr. Bell that notices be placed at Carver's bridge warning the public to go slow over the same.

Moved by Mr. Henry and seconded by Mr Forster that the meeting adjourn and that the next meeting be held at the Court House, Peterborough, Saturday, 10th May, at 2 p.m. (standard time).

WHEN YOU SEE A TESTIMONIAL

From a person you do not know, PAY NO ATTENTION TO IT. When you see a testimonial FROM PEOPLE IN YOUR OWN LOCALITY and whom you DO know, if you have any doubt, GO AND ASK THEM. THIS SHOULD CONVINCE YOU.

We cannot impress too strongly upon the people of Canada that there are no Stomach and Tonic Tablets just like Dr. Norvall's. There are no tablets just as good as Dr. Norvall's. Dr. Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets are in a class by themselves.

In order to convince you of this we have interviewed the druggists of the City of Peterborough, and as they are all selling patent medicines and preparations of known value, they are in a position to judge the merits of Dr. Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets.

READ WHAT THE DRUGGISTS OF PETERBOROUGH SAY ABOUT THEM

The Nugent Drug Co. states: "We recommend Dr. Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets because we are firmly convinced they are the best on the Canadian market."

Mr. Wm. Madill, Druggist, says: "We have a steady and increasing sale for Dr. Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets, and we are pleased to state that our customers are satisfied with the results."

Mr. C. M. Moncur, Druggist, says: "For constipation, indigestion and sick headache, Dr. Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets have no equal."

The Warne Drug Co. says: "If you are suffering from constipation, biliousness or sick headache, we know of no better remedy than Dr. Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets. Try them and you will agree with what we say."

Mr. E. L. Payne, Druggist, says: "Dr. Norvalls Stomach and Tonic Tablets are one of the best preparations we keep in stock, and our customers speak highly of them."

Mr. Weber, Druggist, says: "That dull, dreary headache and tired feeling will disappear if you take one or two of Dr. Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets at bed-time. Try them and be convinced."

Mr. W. J. Kent, Druggist, says: "We recommend Dr. Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets because we consider it our duty to recommend what will give the best results."

James Lynch, Druggist, says: "We recommend Dr. Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets because we get better results from them than from any other similar preparation we keep in stock."

McDermid & Jury say: "Our customers state that Dr. Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets give perfect satisfaction."

Mr. J. A. Burgess, Lakefield, states: "It is always a pleasure to recommend Dr. Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets because my customers are well pleased with the results."

The Tanner Drug Company of Lakefield say: "We have sold Dr. Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets for some time, and customers who have once used them will have none other in their place."

Mr. Vincent Sullivan, Druggist, says that he was surprised the number of people that insist upon having Dr. Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets, and none other can take their place as a gentle laxative and building-up tonic."

We could fill a page with testimonials from individuals in this city but we consider the druggists are in a position to advise the public

SAYS SHE FEELS DIFFERENT NOW

MRS. DEAN DECLARES SHE WILL NEVER CEASE PRAISING TANLAC

"I'll never stop praising Tanlac, for it has built me up till I feel better than I have in a good many years," said Mrs. Jean Dean, o 193 Fuller avenue, Parkdale, Toronto, Ontario.

"I was in a dreadfully rundown condition for several years," she continued, "and was getting worse all the time. My nerves were in a wretched state and was so restless I could hardly sleep and would get up in the mornings with a raging headache that worried me all day. The least little thing would upset me and any exertion at all would exhaust my strength so I would be unable to do my housework.)

"My first few doses of Tanlac proved it to be just what I needed. My nervousness is entirely gone, I never have a headache now, I sleep like a baby and get up in the morning feeling fine. I have gotten rid of that old tired wornout feeling and have improved so wonderfully that I feel like a different person."

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by C Pringle & Son.

PLAN TO DISTRIBUTE FOOD

Peace Conference Takes Steps for Feeding World

Paris, April 26.—At the plenary session of the Peace Conference Monday the program includes a complete plan for securing and distributing food to allied, liberated, neutral and enemy countries until the next harvest. One object of the program is to determine the available food supply and to so distribute shipping as not ot put undue pressure on any one market.

CELEBRATES 101st BIRTHDAY

Colin LaFortune, of Port Dover Was Born in 1818

Port Dover, April 26.—To but few who were born in the far-off year of 1818 has been accorded the privilege of attaining a birthday in 1919. Such has been, however, the happy lot of Colin LaFortune, who resides with his daughter, Mrs F. L. Nicholls, at the Dominion Hotel here, the auspicious event taking place last Wednesday.

Get the Habit of Drinking Hot Water Before Breakfast

Millions of folks bathe internally now instead of loading their system with drugs. "What's an inside bath?" you say. Well, it is guaranteed to perform miracles if you could believe these hot water enthusiasts.

There are vast numbers of men and women who, immediately upon arising in the morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is a very excellent health measure. It is intended to flush the stomach, liver, kidneys, and the thirty feet of intestines of the previous day's waste, sour bile, and indigestible material left over in the body which if not eliminated every day become food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels, the quick result is poisons and toxins, which are then absorbed into the blood, causing headache, bilious attacks, foul breath, bad taste, colds, stomach trouble, kidney misery, sleeplessness, impure blood and all sorts of ailments.

People who feel good one day and badly the next, but who simply can not get feeling right are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a real crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so limestone phosphate and hot water act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. It is vastly more important to bathe on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

PENSIONS FOR NURSES

Kingston, April 26.—Speaking about pensions for nurses, Colonel Biggar of the Pensions Board, Otawa said, "that if the nursing associations believed that the scale of pensions for nurses was not right, they could present a petition for adjustment." He said the case of nurses was different from the rest of the Canadian forces; as they were engaged by the Government in their profession capacity, there might be some ground for an adjustment of the mounts given.

WHERE DEMOCRACY

late Hon Richard Sedan, who was chiefly responsible for the shaping of the destinies of the Island Colony during the greater part of its occupation by the British.

Speaking of Queensland, Australia where the butcher shops, woollen mills and other industries are Government controlled. Mr. Simpson stated that during the war the prices of foodstuffs and wearing apparel were surprisingly low. He backed up his statement by reading a list of prices there and comparing it with a list of the prices prevailing in Canada at the same time. The most remarkable thing about this comparison was that, according to Mr. Simpson, British Columbia salmon, caught in our Canadian streams, canned in our Canadian canneries and shipped on the long voyage to New Zealand and Australia upon Canadian vessels, sold in these far-off countries at 6 cents a pound and sold right in Canada for 26 cents a pound. He stated that Massey Harris machinery made in Canada had always sold cheaper in Australia and in New Zealand than in Canada where it was made after the freight had been paid upon it.

In concluding, Mr Simpson stated that in going through the woods of New Zealand and getting closer to nature, he had learned many lessons which could be applied with remarkable aptitude to everyday life in Canada.

The Parasite Tree.

For instance there was that remarkable tree which flourishes in New Zealand at the expense of its brethren of the forest. Sown in the roots of another tree from the tail of an insect it springs up and like a gigantic snake, encircles the trunk of its victim, getting larger and larger, squeezing tighter and tighter, and all the while drawing its sustenance from the other tree until, like the parasite, it crushes the life from the victim and then bursts into beautiful flower. Just in the same manner, continued the speaker, certain individuals in this country encircle the working class, and after going through practically the same process and squeezing the life out of the masses, burst into beautiful flower in the form of limousines and steam yachts.

Sir Henry's Castle

He referred to Sir Henry Pellat's palace in Toronto, which he characterized as Pellat's folly, and stated that in connection with that mansion was a stable which surpassed in grandeur the most beautiful residence in the city of Peterborough. There the horses walked upon an especially prepared carpet and the sides of the stalls were cushioned so that the dear things would not hurt themselves if they fell against them.

Mr. Simpson also touched upon the value of organization as the most effective means of protection against men who like the parasite tree of New Zealand sought to squeeze the life from the working classes. He reminded them that that there was one tree upon the Pacific Island which was invulnerable to the attacks of the snake life enemy and that was the Mowry. It shed its bark every year and three of the clutches of its assailant. This was an obvious hint to organized labor.

TOMORROW AT ST. ANDREW'S.

Story of the English Bible the Pastor's Morning Theme.

In St. Andrew's Church tomorrow Rev. Mr. Rowand will speak on "The Story of the English Bible" and the secret of its influence. In the evening he will speak on "Sin in the Light of Modern Science" showing that science emphasizes the awful tragedy of sin, but that Christ opens up a way of redemption.

At the evening service there will be a friendly exchange of choirs between St. Andrew's and Murray Street Churches. The service of praise in our churches is of the highest value and appeals to the imagination and emotions of our people in a way that preaching cannot do. The exchange will doubtless prove very helpful and inspiring to the membership of both churches.

THE GODS OF MARS

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

But always [illegible], were the Black Pirates [illegible] victorious and the girl, [illegible] unharmed through the conflict, borne away into the outer darkness upon the deck of a swift flier.

Fighting like that near us could be heard in all directions as far as sound carried, and Thuvia told me that the attacks of the Black Pirates were usually made simultaneously along the entire ribbon-like domain of the therns which circles the valley Dor on the outer slopes of the mountains of Otz.

As the fighting receded from our position for a moment Thuvia turned toward me with a question.

"Do you understand now, O prince," she said, "why a million warriors guard the domains of the holy therns by day and by night?

"The scene you are witnessing now is but a repetition of what I have seen enacted a score of times during the fifteen years I have been a prisoner here. From time immemorial the Black Pirates of Barsoom have preyed upon the holy therns.

"Yet they never carry their expeditions to a point, as one might readily believe it was in their power to do, where the extermination of the race of therns is threatened. It is as though they but utilized the race as playthings, with which they satisfy their ferocious lust for fighting, and from whom they collect toll in arms and ammunition and in prisoners."

"Why don't they jump in and destroy these fliers?" I asked. "That would soon put a stop to the attacks, or at least the blacks would scarce be so bold. Why, see how perfectly unguarded they leave their craft, as though they were lying safe in their own hangars at home!"

"The therns do not dare. They tried it once, ages ago, but the next night and for a whole moon thereafter a thousand great black battleships circled the mountains of Otz pouring tons of projectiles upon the temples, gardens and courts until every thern who was not killed was driven for safety into the subterranean galleries.

"The therns know that they live at all only by the sufferance of the black men. They were near to extermination that once, and they will not venture risking it again."

As she ceased talking a new element was instilled into the conflict. It came from a source equally unlooked for by either thern or pirate. The great banths which we had liberated in the garden had evidently been awed at first by the sound of the battle, the yelling of the warriors and the loud report of rifle and bomb.

But now they must have become angered by the continuous noise and excited by the smell of new blood, for all of a sudden a great form shot from a clump of low shrubbery into the midst of a struggling mass of humanity. A scream of bestial rage broke from the banth as he felt warm flesh beneath his powerful talons.

As though his cry was but a signal to the others, the entire great pack hurled themselves among the fighters.

Panic reigned in an instant. Thern and black man turned alike against the common enemy, for the banths showed no partiality toward either.

The awful beasts bore down a hundred men by the mere weight of their great bodies as they hurled themselves into the thick of the fight. Leaping and clawing, they mowed down the warriors with their powerful paws, turning for an instant to rend their victims with frightful fangs.

The scene was fascinating in its terribleness, but suddenly it came to me that we were wasting valuable time watching this conflict which in itself might prove a means to our escape.

The therns were so engaged with their terrible assailants that now, if ever, escape should be comparatively easy.

I turned to search for an opening through the contending hordes. If we could but reach the ramparts we might find that the pirates somewhere had thinned the guarding forces and left a way open to us to the world without.

As my eyes wandered about the garden the sight of the hundreds of air craft lying unguarded round us suggested the simplest avenue to freedom. Why had it not occurred to me before? I was thoroughly familiar with the mechanism of every known make of flier on Barsoom. For nine years I had sailed and fought with the navy of Helium. I had raced through space on the tiny one man air scout, and I had commanded the greatest battleship that ever had floated the thin air of dying Mars.

To think with me is to act. Grasping Thuvia by the arm, I whispered to Tars Tarkas and Carthoris to follow. Quickly we glided toward a small flier which lay farthest from the battling warriors.

Another instant found us huddled on the deck. My hand was on the starting lever. I pressed my thumb upon the button which controls the ray of repulsion, that splendid discovery of the Martians which permits them to navigate the thin atmosphere of the planet in huge ships that dwarf the dreadnaughts of our earthly navies into pitiful insignificance.

Soon we rose high in the air and with headlong speed rushed away from the terrible scenes that were being enacted below us. Our speed must have approximated 200 miles an hour, for Martian fliers are swifter than those of earth.

I dropped into a horizontal course and headed due north.

We had performed the miraculous and come through a thousand dangers unscathed. We had escaped from the valley Dor.

No other prisoners in all the ages of Barsoom had done this thing, and now as I looked back upon it it did not seem to have been so difficult after all.

I said as much to Tars Tarkas over my shoulder.

"It is very wonderful, nevertheless," he replied. "No one else could have accomplished it but John Carter," he added with emphasis.

At the sound of that name the boy, Carthoris, jumped to his feet.

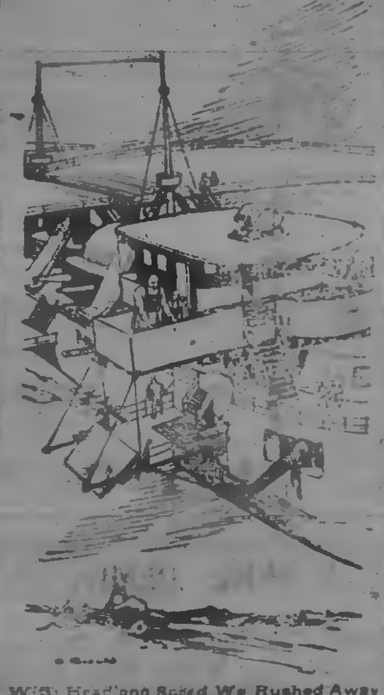
"John Carter!" he cried in amazement. "John Carter? Why, man, John Carter, prince of Helium, has been dead for many years. I am his son."

CHAPTER IX.

The Eyes in the Dark.

MY son! I could not believe my ears.

Slowly I rose and faced the handsome youth. Now that I looked at him closely I commenced to see why his face and personality had attracted me so strongly.



With Headlong Speed We Rushed Away From the Terrible Scenes.

There was much of his mother's incomparable beauty in his clear cut features, but it was strongly masculine beauty. His gray eyes and the expression of them were mine.

The boy stood facing me, half hope and half uncertainty in his look.

"Tell me of your mother," I said. "Tell me all you can of the years that I have been robbed of her dear companionship."

With a cry of pleasure he sprang toward me and threw his arms about my neck, and for a brief moment, as I held my boy close to me, the tears welled to my eyes.

"Your stature, your manner, the ferocity of your swordsmanship," said the boy, "are as my mother has described them to me a thousand times, but even with such evidence I could scarce credit the truth of what seemed so improbable to me, however much I desired it to be true."

"For long years, my son, I can scarce recall a moment that the radiant vision of your mother's face has not been before me. Tell me of her."

"Those who have known her longest say that she has not changed, unless it be to grow more beautiful—were that possible. Only, when she thinks I am not about to see her, her face grows very sad and wistful.

"She thinks ever of you, my father, and all Helium mourns with her and for her. Her grandfather's people love her. They love you also, and fairly worship your memory as the savior of Barsoom.

"Each year that brings its anniversary of the day that saw you racing across a nearly dead world to unlock the secret of that awful portal behind which lay the mighty power of life for countless millions, a great festival is held in your honor. But there are tears mingled with the thanksgiving—tears of real regret that the author of the happiness is not with them to share the joy of living he died to give them. Upon all Barsoom there is no greater name than John Carter."

"And by what name has your mother called you, my boy?" I asked.

"The people of Helium asked that I be named with my father's name, but my mother said no, that you and she had chosen a name for me together, and that your wish must be honored before all others, so the name that she called me is the one that you desired, a combination of hers and yours—Carthoris."

"How came you into the valley Dor?" I asked.

"It is very simple. I was flying a one man air scout far to the south when the brilliant idea occurred to me that I should like to search for the lost sea of Korus, which tradition places near to the south pole. I must have inherited from you a wild lust for adventure as

WEEK OF MUSIC AT THE SHELTER

MISSES ELCOME AND WHITE OF THE CONSERVATORY, THE DIRECTORS.

The 5th of the series of "Canada's Week of Music," was given at the Children's Shelter yesterday afternoon when about 25 boys and girls from the Conservatory of Music gave the program. It was decided that each should take enough refreshment for themselves and one other, but upon arrival it was discovered that the good mothers had provided lovely cakes with thick icing, and boxes full of sandwiches, so the afternoon ended in a real party. The program was as follows:

Children's Orchestra—God Save the King. (Under the direction of Miss Logan.

Duet—Country Dance—Mercedles Rae and Agnes Snowdon.

Violin solo—Majurka—Donald Morrison.

Duet—Valse—Marion and Jean McCannon.

Piano solo—Valse Arabesque—Helen Morphet.

Duet—Durand Valse—Alice Cox and Helen Lamb.

Piano solo—San Rameo Valse—Jean Kidd.

At the close Mrs. Read thanked the young performers on behalf of her little charges and together they gave them a hearty round of applause. Jean Eastwood, Baden Greene and Paul Gliddon acted as chauffeurs for this happy gathering.

Sample Box Brings Great Results

Chronic Sufferers Find Relief

Chronic sufferers from Backache, Gravel, Stone in the Bladder or any other form of Kidney trouble are generally willing to try any remedy once. The excruciating pain caused by Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Inflammation of the Bladder or some other form of Kidney trouble, is so great, that persons afflicted are often driven to spending large sums of money in an endeavor to find relief at any cost.

This is proven by the testimony of hundreds of people who have written us letters stating "that having failed to find relief after years of trying, they turned to Gin Pills as a last resort—and a sample box of these pills soon convinced them that Gin Pills was the remedy they needed."

That is all we ask you to do. Try a box of Gin Pills at our expense, and if they fail to bring you the relief they have brought to hundreds of others with similar Kidney derangements, it costs you nothing.

Mrs. Dechene writes:

"I received your sample box of Gin Pills, and they have done me a lot of good. I can congratulate myself on having them, and I will never be without them in my home."

This testimony from a woman who was skeptical about buying Gin Pills should convince you that a sample box is well worth writing for. Do it today. Address:

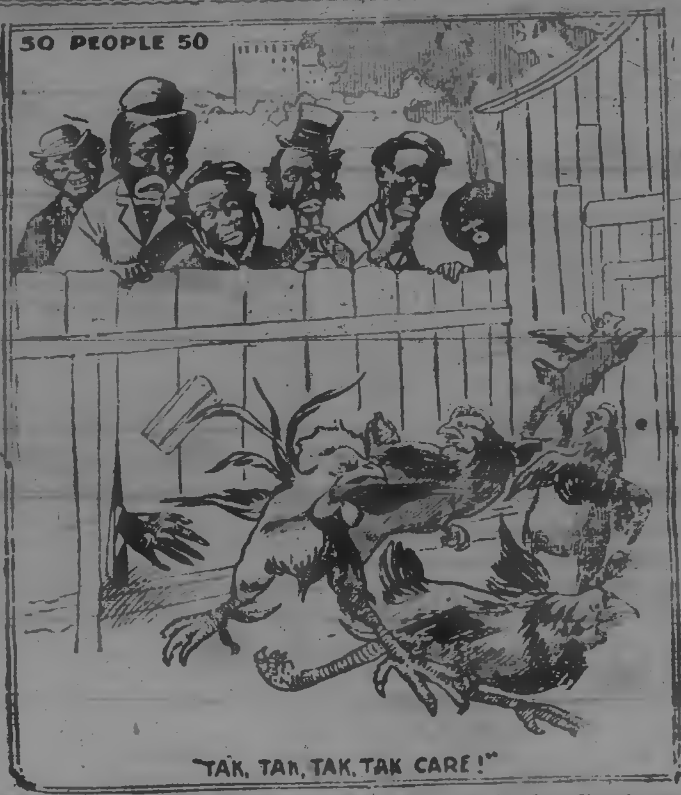
THEATRICAL



50 PEOPLE 50
"TAK, TAK, TAK, TAK CARE!"

Scene from Gus Hill Big Minstrels at the Grand Monday Evening only

AT THE GRAND

Old Bill, Alf and Bert — Bairnsfather's famous characters—made their debut among Peterborough theatregoers at the Grand last night when they presented "The Better Ole," by Capt. Bruce Bairnsfather and Capt. Arthur Eliot.

The piece opens at a place near the base in France, and one sees the British soldier at play. The scene is laid in an estaminet and the soldiers with several French girls (prettier, by the way, than the genuine article) are having an evening of song.

The next scene is a little nearer the front, and here the worthy Bert again falls in love with a French girl. The song entitled "Tommy," by Suzette and the Tommies in this scene was well rendered.

The battalion is in billets in the next scene, and some good singing is done by the lady war workers and soldiers.

The first scene in the second act is of an overland route to the front line, and is quite realistic. Shell-shattered trees and houses and the inevitable "duck-boards" are seen. Parties of soldiers going into the line with rations and bombs, and Old Bill with his sheet of corrugated iron, certainly appear true to life. "Carrying On" and "We Wish We Was in Blighty" are two worth-while songs sung by Bill, Bert and Alf.

The trench scene opens with the singing "When You Look in the Heart of a Rose," by Mr. Vernon Kelso. This is a particularly good scene and shows the parapet of the front line trench, the barbed wire and a dugout. "Venus de Milo," as sung by Old Bill, pleased the audience, but disgusted his comrades in the trench. Bill is arrested for leaving the trench on a mission of his own, and the scene closes by the sergeant-major marching him off under escort.

We next see Bill being tried by his commanding officer for some most terrible crime, but the charge falls through when a French officer arrives and after explaining to the British colonel that owing to Old Bill's individual bravery the lives of many French soldiers had been saved: The French officer invests the Walrus with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, and much to his horror salutes him on either cheek.

The three muskrats finally get leave together, and after an amusing scene at a railway siding near Boulogne, arrive in England. Here Bill's wife surprises him by informing him that he is the proprietor of the village public house, which is just what he had been wishing he could have on his return from France.

One noticeable fact about the company presenting this play is that the majority of the male members are discharged soldiers and some of them display several service decorations.

"The Better 'Ole" will be presented again this afternoon and this evening and is well worth seeing.

MINSTRELS' ART NOT DEAD ISSUE

GUS HILL'S ARTISTS ARE LIVING EVIDENCE OF THE FACT.

Marking time by progress is such a difficult task that often it has been the cause of much miscalculation and argument. For instance not so long ago a successful showman remarked that minstrelsy was such a dead letter issue that even the sternest efforts to revive it on a profitable basis would be crowned with a reward of such disastrous proportions as to cause it to probably sink into obscurity for all time. Evidently this wise purveyor of modern theatricals did not bargain on the change of conditions brought about through the greatest of conflicts the world has seen or will ever see again. He no doubt overlooked the fact that what the universe wants just now is to smile and laugh rather than grope through the most of tragedy which seems to have enveloped all humanity. And unquestionably he forgot that no entertainment indigenous to this great country, the home of Democracy, the leader of all that is superlative, incomparable and inimitable has such endless possibilities than that provided by men who have made the scope of Ethiopean comedy a lifelong study.

Mr. George Wilson, the dean of Burnt Cork artists, we are assured, have no better exponent of negro comics now before the public, and in popularity and resourcefulness and ability, he easily ranks on a par with such jolly gloom annihilators as Al Jolson, Lew Dockstader, Bert Williams and others enjoying distinction and fame in that particular calling. This was indisputably attested by his long reign at the Hippodrome in New York where he held merry sway for over a year. Now he visits us to continue in the same role which endeared him to thousands daily at the greatest play house in this or any other country, and strange enough in the most successful production of the Twentieth Century, Gus Hill's Big Minstrels. This attraction will be presented at the Grand, Monday evening, only. Besides Mr. Wilson there are fifty other revellers, all engaged for their particular skill to amuse an exacting public. There will be innings of travesty, ragtime, syncopated melodies' music, sweet ballads, songs of yesterday, today and tomorrow, an enviable and unparalelled scenic adornment, exceptional features, surprises and novelties, original diversions and things not to be found in other stage contributions. A show of quality as well as quantity with always an aim to please those who appreciate being pleased, and in a manner that leaves no doubt of the purpose of those who have sponsored this unusual and exalted triumph of managerial acumen. Lest we forget there is to be a street parade—and such a parade. A treat in itself, and free to all anxious ears and eyes

German delegates will have power to sign treaty when presented.

Demonstrations regarding Fiume continue throughout Italy.

Credits of $75,000,000 have been established in Europe by Canada and $25,000,000, more is likely; but according to the C.T.C. this only touches the fringe of the world-wide trade openings.

PETERBORO TO TAKE PART IN MEETING OF LEAGUE

Amateur Baseball Association Plans to Change Many of the Rules.

When the Ontario Baseball Amateur Association holds its first annual meeting today in Toronto new amendments for the furtherance of the summer pastime will be introduced, which will, no doubt, provide lots of discussion. Delegates are expected from Hamilton, Kitchener, Brantford Oshawa. Galt, Peterboro, Guelph Lindsay, Central Ontario League and Inter-County League. Frank Robinson, Hamilton, will be the probable choice for president. The winner of the Ontario Amateur Baseball championship finals will be the holders of the handsome Times trophy, which last year won by the Hillcrests.

The following are some of the amendments:

(1) Each league shall be entitled to two votes, and each association four votes at the annual and all general meetings of the O. B. A. A. Each delegate shall cast his own vote, and no delegate shall cast more than one ballot.

(2) The annual membership fees of the O.B.A.A. shall be ten dollars for associations and leagues whose membership is made up of clubs representing more than one town or city, and five dollars for leagues whose membership is made up of clubs in one city or town.

(3) No delegate shall be admitted to the annual meeting of the association unless he shall have filed with the secretary a certificate of his appointment signed by the secretary of the league or association that he represents.

(4) No player shall sign a certificate in any league after July 15, and must have taken part in at least three games for the champion club in order to be eligible to play in the Ontario championship games in competition for The Daily Times' Trophy. Players transferring from one club to another must be properly released before signing a second certificate.

(5) In all association championship games visiting clubs shall be allowed seven cents a mile one way, which amount the home club must guarantee.

(6) In all association championship games the net gate shall be divided equally between the competing clubs and this association.

(7) All protests arising out of semi-final or final games must be made in form of an affidavit, sworn to before a notary public or justice of peace, accompanied by the fee of $25, within 48 hours. Clubs protested must file a similar defence within 48 hours of being notified of the protest. Losing club shall forfeit expenses of the protest meeting of the executive.

(8) In semi-finals and final games clubs may agree on umpires and notify the secretary not later than Wednesday preceding the games. In failure to do so the president shall appoint the umpire.

(9) The association shall pay the legitimate expenses of all representatives to sub-committee and executive.

(10) No player shall compete in a semi-final or final game who has not been a bonafide and continuous resident of the city, town or village to which his club belongs since January 1 preceding the game. Players residing in a village or town where there is no organized amateur baseball may play in the nearest affiliated league to their home Returned or discharged soldiers may play in the town or city where they enlisted or in their home town.

Outlook in the National League

Now that the National League pennant season is under way baseball fans will be prepared to watch a spirited race by eight clubs, all of which will be stronger than a year ago. The opening dates are: New York in Philadelphia, Brooklyn at Boston, Pittsburgh at Chicago, and St. Louis at Cincinnati.

The Cubs while they have been slow rounding into shape this spring in California, are strongly figuring on again taking the flag while the Giants under McGraw have deep-laid designs on the bunting. Pittsburgh will bear watching this year and there are indications that the championship is not going to be a runaway for any team. Chicago's return of Alexander boosts Chicago's stock considerably.

Pitchers Must Improve

The chances of the Giants to wrest the National league pennant from the Chicago Cubs in the coming campaign rest in Manager McGraw's pitching staff. In all other department the New York club has known strength, but the ability of he pitching staff is somewhat uncertain. It has already shown itself to be a far better aggregation of twirlers than last year, but it must show improvement to measure up with the high-class pitching department of the Cubs.

If Ferdie Schupp should be able to return to anything like his great form of 1916, and if Pol Perritt and Fred Toney should change their minds and decide to play, McGraw's worries would be considerably lessened.

The pitching staff as it now stands is not by any means weak, but it ing the world's series last fall against McGraw's expectations. It is reasonable to suppose, however, that it will show improvement over the early season form, and when the club gets settled into the excitement of the championship season, the pitchers are very likely to surprise the pessimists. Rube Benton, Jess Barnes and Bill Causey are sure to produce the best results while Manager McGraw believes that George Smith, the former Columbia pitcher is ready to take his regular turn at major league work

The outfield of the Giants ranks with the best in the game. In George Burns in left, Benny Kauff in center and Ross Young in right McGraw has three fly-chasers who can field and hit and run bases. The infield is made up of veterans of known ability. The addition of Hal Chase at first greatly strengthens the inner defence. The other veteran infielders—Doyle at second, Fletcher at short, and Zimmerman at third—have been slow in getting into shape but there is no doubt that they will be ready when the pennant chase is started.

NO BETTING AT RACE MEETING

GOVERNMENT WILL NOT REPEAT THE PRESENT ORDER-IN-COUNCIL.

Ottawa, April 26.—A. E. Fripp, Ottawa, asked in the House of Commons if the ban on betting at racetracks for the duration of the war and six months thereafter," would be lifted in view of the approach of the spring meets. Sir Thomas White replied:

"It is not the intention of the Government to repeal the order-in-Council referred to.

"It has been drawn to the attention of the Government that horse-racing has been extended beyond the limits contemplated" by Parliament when legislation respecting the subject was enacted in 1912 and that conditions connected with betting on racetracks in certain sections of Canada have been such as to cause grave public offence to the communities concerned.

"With a view to remedying these conditions and dealing generally with the question of betting at race meetings in Canada the Government intends before the next session of Parliament to make an inquiry with a view to the enactment of such legislation as may be deemed advisable in the public interest"

Hydro Lamp Shop, 202 Charlotte Street. Best place to buy lamps. Prices best in the city.

Cubs Hard to Beat

The return of Grover Cleveland Alexander to the Cub pitching staff means that Manager Fred Mitchel is going to have a club which will be hard to beat this season. In pitching and catching Chicago looks stronger than the club which won the National League pennant last season. It is a powerful defensive club, and with Fred Merkle and Hollocher returning to the hitting ability which they suddenly lost during he world's series last fall against the Boston Red Sox, it looks as if the Cubs would be the club which must be subdued by the Giants if they have strong hopes of winning the pennant.

Alexander, Vaughn, Lefty Tyler, Phil Douglas and Claude Hendricks form a combination of boxmen which looks like the best in the National league. Bill Killefer, who is captain of the Cubs this year, is the best catcher in the game, and with so much strength centered in these important departments Manager Mitchell can stand a little weakness elsewhere. If the Cubs have a weak place it is in running the bases, where the Giants appear to have the edge.

THE MARKETS

There was a comparatively light market this morning which can be attributed to some extent to the unfavorable weather. Daylight saving has resulted in the farmers not arriving until later than formerly and it is now eleven and eleven-thirty in the morning before business becomes very brisk. This arrangement cannot be considered as convenient from the standpoint of the housewife who goes to the market on Saturday morning to buy her Sunday's supply of produce and aims to return to her home in time to prepare the mid-day meal

The London, England press says: Was it the faint hope of learning something that might be profitable to report at Versailles which took Lloyd George, the Home Secretary of Foreign Affairs, besides three Admirals and a couple of peers to the Alhambra to see the Kaiser's Finish, it is a fitting end; the picture is admirable. The title of the first part is "Over the top" and the name of the afterpiece is "Some Fighters"

The lower the grade of gas the easier it is for a Hot Spot Chalmers

THE great engineers of the automobile industry are discussing nowadays the low grade gas situation more often than the number of cylinders a car should have.

Not long ago one of them said that automobile engines would have to be redesigned to use the inferior gas of today.

This the Chalmers engineers did when they built into the great Chalmers engine the now famous Hot Spot and Ram's-horn manifold.

These two devices convert low grade gas into high power.

For any engineer will tell you there are more thermal units or power in a gallon of low grade kerosene gas than there is in a high test gas.

The Hot Spot puts the gas in shape for power results. It breaks up into tiny vapor molecules the gas—so fine that it really becomes "dry."

Then the Ram's-horn drives it to the cylinders by the quickest route ever devised and when the explosions come there is so little power to escape through the exhaust as to be well nigh negligible.

One short ride in a present day Chalmers will tell you the story far more eloquently than the English language can express it.

COURT CHEMONG HELD BANVUET

AS FAREWELL TO COMPANION JAMES WHO GOES TO ENGLAND.

The regular monthly meeting of Court Chemong 530, Independent Order of Foresters was held Thursday evening, Bro. G. Metcalfe, C.R., presiding. A number of applications for membership were presented by Bro. S. B. Linde, D.S.C.R. and several of these were initiated.

A special feature of the evening was a banquet held in honor of Bro. J. S. James, V.C.R., who with his wife, Companion James, and his daughter Companion Clark, are leaving for England. The pretty decorated tables were well stocked with dainty table, which a large number of members and friends well enjoyed. Bro. Dr. Carmichael acted very acceptably as chairman and toastmaster and proposed the toast to the "King" which was heartily responded to by all singing the Nation Anthem. Bro. Dr. Carmichael also proposed the toast to the I.O.F., which was ably responded to by Bro. S. B. Lynde, D.S.C.R.

Bro. G. W. Powell proposed the toast to our guest, Bro. J. S. James V.C.R., which was very appropriately responded to by Bro. James.

Bro. J. W. Buyers proposed the toast to the returned soldiers, and this was responded to by several soldiers and all singing the "Soldiers of the King."

Bro. W. G. McKee proposed the toast to the ladies and waiting committee which was responded to by Bro. A. H. Webb, Court Deputy.

The chairman then presented Bro. James, Companion James, Companion Clark, Companion Blake and Bros. Minard and Blake with beautiful I. O. F. Signet Rings. Bro. S. B. Lynde, D.S.C.R. addressed those present in the interests of the Order stating that the I. O. F. was in a flourishing condition as was evidenced by the Financial Review Insurance Journal. A vote of thanks to companions Brawshaw and Wilson who superintended the refreshments and all who assisted to make the banquet a success brought a very pleasant evening to a close.

REV. A. E. SCOTT, TORONTO, AT ST. JAMES' TOMORROW

Congregation Will Celebrate Second Anniversary in New Building—Oddfellows Will Attend Evening Service.

Sabbath and Monday, April 27 and 28 will be the Second Anniversary service of St. James Methodist Church. The history of the cause dates back to July 30 1908 when a prayer meeting was held every Friday evening at the parsonage, 53 Crescent street, Rev. H. M. Manning being pastor. On the following Thursday, July 9, a tent was pitched and a prayer meeting held at which 20 were present. The first Sabbath service was held on July 12th at 11 a.m., 51 being present. The first session of the Sunday School was held in the afternoon of that day, 39 being present. Mr. A. E. Best, superintendent. The Sunday School buildings were dedicated March 28 1909 by Rev. J. P. Wilson, D.D.

This young strippling has grown into a strong rugged and progressive cause and is destined to play no insignificant part in the development of the Christian manhood and womanhood of this fair city. Two years ago the Church building was dedicated to the worship of Almighty God by the Rev. Dr. Chown, general superintendent of the Methodist Church of Canada.

The services of the coming sabbath promise to equal any thus far held. Rev. E. E. Scott, of Toronto will preach morning and evening.

The evening service is unique in that the Oddfellow's of the city with the Rebeccas, who are celebrating the one hundredth birthday of American Oddfellowship, will worship at St. James and their choir of thirty voices will furnish the musical part of the service.

On Monday the 28th the ladies of church will provide a dinner, for which they are noted, from 5.30 to 8 p.m., after which Rev. Mr. Scott will deliver his widely known and justly celebrated lecture "The Land of the Maples."

The Goderich Signal says of the lecture delivered there by Mr. Scott: "It was one of the most enthusiastic as well as instructive and interesting lectures ever delivered in Goderich. The lecturer aroused the interest and patriotism of his audience by a splendid description of the grandeur of the position, extent and natural beauty, legislative education and religious liberty of Canada. Mr. Scott's language was picturesque and eloquent at all times but when he launched forth in eulogy of the scenery of Canada his word picturing was very fine indeed."

Special music will be furnished by the choir under the leadership of Mr. Nichols, choirmaster.

A hearty invitation is extended to all the friends and well wishers of St. James.

MARK STREET CHURCH.

Choir Will Continue Their Easter Music Tomorrow.

At the services in Mark Street Methodist Church tomorrow the choir will continue their Easter music. The pastor's theme at the morning service will be the Fifth Word from the Cross. In the evening he will speak on Manhood as viewed by an Old Testament prophet. A cordial welcome to all, especially strangers.

R. R. HALL SERVES NOTICE ON CITY CLERK ARMSTRONG

Will Apply for Restraining Order if City Attempts to Enter into Agreement With Russell-Townsend Company for Building the Hunter Street Bridge.

Mr. R. R. Hall has sent the following communication to City Clerk Armstrong.

Peterborough, April 26, 1919

Dear sir:—

I have received instructions from Mr. William Rudkins, a ratepayer of the city of Peterborough, to institute an action against the corporation of the City of Peterborough to restrain it from entering into a contract with Messrs. Russell-Townsend Company for the construction of the Hunter Street Bridge.

I am advised that the following is a copy of a resolution passed at a meeting of the Board of Works, held on April 22nd, 1919.

"That the contract for the construction of the Hunter street Bridge be given to the Russell Townsend Co., on their tender, the arch in the bridge to be guaranteed by them, the bridge to be built the full width and the deductions to be made as formerly outlined in Ald. Turner's motion."

The deductions outlined in Ald. Turner's motion were:

The panel work under the bridge.

The granite finish below the floor of the bridge.

The granite masonry.

And the sidewalks over the loose fills.

And with shortened approaches on both ends.

The following are some of the grounds upon which I have advised Mr. Rudkins that the Corporation may be restrained:—

Under By-law No. 2042 of the Corporation passed on the third day of July, 1917, I find that only $260,000 was voted on by the ratepayers of Peterborough for the cost of construction of this bridge.

The tenders that have been received by the Council for the construction of this bridge exclusive of land damages and engineer's fees clearly exceed the amount authorized by the ratepayers to be expended in the construction of this bridge and even these twelve tenders that have been received are estimates only and are not bona fide tenders that the contractors are willing to be bound by as a lump sum cost of the construction of the Bridge.

The Board of Works in recommending that the contract be awarded to the Russell Topsend Company on a lump sum fee plus cost, have clearly discriminated against several of the contractors who tendered on the same basis.

The estimated cost of the construction of the Bridge by Messrs. Russell, Townsend Company is not a bona fide estimate to the knowledge of the members of the City Council whom I am instructed have already been advised by Messrs. Russell. Townsend Company that they would not even make a lump sum tender for the construction of the bridge at even $287,000 exclusive of land damages and Engineer's fees.

I am further instructed that Mr. Barber, the engineer has not sunk any test pits to determine the depth to which the foundations of the several piers are to be sunk and that plans showing the depth to which the piers shall be sunk are wholly incorrect and the piers will have to be sunk to a much greater depth which will materially add to the cost of the construction of the Bridge.

I am further instructed to charge that every member of the City Council is fully advised that the cost of the construction of this Bridge including Engineer's fees and land damages will exceed by many thousands of dollars the appropriation of $260,000 voted on by the ratepayers.

I am further instructed to advise you that if the City Council pass a by-law authorizing the entering into an agreement with Messrs. Russell Townsend Company pursuant to the resolution of the Board of Works to apply at once for an injunction to restrain the Corporation from entering into such contract. I therefore wish you would kindly advise me immediately when this By-law is passed.

I further beg to advise you that if the City Council in the face of this notice attempt to actually sign the contract with Messrs. Russell Townsend Company which may be authorized by such By-law to make a party to the action every member of the Council who votes in favor of the By-law so as to charge him personally any loss, costs, or damages that the Corporation of the City of Peterboro may sustain by reason or on account of the Corporation entering into such contract and to ask for the further relief that the contract be delivered up to be cancelled.

Yours truly,
Sgd. R.R. HALL

Salvation Army To Run Saloons

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, April 28.—A Salvation Army campaign to take over the saloon leases and fixtures in prohibition days, converting deserted saloons into working men's clubs, was announced here last night by Commander Evangeline Booth. The plan contemplates the retention of the historic brass rail and the lunch counter, but instead of selling liquor, as the saloons have done, the Salvation Army clubs will handle soft drinks, and the doughnuts made famous by the organization during he war.

Commander Booth declared that the study of saloon frequenters by the Salvation Army workers had disclosed that fully one-half of them were attracted by the desire for companionship, while only one-fourth have a passion for alcohol, and another one-fourth drink to "drown sorrow." It is the half who are seeking companionship that the clubs are designed to aid.

ENGLAND IN GRIP OF SNOW STORM

SIX INCHES OF THE BEAUTIFUL HAS FALLEN IN LONDON

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, April 28.—Following a period of perfect spring weather, one of the worst storms in some time raged over the British Isles last night, covering the country with from four to six inches of snow. Telegraph and telephone lines suffered severely and communication is cut off in many directions from this city. Communication with the continent is interrupted in this city, which received the brunt of the storm. Five thousand telephones were put out of service. Spring crops and young lambs suffered from the storm. Marine reports show that a few small ships were wrecked.

SAM GOMPERS HURT IN A COLLISION

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, April 28.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, who was injured in a collision between an auto and a street car on Broadway yesterday, was reported resting comfortably this morning. It was said his condition showed considerable improvement.

For the first time in history, Lindsay Orangemen, 500 strong will celebrate the Glorious Twelfth of July in Toronto.

EX-KAISER TO BE TRIED BY INTERNATIONAL COURT COMPOSED OF FIVE JUDGES

Is to be Charged With Supreme Offense Against Morality and Sanctity of Treaties—His Surrender Will Be Demanded of Holland—Revised Covenant Given to the Public.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, April 28—The new articles proposed for insertion in the peace treaty to be considered at the plenary session of the Peace Conference today includes the following:

Article 1—The Allied and associated powers publicly arraign William II of Hohenzollern, formerly German Emperor, not for an offence against the criminal law, but for the supreme offense against international morality and the sanctity of treaties. It is proposed that a special tribunal be constituted to try the accused, consisting of five judges, one appointed by each of the five great powers—Great Britain, France, the United States, Italy and Japan. The allied and associated powers will require Holland to surrender the former Emperor for trial.

Article 2.—Other German military officers are to be tried by separate tribunal.

Article 3—Persons accused of violation of the laws and customs of war, according to the second proposed article, will be brought before military tribunals and, if found guilty, sentenced to the punishments laid down by military law. All persons accused of having committed an act in violation of the laws and customs of war, which are specified either by name or by rank, office or employment which they held under German authorities, will be demanded of the German Government for trial by a military tribunal of power against whom the criminal acts were perpetrated.

Article 4.—The German Government undertakes to furnish all documents and information of every kind, the production of which may be considered necessary to insure a full knowledge of incriminating acts, the discovery of the offenders and the just appreciation of the responsibility.

MONROE DOCTRINE SAFEGUARDED

Washington, April 28.—In the revised League of Nations' Covenant, the Munroe Doctrine is carefully safeguarded. Provision is made for the withdrawal of any nation on two years' notice. The Council of Nine must be unanimous on decisons and the plan for armament reduction must be approved and adopted before being effective.

FINAL ACTION ON THE COVENANT

MOST EVENTFUL SESSION OF PEACE CONFERENCE BEGUN TO-DAY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, April 28.—The Associated Press this morning issued the following:

"What promises to be perhaps the most eventful week yet of the Paris Conference opens today with the plenary session of that body, with final action on the covenant of the League of Nations in prospect. There is also a feeling prevalent in Paris that the treaty of peace will be ready for presentation to the German delegates by Saturday of this week, before which time it is hoped the Italian situation may resolve itself. As to the peace treaty, the most important matter still to be settled is the problem of composing the Japanese and Chinese claims to Kiao-Chau and the Shantung peninsula. A decision on this subject has been expected for several days, and it may be anounced today. Matters dealing with the disposition of German cables, repatriation of German prisoners of war, and the future status of the Kiel canal and questions relative to Luxemburg are also pending, but it is believed they are in a fair way toward an adjustment.

Finns Drive Out The Bolsheviki

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Helsingfors, April 28.—A national assembly has been formed at Olonetz, 110 miles northeast of Petrograd, where the Finns have driven out the Bolshevik. The town was captured, according to report, by volunteer troops.

13 SAILORS GO DOWN TO DEATH

A PARTY OF AMERICAN TARS WERE RETURNING FROM SHORE LEAVE

(Canadian Press Despatch,

New York, April 28.—Thirteen sailors returning in a navy launch to the battleship Nevada were reported by the police to have been drowned when the launch sank in the Hudson River off 113th street early today.

The police said that in the absence of an official statement by the naval authorities they based their report on information from persons who said they witnessed the sinking and heard the cries of the drowning sailors. These witnesses declared that the launch apparently collided with something just before reaching the Nevada, and that they had a clear view of what was taking place because of the navy searchlights playing on the scene. There were fourteen persons in the launch, one being rescued, according to police reports.

U. S. AMBASSADOR HAS LEFT ROME

REPORT THAT MOVE HAS TO DO WITH ADRIATIC QUESTION.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Rome, April 28. — Thomas Nelson Page, American ambassador to Italy, has left Rome for Paris. An Italian newspaper report from Rome said that Ambassador Page had offered his resignation because he had been made "acquainted with President Wilson's views on the Italian claims." The statement was authorized at the State Department in Washington, however, that there was no foundation for this report.

Admiral's Troops In Long Advance

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 28.—Admiral Kolchak's troops have advanced along the southern branch of the Trans-Siberian railroad in Eastern European Russia, to Kinel, only forty miles to the east of Samara, according to despatches received by the Russian commissioners in Paris from Omsk, the capital of Admiral Kolchak's government.

Pleaded Guilty To Fraud Charge

Robert Herbert John Codd, charged in police court this morning with fraud, pleaded guilty and was remanded for a week.

Codd is a Toronto man who is alleged to have run up board bills and left them unpaid. He is wanted in Lindsay upon charges of theft and fraud, as well as in Peterborough, and was arrested in Campbellford and brought to this city by Plainclothesman Cookman.

It is alleged that Codd stole a returned man's button, which he was wearing when taken into custody. It is believed that while he was in the navy for some time, he never saw active service in France.

NAVAL TUG LOST AND 22 PERISH

HUGHLI WAS LOADED WITH EXPLOSIVES TO CLEAR OSTEND CHANNEL.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Brussels, April 28.—The British naval tug Hughli sank off Nieuport today. Twenty-two of the crew were drowned and ten rescued. The Hughli was carrying explosives for clearing the Ostend channel. It is uncertain whether the disaster was due to an explosion or to the vessel stranding on a sand bank.

Lindsay Board of Trade has secured a portion of land from the Government for park purposes. Memorial oaks will be planted, and named after the fallen heroes from the town.

FRENCH GOV'T. IS NOT ALARMED

OVER GENERAL HOLIDAY LABOR WILL TAKE ON MAY DAY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 28. The French government has no fear of fresh manifestations on May 1, when the French unions have declared a holiday, it is announced from an authoritative source. Premier Clemenceau, it is said, has authorized peaceful demonstrations and has placed the responsibility for the maintenance of order on the organizers.

TRUCK AND BUGGY IN A COLLISION

DRIVER AND TWO BOYS HAVE A NARROW ESCAPE FROM INJURY.

Jos. Darwin, driving a Ford delivery truck struck a horse and buggy driven by Joseph Coughlin, at the corner of Water and Simcoe streets this morning about ten thirty cut the horse slightly upon the front leg, broke the front spring of the buggy and smashed four or five spokes out of one of the wheels and dinged the radiator of his car. Neither driver was injured and two little boys riding with Mr. Coughlin were equally fortunate.

Mr. Coughlin was driving south on Water Street when the car driven by Darwin attempted to turn the corner to go north. A curtain upon the left hand side of the driving seat obscured Darwin's view and he told Sergeant Deannard after the accident that he had been unable to see the horse and buggy.

The impact swung Mr Coughlin's outfit completely around and the horse made a wild dash north on Water street the driver making no attempt to rein him in until he left the slippery asphalt and reached the macadam at Victoria Park.

Two shoes pulled from the horses feet in some manner and a boy's toque were the only traces of the accident to be found near the car and it was not until Mr. Coughlin pulled up his frightened horse and drove him back to the scene of the trouble that the particulars of the collision could be obtained.

SUMMARY OF COVENANT OF LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Any Party to the Agreement Can Withdraw by Giving Two Years' Notice—Can Limit Manufacture of Munitions, Thereby Ensuring Continual Peace.

The following is a summary of the revised covenant of the League of Nations:

Any nation may withdraw by giving two years' notice.

League to operate through assembly, council and permanent secretariat.

The council to meet once a year at least, each member to have one vote.

Unanimous agreement required in assembly and council.

Seat of the League to be at Geneva, but later may be established elsewhere.

Women to be on an equality with men in all positions in connection with the League.

Council to formulate plans for reduction of armaments according to the circumstances of each state.

After the plans are adopted by the governments, armaments therein fixed shall not be exceeded without consent of the council.

The council shall advise regarding limitation of manufacture of munitions by private enterprise.

Full information on military and naval situation to be frankly exchanged

Members of the League to preserve the territorial integrity and political independence of all other members.

In case of threat of war the League shall take any action it deems wise to safeguard the peace of nations.

All disputes to be submitted to arbitration and no resort to war till three months after an award.

Council to formulate plans for a permanent court of international justice.

In case of a dispute not arbitrated, being not settled by the council, a statement of the facts and the recommendations shall be published. The members of the League agree that they will not go to war with any party to the dispute which complies with the recommendations.

The council will make no recommendation in matters which are solely within domestic jurisdiction.

Should any member resort to war in spite of the covenant, other members of the League shall break off all financial, commercial and personal intercourse, and the council shall recommend what military or naval forces shall be contributed to enforce the covenant.

Every international engagement to be recorded with the secretariat and published as soon as possible.

All members to take steps to release themselves from obligations inconsistent with the terms of the covenant.

Provision made for mandatory nations to undertake administration of enemy colonies.

International organizations to ensure humane and fair conditons of labor to be established.

All international bureaus to be under direction of the League.

"RFD" CIRCULARS ARE NOT NEEDED

NO DANGER OF GENERAL STRIKE IN TORONTO MAY DAY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, April 28.—Red printed circulars issued by the "May Day Conference Committee," urging all workers to take a holiday on May 1 as a universal protest against exploitation, were scatterd about the city yesterday and today. The circular announces that May Day demonstrations will be held in Queen's Park in the afternoon and in the Arena at night. While some small strikes are expected here on May Day, there is nothing at present to indicate any great disturbance in industrial circles in Toronto on the approaching traditional strike day.

VETERANS ASKED TO REGISTER

ONLY 320 NAMES HAVE BEEN HANDED IN SO FAR.

The Reception Committee of the City Council is desirous of knowing the number of returned soldiers who will attend the banquet on Thursday night. Up to the present 320 have registered. It is felt that this does not include all the returned soldiers whom the Council would like to have present and the list will be kept open until Tuesday night. The City Clerk's office will be open tonight and tomorrow night, and those who have not registered are asked to kindly do so at the Veterans' rooms.

JAP SQUADRON LEAVES GENOA

Genoa, April 28.—The Japanese naval squadron which has been visiting in Italian waters left here for southern France.

J. O. Dromgole, Senior Judge of Essex County, died at Windsor of pneumonia after a brief illness.

REDUCE TIME FOR SHOE WORKERS

MANUFACTURERS ANNOUNCE WEEK WILL BE FORTY-NINE AND HALF HOURS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, April 28.—The Ontario Shoe Manufacturing Association has announced that on or before June 1 the hours of labor in most shoe factories of Ontario will be reduced to forty-nine and a half per week, without a lessening of the weekly earnings of employes. Thirty-five hundred workers are affected by this decision. Many of them now work fifty five hours a week or longer.

THREE YOUNG MEN NEARLY DROWNED

WHEN THEIR CANOE UPSET NEAR C. P. R. BRIDGE YESTERDAY.

Mr. J. A. Sollitt and Mr. M. Neary and another young man were nearly drowned in the Otonabee river at a point just below the C.P.R. bridge yesterday about 12.30 when a canoe, in which they were paddling up the stream, capsized.

The young man swam to the old city wharf near the Matthews-Blackwell plant and the other men held onto the canoe until they floated some distance.

Tom Desautel and Joseph Young who saw the accident went to the rescue in a boat and succeeded in getting the two men out of the water. Mr. A. Lefave also went to the assistance of Messrs. Sollitt and Neary, but the other boat was upon the scene first and Mr. Lefave brought in the canoe and paddles

The eddy, which occurrs in the stream just at the point where the canoe was capsized, was responsible for the accident as it turned the frail craft sideways and the force of the current turned it over.

The men were taken home in a cab.

THE REFERENDUM.

ONE OF THE BEST evidences of the popularity of the Ontario Temperance Act, one of the surest indications that it is likely to be sustained when referred to the people next Fall, is the fact that no journal of repute and no political party has openly espoused the cause of the opposite side. There have been isolated cases of politicians attacking the measure on principle, but there has been nothing like concerted action. Investigation will show, too, that the attitude of the politicians in question is easily explained. They happen to represent districts in which the temperance sentiment of the voters has not been developed.

WANTED—AN ELECTION.

THE CANADIAN PRESS on Saturday sent out a despatch to the effect that Premier Hearst and Leader Proudfoot had arrived at an agreement by which it was arranged to have another session of the Legislature before holding an election. It is comforting, however, to note that both leaders deny that any such compact has been made.

The Legislature has already run one year on borrowed time, according to an agreement that was unanimously concurred in by the House, not hatched up in secret between the leaders of the two parties. When that agreement was reached the war was on, and for that reason the arrangement was tolerated, although the holding of an election in Ontario even under such circumstances would not have been generally regarded as a provincial calamity. A Dominion election a short time before the period referred to had the effect of solidifying the Canadian people in their purpose of winning the war instead of disrupting the nation. Other countries at war held elections without disastrous results.

But the necessity for the extension of the life of the Legislature has passed. To re-extend the term, especially in secret conclave and without the concurrence of the members of the House, would be to establish a dangerous precedent. It would be a blow at the very principles of representative government. The late Sir James Whitney, while at the helm of State, considered three sessions sufficient for the Legislature. The present House has already exceeded that limit by two terms, and that should be sufficient.

The question of the Ontario Temperance Act should be voted upon separately. To hold a general election at the same time would be to cloud the issue and confuse the voters. But whatever the result of the referendum, there should be an election for the Legislature soon after that result is known. No Government can be considered truly representative if it hangs on to office two years or more beyond the limit set either by precedent or the constitution. Once a government secured control, it could, with the collusion of a weak Opposition with a leader who despaired of success in the event of an appeal to the people, hold out indefinitely regardless of the will of the people.

The electors of Ontario have shown unmistakably that they are not disposed to be bound by easy agreements arrived at between leaders or parties. There was an understanding that all bye-elections were to go by acclamation to the party that held the seat at the time the vacancy occurred. This was something that the people have in every instance ignored. There has been a contest in every bye-election since that arrangement was made, and contests, too, which showed a remarkable change in the general sentiment of the voters and in which new elements were introduced. There are two new parties in the field since the election of 1914. Each of these is no doubt anxious for an opportunity to test its strength, and the opportunity should be given

In the present Legislature the Opposition has been painfully weak. The various sessions have shown that the House lacks virility and the proceedings have degenerated into the inanity that marks the deliberations of a mutual admiration society. No Government can be expected to render the best that is in it under such circumstances. Even the ambitious and redoubtable Hartley Dewart, the chosen champion of the lost cause of the liquor party, could not find it safe to attack the Ontario Temperance Act in the open, but brought his forces to bear upon it in the rear. Even in the highly improbable event of his charges being substantiated before the Royal Commission, the principle of the Act in question will still remain unimpaired.

THE ONLY WAY.

IN AN ARTICLE in the Chicago Daily News Samuel Gompers, the veteran president of the American Federation of Labor, who has lately returned from his important task in Europe, declares himself unreservedly for constructive and against destructive policies in government. "The evolutionary process of progress and improvement," he says, "is the basis for the opportunity for freedom, justice and democracy."

Mr. Gompers has had exceptional facilities for viewing the results and weighing the promises of the other sort of policy during his sojourn in Europe. He has seen a large part of that unhappy continent under confused and dangerous leadership, attempting an experiment in destruction. He has seen bolshevism substituting new tyranny for old, spreading starvation far and wide, violating democratic principles at every turn, holding out no hope of improvement for the peoples.

He has had occasion also to compare the claims of theoretical socialism—which he has always opposed—with its functioning as a constructive force in distracted Europe. And he has seen it, in spite of its pretensions as the constructive and evolutionary process par excellence, proving in actual practice but the forerunner of bolshevism. Where it has seemed to stand, as in Prussia, it has been because of the support of conservative classes. Where it has essayed to play the independent role, as in Bavaria, bolshevism has been the next chapter.

A special despatch to the News from Mr. Hecht, its correspondent now in Munich, points out the bankruptcy of socialism as a constructive force in all Germany. He says that socialism is dead there. The declaration of a great labor orator at the international labor conference that there are only two ways of dealing with Labor's problems—the Lenine way and the British way—is another recognition of the fact that socialism has lost caste with practical men.

It is not strange, therefore, that Mr. Gompers returns to his own country firmly convinced that improvement of the people's condition is to be effected not by harebrained experiments but by holding fast to that which is good; that the institutions of his country afford all the means of realizing the progressive amelioration which all patriotic citizens so earnestly desire, and that the sporadic counsels of extremism which are heard from time to time spring from minds that have not yet grasped the lessons of recent events or the possibilities of democratic government.

It seems to be the same in Canada. "Jimmy" Simpson, the well-known moderate socialist, in his address here last week, spoke on democracy rather than upon his erstwhile favorite theme.

THE OX AND THE ASS TEAM.

"THOU SHALT NOT PLOW with an ox and an ass together," says the good old, practical, Mosaic law. And Moses knew, as usual. He was aware, probably by actual experience, that the two animals in question could not be brought to the point of harmonious action, that the arrangement was not conducive to the moral development of the man unfortunate enough to attempt to direct such a combination, and that the best agricultural results were impossible of achievement.

But man has right down to the present ignored precept after precept of the Old Testament codes, and none more frequently than the particular article in question. There are arrangements just as incongruous as the harnessing together of two animals with no aims in common. The attempt has been made time after time to compel two rival, if not actually hostile, races to dwell together in the same national domicile, and always with dire results.

Perhaps things will be different and better after the Peace Conference and the League of Nations have unitedly and individually revised the affairs of the universe. The incongruous team combination is to become a thing of the past. Races are not to be harnessed together in an arrangement that breeds perpetual trouble. Each nationality is to be given a chance to work out its own destiny so long as it does not interfere with the welfare and happiness of others. The old Mosaic law is at last to be recognized.

THE GLOBE AND PRUNES.

(London Free Press.)

IT IS INTERESTING to note the effort of the Toronto Globe to prove that here is something wrong with the tariff, while at the same time that journal protests that it is not a free trader. It complains that the poor man's prunes are taxed 16½ per cent., while the rich man's grapefruit is taxed only 7½ per cent. customs duty. This is the meat in a half-column discourse upon the iniquity of "the taxation of food." Prunes and grapefruit seem to be the sum total of our contemporary's explicit fault-finding in this respect.

Let us see what this means. Prunes are selling today in the retail stores at 20 cents per pound. The customs tax on a pound of prunes is about 3 1-5 cents. Grapefruit are selling in the same stores at two for 25 cents. The customs duty on three grapefruit would be about the equivalent of the tax on a pound of prunes. In nourishment the prunes probably have the advantage by two to one. The "rich" men hence pays more customs tax for his grapefruit nourishment than the "poor" man pays for his prunes.

Would the Globe have grapefruit taxed out of all possibility of the average citizen enjoying these luxuries? Would it have us forced to live upon prunes, with never a chance for a grapefruit or an orange, for these citrus fruits are all taxed alike? Prunes are far from being exclusively a boarding house luxury, in any event. And why does the Globe dilate upon grapefruit and ignore the orange? Does it want the orange taxed out of reach, or does it class the orange as the rich man's luxury also?

The same sort of contention is set up by the Globe in respect to the duty on clothing. One might be led to think that the high cost of a suit of clothes is due to the tariff. But clothing is selling at prices in Great Britain today at least as high as in Canada, and Britain is the country where they have "free trade as it is in England"—the kind of free trade for which the Globe used to angle, though of late it professes not to wish for it. Will the Globe be good enough to state to its readers just how many cents is added to the cost of an average suit of clothes through the taxation of the tariff?

LABOR AND CO-OPERATION

There is no more reason in the age-old antagonism between labor and capital than there is for that abnormality known as sex antagonism, yet both of these conditions continue to exist and must be reckoned with. Capital, according to the school of modern economists, is the whole stock of wealth existing at a moment of time. As formerly used the term capital is applicable only to wealth devoted to business purposes. Capital, in the classical sense, is differential as "fixed" and "circulating." Fixed capital, according to Mill, consists of all the more or less durable instruments of production, such as buildings, machinery etc. Circulating capital consists of instruments capable of only a single service such as raw material, fuel and funds employed in payment of wages.

The fact is that the relation between capital and labor and wages is far less simple than any school of economists supposed, the result being continual readjustment. When Macauley's New Zealander stands on London Bridge and contemplates the ruins of St. Paul's the chances are that the last issue of the last paper will contain an article throwing new light on this time honored controversy. In the meantime new light on any phase of the subject is not without interest. Even as great an authority as Daniel Webster was far afield when he said in a burst of eloquence: "Labor in this country is independent and proud. It has not to ask the patronage of capital, but capital solicits the aid of labor." As a matter of fact while both elements frequently display pride, neither is independent of the other.

On April 14 Mr. William G. Willcox wrote informingly and interestingly to the New York Times discussing the topic from a new angle. He asserts that as industry is now organized the interests of capital and labor must always be opposed. The struggle, he thinks, must inevitably continue with more or less dissatisfaction on both sides until a common interest is established by real co-operation. A partnership he says, in which one partner receives a fixed wage and the other partner takes all the rest of the profits is no partnership at all. No industrial representation or improvement in wages or conditions will ever make labor a real partner. Under present conditions the writer thinks that labor will always believe that capital is getting more than its fair share. This impression must remain until the basic relations of capital and labor are fundamentally altered.

Thus Mr. Willcox. Unlike most theoretical philosophers, however, he has a remedy for the conditions he deplores:

"If," he concludes, "the principle of partnership were frankly admitted and fairly applied the whole situation would change. If, for example an industry were to adopt a real co-operative plan of operation by making a moderate scale of wages and salaries a first charge on the earnings, a moderate return upon the capital actually invested in the business a second charge, with a pro rata division if any further profits between the stockholders and employes, the conflict of interests would quickly disappear.

"From such conditions the whole industry must profit. If the earnings of capital were smaller they would at least be more secure, but it is by no means impossible that the increased earnings, resulting from such a plan of operation would offset the employes' share in the distribution. The socialistic demand for the nationalization of industry is based upon the belief that private capital now exacts an unfair share of the profits. Capital can find no more effective method of meeting this demand than by introducing genuine co-operation with its employes and contrasting the excessive cost and loss of efficiency which inevitably follow Government operation with the increased efficiency and productiveness sure to result from taking labor into partnership."

The fly in the ointment of this contention appears to lie in the fact that where such a system has been tried it was not accompanied by signal success. Even Brook Farm, founded on a perfect theory of ethics and conducted by admittedly superior minds went to pieces like a Chinese puzzle.

"Deacon Simms 'low he doan' approve o' churches advartisin," remarked Shinbone; "but when Ah ast him, in dat case, wuffo' he ring de church bell fo' service, he jes' had nuffin' to say."

Unanswerable.

"Hubby, if I were to die, would you marry again."

"That question is hardly fair, my dear."

"Why not?"

"If I were to say yes, you would not like it, and to say never again wouldn't sound nice."

A New Excuse.

"Tommy, if you are playing you're an automobile, I wish you'd run over to the store and get me some butter."

"I'm awfully sorry, ma, but I'm all out of gasoline."

TO-DAY'S STORY

"I heard you are having a hard time trying to get rid of your second-hand car?" said the druggist, as Whiffle entered in quest of a five-cent cigar.

"A terrible time," replied Whiffle despondently. "If I don't unload this week I'm going to run the thing down to the lake front some dark night and let it roll off the end of the pier. The cat that comes back has nothing on the old 'bus one can't get rid of.

"Now, if I were involved alone in getting the machine out of the garage and onto the shoulders of another, the thing would have been done long ago. But my wife takes a hand in the sale, and just when the would-be purchaser is ready to turn over a cheque for the full amount she steps in and spoils the sale.

"The world has long known that one cannot sell a horse if one tells the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth—about the horse. A second-hand auto has the horse beat a thousand ways.

"I had a man in the garage one day who fell in love with my machine. He liked the color of it and was desirous of buying it on that account alone. I was ready to hold out my itching palm for his money when my wife spoke up.

"'Henry,' she said, 'did you tell Mr. Wilkins that the carburetor is in need of a new valve?'

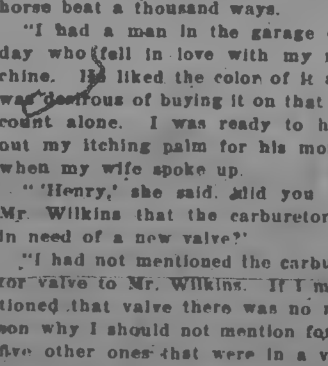
"I had not mentioned the carburetor valve to Mr. Wilkins. If I mentioned that valve there was no reason why I should not mention forty-five other ones that were in a very bad way. Wilkins finally said he would have the carburetor fixed, and then my wife said: 'Tell him about the missing fan belt, Henry.'

"You can imagine my chagrin. It was the second time she crabbed the sale. But, even at that, the worst was yet to come. As Wilkins again decided to make the purchase of that old carry-all, my wife piped up with: 'Henry, I think Mr. Wilkins, on account of his wife and children, should know that the generator is beyond repair.'

"By this time Wilkins was beginning to think that the machine was slightly out of order, if not worse, so I said right out: 'Wilkins, I'm going to make an open confession. This outfit is totally defunct, and you'd never get past the corner with it. If I sold you the wreck, my conscience would torment me the rest of my life, I am sure. If it didn't, it should. Good day, sir.'"

"So you still have your old coffee grinder, eh?" laughed the druggist.

"Yes," replied Whiffle, "but there's another gink coming to see it tomorrow—while my wife is down town shopping. I'll swing the deal this time, sure."



"M'CULLOUGH" SENDS LETTER FROM NORTH BAY.

London, Ont., April 26. — Frank McCullough, the condemned Toronto murderer, has extended his newspaper correspondence to London, if a letter received here which bears his supposed signature is genuine.

A few days after McCullough's escape the same London newspaper received a letter in which the writer claimed he was McCullough, and that after spending a visit with a friend in South London he was about to depart for Winnipeg. The letter which came yesterday is dated North Bay and was postmarked ther April 23. It bears the same signature and states that "I have given up the idea of going to Winnipeg and I will double back to Toronto to see my lady friend."

WOMAN SUFFERED 12 YEARS

Finally Made Well by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Emmitsburg, Md.—"I suffered for twelve or fifteen years, and was treated by a physician, but got little relief. I saw an advertisement of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in my newspaper, so thought I would try it, and it did me more good than all the doctor's medicine. I am a farmer's wife and do my housework all the time, and I am better now than I have been for years. I am never without Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the house and have recommended it to several of my friends. You are perfectly welcome to publish my letter for the good it may do other women."—Mrs. ETTIE WARREN, Emmitsburg, Md.

Backache and nervousness are symptoms or nature's warnings, which indicate a functional disturbance or an unhealthy condition which often develops into a more serious ailment.

Women in this condition should not continue to drag along without help, but profit by Mrs. Warren's experience, and try this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and for special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co., Lynn, Mass.

VILLAGE FOR VETERANS.

Disabled Men Will Live Amid Healthful Surroundings.

The first village centre for disabled men, at Enham Place and Park near Andover, will be opened in April or May. As announced, the British Red Cross Society has made a grant of $50,000 for the building and equipment of the medical block. Help is expected also from the Ministry of Pensions, which has approved the scheme, and the Board of Agriculture has promised its aid. The estimate is that a centre for 1,000 men will cost $500,000, but 150 men with the necessary staff can be housed in existing buildings, and on this scale, with an expenditure of $250,000, the experiment will begin.

Enham Place is a large, handsome house in the middle of some of the most beautiful scentry in Hampshire, England. The whole estate covers 1,027 acres, and contains four farms, three big houses, two smaller ones, a village hall, post office, smithy, and over 29 cottages. The Village Centres Council chose it with a view not only to what may be called its practical advantages, but to its suitability for men with shattered nerves needing rest and fresh air.

The future occupants of the centre will be those who are suffering from the effects of shell-shock, or are crippled by wounds, or have lost a limb, or are recovering from illness, or have been recommended a country life. It is not proposed to receive men who cannot reasonably be expected to recover any capacity for work. Some of the new villagers will be instructed in various branches of farming and gardening, dairy work and poultry keeping. Others will be taught carpentry, furniture and boot making, tailoring, motor repairing, building, painting and plumbing. The intention of the council is to establish many small workshops and classes rather than a few large ones, the aim being to bring out each man's individuality and provide opportunity for his tastes. The community hopes to supply most of its own wants and to lay out its own land. The characteristics of the "institution" are to be avoided. The men themselves will have a voice in the management of the centre, and the real communal idea will be fostered.

It will be gathered that the essence of the scheme is to combine curative treatment with vocational training. A man will be put on the road to recovery, while he is "finding his feet" industrially. Nor is it intended that during this period the patient and pupil should be segregated from his wife and family, if he possesses them. As soon as funds allow, more cottages will be built, so that the family man will be able to get a home and a piece of land on fair terms during his progress to recovery, which in many cases, may take a long time.

No Rabbits in Palestine.

Among the hoofed animals found in Palestine are the fallow deer, a European type, gazelles and other antelopes, characteristic of Africa. The wild boar, still common, seems to have had for its Biblical companion Behemoth the hippopotamus, though this became extinct ages ago. His pigmy relative of the rocks, the little hyrax, is a well-known beast of Palestine, and is also of African type, Africa being the home of the family. This is the 'coney' of Scripture, but there is no rabbit in Palestine.

What Is in Your Heart?

It is not always necessary to make a conscious effort to help others. If we are trying our hardest to do right, helpfulness will radiate from our lives, as heat radiates from a fire. If there is kindness and sympathy in our hearts our very silence will be eloquent. The greater part of helpfulness is the conscious sort which is the direct result of our being what we are.

Indomitable Women Writers

AMELIA E. BARR, just dead at almost eight-eight, wrote not only a number of books that deserved temporary popularity, but two or three that deserved more than a day's vogue. Her first, "Jan Vedder's Wife," a story of the rough home life of Shetland fishermen, is yet read. So are the later, "A Bow of Orange Ribbon," and its sequel, "A Maid of Maiden Lane," the former treating of honest Anglo-Dutch society upon the Hudson in the last days of the French and Indian War, with a Dutch heroine and British hero; the latter of the New York of 1791; when the Federal Government was just being established. "Remember the Alamo," a book that gave the author room to introduce her personal knowledge of ante-bellum Texas, has its readers still. Mrs. Barr leaned heavily on historic background, and used it with some skill—Cromwell's England, the Wesleyan Revival, the rebellion of 1745, Salem in witchcraft days, George Fox's times, and New York in various phases from George II to Jefferson. She never aimed high; her style was faulty; her characters were convincing only when simple; yet she could tell a story in a way to attract and hold her readers.

But it is in the combination of her books and her life that Mrs. Barr deserves remembrance; for the latter had heroic passages. At thirty-nine she had borne nine children and written not a line; between forty and eighty her literary industry would have put a Trollope to shame. Born among busy weavers in Shipley, England, reared in her father's Methodist parsonage, turned among books at a precocious age, and otherwise irregularly educated, she taught for a time in a girls' school, and at nineteen married a young merchant of Glasgow. No other man, she wrote later, could have prepared her so for her work, for "no other could have given me the changes, the travel, the difficulties, the labor and sufferings which came to me." Young Barr failed, and she carried him and the babies to America. After long wanderings they settled in Texas, and though she combined her managerial wits with his, adversity dogged them. He wished to farm; and she dissuaded him. From Austin they removed to Galveston at the end of the Civil War, and there the yellow fever epidemic of 1867 caught them. Her husband and surviving sons died, and she came near succumbing. When three months later the ninth child was born and lived only a few days, Mrs. Barr, without money, with her daughters to support, with weakened health, might well have faltered. She opened a boarding house, and it failed. Thereupon she boldly started for New York, arriving without resources: "I had $5.18 in my purse. I had no relatives in America, no one I felt at liberty to ask assistance from. I stood absolutely alone in the battle of life, but I was confident that God and Amelia Barr were a multitude." So they proved when she found that people were eager to read what she could write, and that writing paid well. Her hard-working productivity was for years almost incredible. One of her novels she produced in five weeks, writing two or three articles each week besides. She frankly recognised that she was no poet, yet for nearly a score of years she made at least $1,000 a year from poetry alone.

Similar instances of heroic literary endeavor by women feeling the double spur of necessity and of literary impulse are not rare. One recalls Mrs. Stowe, who, baby on knee and harassed by household cares and her husband's illness, wrote incessantly. We think of Harriet Martineau, left by her father's death the mainstay of her family, deaf and infirm, writing books, pamphlets, articles one after another — essays, novels, treatises on political economy, children's books, travels, history, biography, philosophy, socialogy, and reviews—so industrious that a friend who saw her resting concluded at once that she was ill. Mrs. Oliphant cannot be forgotten. Her husband, an artist in weak health, died and left her without means in Italy, with three children to support. She turned to her pen, and with unceasing labor not only supported them, but in time offered a home and support also to her brother. Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth might be less often mentioned with a sneer were it remembered that she was thrown on her own resources in 1843 with two infants to support. Her writing began while she was teaching a public school of eighty for a pittance, nursing her own sick child, and forced by poverty to do her housework. The list might be indefinitely extended. In no field have women shown greater fortitude. Literary competition makes no allowance for handicaps, but like Mrs. Barr, many a woman has turned seeming loss to real advantage.

Sultan Uses Doubloons.

On the occasion of his recent visit to Britain, the Sultan of Zanzibar brought a number of Spanish gold doubloons to meet some of the expenses of his journey. Not being ordinary currency, the doubloons were taken to a city bank, and after some necessary formalities were exchanged into a more convenient coinage.

The coins, which are now being melted down, realized some $2,500, the intrinsic value of each doubloon being about $16.

The broker who handled them said: "The coins were in a fine state of preservation. They had doubtless been kept for many years in the royal treasury, as they were not in the least worn. I believe all the coins were of the same reign."

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

LEATHER IN FAVOR

Soft Suede Is Brought Out for Spring Jackets.

Pliable Material May Be Dyed in Seasonable Colors and Will Admit of Alluring Combinations.

The unheralded advent of leather coats in the autumn fashions gave the public a jolt and a surprise. It is whispered, writes a correspondent, that even the designers were not quite aware of the strength that the fashion would assume. Waistcoats of leather, jackets of leather and fur combined, were taken up by smart women in war work and remained as a street costume for peace activities.

The idea brought about a train of other ideas. Soft suede and pliable leather have been brought out for spring jackets. The suede is dyed in the spring colors, and one of new leaf-green which goes with a white crepe de chine skirt, is quite alluring. Such a combination is obviously intended for Southern usage, but the soft, black leather coats with bright linings are intended for the streets of big cities. They carry skirts of cheviot, serge and heavy silk jersey. The latter is again considered most desirable by well-dressed women.

VOGUE FOR DECORATIVE WORK

Combination of Braid and Embroidery Where All-Braid Embellishment Is Not Desirable.

When there is a considerable surface to be decorated, it is rather tedious and tiresome to embroider the whole thing. And so the vogue for combining both braid and embroidery is a fortunate one where the all-braid decoration is not desirable.

The braid part of the combination usually confines itself to soutache, and the embroidery is interspersed in long-stitch dabs. According to this method, the braiding need not take the form of intricate scroll work. As a matter of fact, the work is very much more effective when the design is simple and bold, for the intervening embroidery can then be quite large and so much more effective.

Large spirals "spoked" with long, straight stitches in silk or wool make very fetching decoration with silk soutache of a contrasting color. Then the zigzag treatment of soutache may be given more decorative value by introducing large dots between the turns, worked solid.

FLOWER HOLDERS FOR TABLE

Ivory-Colored Porcelain Makes Up Attractive Set for a Pleasing Centerpiece.

Several years ago, when sets of porcelain flower holders, which, linked together to form a great centerpiece, came in, they caused almost a dinner sensation. They seemed too much of a vogue to stay, but they are here still.

One such set that recently attracted attention is made of ivory-colored porcelain. There are several narrow, troughlike flower holders that, pushed together, form an irregular oblong in the center of the table. Small, short-stemmed flowers are arranged in masses in these dishes.

Then there are eight tall candlesticks to match, and they are grouped around the flower dishes. A mirror fits nicely into the space defined by the flower dishes, and of course reflects the flowers above and around it.

How They Breathe Under Ice.

The ability of a beaver to remain under water for a long time is really not so strange a problem as it looks. When a lake or pond is frozen over a beaver will come to the under surface of the ice to expel breath so that it forms a wide flat bubble. The air coming in contact with the ice and water is purified, and the beaver breathes it again. This operation he can repeat several times. The otter and muskrat do the same thing.

Climatic Changes Due to Man.

Tracing the climatic records of South Africa, J. M. Sim has reached the conclusion that the rainfall has not only diminished in the last century but has changed in character from soft soaking rains to torrential thunderstorms. Human influences—the destruction of forests and the ruining of the grass veld by burning—are believed to have been chiefly responsible for the changes.

Had Had His Fling.

Ted's mother has given him an allowance of ten cents a week, but she has tried to encourage him to save some of it as a matter of training. Last Saturday she asked him how much he had left. He looked rather chagrined at first and then finally confessed that he had spent it all. His mother appeared sorrowful, until Ted added with enthusiasm: "But, say I sure have lived like a prince for once."

We imported over $400,000,000 worth of goods or products from the United States last year. The C. T. C. thinks that by a little extra effort these could be produced in Canada.

The value of the British trade preference to goods from within the Empire now actually working, means millions of dollars to Canada. "The Canadian public apparently have not grasped the significance of this yet," is one statement made to the Canadian Trade Commission.

BREWING OF BEER IN U. S. WILL BE STOPPED MAY 1

All Brewers Who Ignore This Law Will Be Severely Dealt With by Justice Department.

Washington, April 28.—The Internal Revenue Bureau stated that brewing of beer will end May 1 under the Food Conservation Law of November 21, 1918. This prohibition will affect all beer, including that now being produced by many manufacturers, containing 2¾ per cent. alcohol, for which the Internal Revenue authorities now issue revenue stamps without having decided specifically whether this production violates existing laws and regulations.

A. Mitchell Palmer, United States Attorney General said that if brewers are engaged in the manufacture of beer after next Thursday action will be taken against them by the Department of Justice.

"The surest avenue toward temperance of a people in lieu of ardent spirits which tend so rapidly toward habits of intoxication, is the use of mild and uninjurious beverages produced by a brewery," declared Elihu Root before Federal Judge A. H. Hand Thursday in his argument against the Government's motion to dismiss the suit in equity of the Jacob Hoffmann Brewing Co.

The brewing company is seeking to restrain the United States officials from preventing it from continuing its plan to manufacture beer containing 2¾ per cent of alcohol.

Continuing, Mr. Root said:

"The business which we ask to be protected from ruin is not only a lawful business, but it is also a temperance business in the judgment of the largest proportion of peoples of the civilized world."

Mr. Root contended that the law of Nov. 21, 1918, was enacted in excess of the war powers and that no war power could be exercised which itself transcended the constitution.

William D. Guthrie, who preceded Mr. Root cited authorities to show that even the President was not above the law, if he abused his power, and that the breweries were only exercising their just prerogatives in attempting to restrain United States Attorney Francis G. Caffey from enforcing the law.

Fruits Stand First.

Fruits have the honor of being most widely diffused geographically, grown with the kindliest care, and of being first used by man as food. They still enter largely into the regimen of the cultivated nations, and are the fairest of civilizers. . . . The use of them is of such universal importance that we cannot subsist in any plenty or elegance without them. And everywhere beside the cultivated man grows the orchard, to intimate his refinement in those excellences most befitting his race.—A. Bronson Alcott.

PREMIER DENIES EXTENSION STORY

NO AGREEMENT WITH LEADER PROUDFOOT AS TO ANOTHER SESSION.

Toronto, April 28.—"The statement in the World on Saturday, that there is Proudfoot, the Leader of the Opposition, and the Prime Minister for another session of the Legislature, is without the slightest foundation in fact."

The above statement was made by Premier Hearst. Sir William pointed out that the Extension Act passed at the session of the House last year made it quite clear as to the fixing of the extended life of the present Legislature, but further noted that this act did not do away with the reserved right of the Lieutenant-Governor to dissolve the Assembly before that time.

Terms of Extension.

The extension Act passed over a year ago was agreed upon by both parties, and declares:

"Notwithstanding anything in the Legislative Assembly Act, for in any other act contained, the present Assembly shall continue, and it shall not be necessary to hold any general election to choose members of the Assembly until after the close of the present war, the return of the Canadian forces serving overseas with the military and naval services of Canada and Great Britain and her allies, and until one year has elapsed and a session of the Legislature has been held after a date certified by the Minister of Militia and Defence as declared by the Governor-in-Council to be the date of the return of the last of such forces transported from overseas by the Government of Canada.

"Nothing in this act shall affect or amend the provisions of section 5 of the Legislative Assembly Act nor be taken or deemed to affect or abridge any prerogative of the Crown or the power of the Lieutenant-Governor to dissolve the Assembly at an earlier period than that mentioned in section 2."

William Proudfoot, K.C., leader of the Opposition, is spending the week-end at the Hotel Medea at Mount Clements, Mich. He will return to Toronto on Tuesday night. Over the long distance telephone The Telegram read the seven-column headline which appeared this morning: "Hearst and Proudfoot Agree to Prolong Life of Ontario Parliament."

"That is all rot," said Mr. Proudfoot.

"There has been no hint of an election in the fall," he continued. "No member, to my knowledge, left for his home with the idea that this would be the last session of the Legislature. The enumeration to be made for the referendum will be used for the next election, and further than that, it would be necessary to discuss the Election Act at the next sitting. There has not even been a hint around the buildings that an election would follow the referendum."

WARD PATTERSON ELECTED VICE-PRESIDENT OF LEAGUE

Players in City Amateur Teams Are Eligible to Play the Central Ontario Series.

Mr. Ward Patterson was elected vice-president of the O.B.A.A. at the annual meeting, held in Toronto Saturday. Jake Solomon was in attendance on behalf of the Central Ontario League and managed, with Mr. Patterson's aid, to work through a resolution permitting players in the city league to play in the Central Ontario organization.

Thirty delegates attended meeting and many points of interests were discussed, chief of these being the new residence rule. The delegates were enthusiastic over the prospects and expressed the opinion that this would be a banner season for amateur baseball.

Three new leagues, the Inter-county League, the Guelph Amateur Baseball League, and the Central Ontario League and the Inter-county League be al- The Lake Shore League also applied, but their request was referred to the incoming executive. The Kitchener Town League and the Oshawa Town League dropped out of membership.

Frank Robbins of Hamilton was elected President, to succeed W. J. Smith of Toronto. He was unopposed. Mr. Robbins in his address pointed out the many problems which have cropped up and he appealed to the delegates to deal with these in a manner which would further the interests of baseball.

Players Given Privilege.

Ward Patterson of Peterborough, made a motion that players in the town leagues in the various towns comprising the Central Ontario League and the Inter-county League be allowed to play both for their town league team and also the town team in the Central Ontario League and the Inter-county League. This motion found favor, but the proviso was made that players coming under this rule declare on or before July 15 which team they intend to play with in the event of reaching the finals, and that the rule hold good only for one year.

An amendment to make the annual membership fee ten dollars for associations or leagues whose membership is made up of clubs representing more than one town or city and five dollars for leagues whose membership is made up of clubs in one town or city was passed.

Another amendment that was adopted provides that no player shall sign a certificate in any league after July 15 and must have taken part in at least three games in order to be eligible to play in the Ontario championship finals. Players transferring from one club to another must be properly released before signing a second certificate.

Rules of Qualification.

No player shall compete in the semi-final or final games who has not been a bona fide and continuous resident of the city, town, or village to which his club belongs since the first of January next preceding the date of the game. Players residing in a village or town where there is no organized amateur baseball club may play in the nearest affiliated league to their home. Returned or discharged soldiers may play in the town or city in which they enlisted or in their home town.

This last bylaw does not go into effect until next season.

The association decided to allow military hospital patients and returned soldiers to compete in the championships even if they arrived after July 15, providing they have played three games for the team they play with in the finals.

The election of officers resulted as follows.—Honorary President, J. J. Norris, Toronto; President, Frank Robbins, Hamilton; First Vice-President, Ald. J. J. Kelly, Brantford; Second Vice-President, G. Patterson, Peterborough; Secretary-Treasurer, Geo. Walker, Toronto.

A Flying Man's Queer Mistake.

A certain young flying officer once had his leg pulled very badly over the way he flew the Channel. Orders were given him to fly to France from a certain place in the south. Following the coast to the east he looked for the corner where the direction changed, indicating that he was at the Straits of Dover. Somehow or other he missed the corner and went on along the coast. Although his compass showed him that he was going north, he decided it was wrong, and went ahead till he did come to a corner. There he struck out across the sea, and after the regulation twenty minutes or so found himself over land again. Flying on he at last came to some tents, and seeing a field near them he came down to ask the way. A number of peasants arrived on the spot and surrounded his machine. He spoke to them in his best French, to which they replied in some incomprehensible language which he imagined was Flemish. At last up came an unmistakably British sergeant with a couple of men with fixed bayonets, and as soon as they were within earshot the officer called out, "I say, sergeant, can you tell me the way to our headquarters? I can't make these beggars understand French." "French!" bawled the sergeant, "I should bloomin' well think not! Why, you're about four miles from —— (mentioning a town in the eastern counties), and they thought you were a German, and sent to fetch us. Lucky you didn't try to get away, or they'd 'ave 'it you on the 'ead with a 'oe." What had happened was that the officer had flown the Thames at its mouth.

The Musk Rat.

The musk rat, as its name would indicate, is a species of rat. It is found nowhere but in America. Its body is shaped like that of the ordinary rat, but instead of the short, close hair of the land species, it is covered by a thick reddish-brown fur, and because it lives much in the water it has webbed toes. Although very awkward on land, it is lively and playful in water, and is a great swimmer and diver.

Evolution of Clothes Terms.

Dozens and dozens of clothes terms there are that indicate the evolution of clothes among our ancestors. Petticoat, which has been used as a not very respectful synonym for women in general, was a garment for men originally, and was the undercoat worn beneath the heavier overcoat. It was fairly long, and eventually the word came to be applied to the garments that evolved from this "petti," or small coat.

Beliefs Concerning Sneezing.

According to Aristotle, if a man was sick sneezing once forbode his death, but sneezing twice his recovery. If the patient was a woman the rule worked the opposite way. A traveler in the woods was threatened with an attack by brigands if he sneezed once, while sneezing twice presaged a happy journey. As a rule, the person sneezing twice in succession will be lucky, but unlucky if it occurs once.

Crab in Oyster Shell.

A perfectly formed hardshell crab about the size of the end of a person's thumb was once found in an oyster shell. The crab had evidently been swallowed by the oyster, but presumably the crab proved too much for the oyster, as there was no oyster in the shell when it was opened.

Peru Sparsely Populated.

A territory on the Pacific ocean approximately 1,400 miles in length and 700 miles in width is occupied by Peru. The territory extends over 679,600 square miles, with a population that is estimated at 4,500,000, or, approximately, 6,6 to the square mile.

For the Typist.

Instead of adjusting the operator's chair to the height of the table on which a typewriter is placed, a typist may now have an adjustable table. The top of the new stand may be raised or lowered like the top of a piano stool.

To Soften Paint Brushes.

If paint brushes have been allowed to get dry and hard, they can be softened in the following manner: Heat some vinegar to boiling point and allow the brushes to simmer in it for about ten minutes. Then wash them well in strong soapsuds.

PEOPLE OF FIUME DECLARE FOR UNION WITH ITALIANS

How Wilson's Favorite Principle of Self-Determination Would Work Out in This Case.

Montreal, April 28.—The Italian-Canadian Committee for the defence of redeemed Italy sends out the following statement upon the Adriatic question:

The Canadian public and press will never be in a position to understand fully and justly Italy's aspiration upon Fiume unless they are told the fundamental reasons for the union of this latter city to her mother country, Italy.

It may be true that Fiume was not included in the treaty of London of April, 1915, but it is also true that Italy renounced to Fiume because of the pressure from Russia the protector of the Slavic race, and in order to please that nation which at that time was one of the Allies. In the same way Italy renounced to redeem Italyn Malta, Gozzo, Comino, Cominotto. Corsica ad ntziN.azCMBMBMBM to, Corsica and Nizza, because both England and France were her Allies and so Italy thought it just and kind to please them. But now Russia is no longer our Ally (she is rather our enemy), and Italy cannot see why she should be bound to renounce to a purely Italian city with the very object of favoring an enemy both in his main race—Russia—and in his Croatian branch.

Secondly and most important of all there is the definite, unmistakeable will of Fiume herself to be united to Italy. The committee for the defence of redeemed Italy wants to emphasize this point as much and as loud as possible, because this is entirely neglected here in Canada and it is almost unknown by Canadians Fiume, on October 30th, 1918, (namely five days before Austria collapsed and surrendered to Italy) defying all further persecutions and reprisals so common under Austrian rule, declared her will to be united to Italy with the following solemn proclamation, for which the committee urges the widest circulation in the Canadian press:

Proclamation.

"The Italian National Council of Fiume, meeting this day in full assembly, declares that, by virtue of the right by which all peoples have been raised to national independence and liberty, the city of Fiume (which hitherto has been a separated Italian national municipality) affirms for herself also the right of self-determination.

"On the basis of said right the Italian National Council proclaims the city of Fiume united to her mother country, Italy.

"The Italian National Council declares merely as temporary the condition of affairs realized on October 29, 1918, puts her determined action under the protection of America, and waits for the sanction of it by the Peace Congress."

The Deputy of Fiume is at Paris to ask the Peace Conference to recognize the fait accompli that Fiume is Italian according to her will, and to show President Wilson how self-respecting people put in practice the principles they enunciate.

The National Council of Fiume has wired the Peace Conference as follows: "In the name of the people of Fiume, we declare that our city cannot accept any solution of the issue, other than that of uniting it to Italy."

Artificial Eyes.

During the year 1840 Professor Boissoneau of France created what could honestly be called an eye that was human in appearance. The method of manufacturing was practically the same as that employed at the present time, with the exception that in the intervening years great improvements have been made in imitating the colors, that are almost lifelike in their effect. Besides, many improvements have been made in the shapes, which are practically molded to conform to the socket and fill all the available space.

Use Time to Advantage.

Time, which never stands still itself, will not allow any one of us to stand still. It delivers into our hands sixty minutes every hour and compels us to dispose of them in some way. Whether we will or not, a constant accounting has to be rendered. ODDFELLOWS ATTEND EVENING SERVICE AT ST. JAMES' CHURCH

Over Four Hundred in Line With Col. J. W. Miller as Marshal—Eloquent Sermon by Rev. A. E. Scott.

Last night's service in St. James' Methodist church was of great interest, celebrating as it did the anniversary of the establishment of the church and the centennial of the institution in North America of the Independent Order of Oddfellows.

There were 250 members of the local fraternity attended the service. The choir was composed of members of the I.O.O.F. for the occasion and the minister, Mr. A. E. Scott, of Toronto, preached and impressive sermon, dealing with the brotherhood of man.

Headed by the Salvation Army band with Col. Miller acting as marshal of the parade, the Oddfellows marched from their lodge rooms on George street to St. James' church which was crowded to capacity, many people being turned away.

Rev. Benj. Greatrix, pastor of St. James', welcomed the mayor and aldermen of the city, who had accepted the invitation to be present at the service. He extended greetings on behalf of himself and the congregation to the visiting brethren upon the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of their Order in North America.

Excellent music was furnished by the special choir, with Mr. Nichols at the organ. There was a duet by Brothers Smith and Wheeler and a quartette by Brothers Baldry, Harstone, Turner and Lee.

Rev Mr. Scott chose as his text the following words from St. Matthew chapter 25, 40th verse: "Verily, verily I say unto you inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of these the least of my brethren ye have done it unto me."

It refers to the final day of judgment when the just and the unjust will be marshalled on either side of the throne and will be dealt with according to their deserts, and when the Lord will commend the former for the sympathy and assistance they have extended in their lifetime upon this earth to himself by succoring the broken in spirit and the needy.

The pastor held that their is two classes of prayers, neither of which, as a whole, carry out the teachings of Christianity. The first is that section of a congregation which looks to the preacher for an address which will stir their emotions in a superficial manner and who are ready to weep upon the slightest provocation over the hardships and sorrows of the world but who never get any further than that stage going forth from the church day after day and failing to carry out the teaching of the Christian faith by assisting in the alleviation of any of the suffering of the unfortunate ones.

Another class is composed of those people who are outside the church but who believe that they are interpreting the teachings of the Christian religion aright if they wear a kindly veneer. He did not belittle the good accomplished by these big hearted men and women but reminded the congregation that Christianity means faith as well as work and that the good works should be prompted by the heart and not through a desire to appear philanthropic in the eyes of the world.

Brotherhood was made the final test of the judgment, continued the speaker. Every man upon this earth who is in sorrow or in want is Christ's representative, and in aiding them, you aid Him. Here he referred to the story of Lazarus and the rich man and the reversal of their positions in the world that followed.

The wickedness of the rich man was that he did not have eyes to see Christ in the homely garb of the unfortunate man who called upon him for assistance.

Mr. Scott maintained that there was no man so abandoned that he did not bear some trace of the Heavenly Father and as practical sympathy and helpfulness is the essence of Christianity the needy of this world had a claim upon their more fortunate brothers, which should be honored.

Jesus, in his parable of the good Symaritan, taught that one's neighbor is the man who is in trouble and sorrow and while the fact that a man is a heretic very often dried up the sympathy which Christian people would otherwise feel he felt that the lot of the starving heretic would be preferable to that of so-called Christians who would let him go without assistance because he did not adhere to the Christian faith.

Mr. Scott felt that we should have individual contact with the sick and the sorrowing. He did not express any admiration for the modern method of visiting the sick by committee but commended the man to man principle.

In concluding, the preacher praised the work of the Oddfellows as a great organization which was carrying out a noble work in the world by interpreting correctly the duties of fraternalism. He stated that in this order a man could protect his family through insurance which would cost him the price of two cigars a day and he was sure that the man who attended church regularly and made a parade of his religion otherwise was not a whole-hearted Christian if he did not provide for his family in the event of death.

BISHOP OF TORONOT HELD CONFIRMATION SERVICES IN THREE CHURCHES.

Confirmation services were held in three of the Anglican churches of the city yesterday, His Lordship Bishop Sweeney, of Toronto, officiating.

In the morning at St. George's church a small class of candidates were confirmed and the chancel of the edifice consecrated by His Lordship, who commented upon the choir and general order of the service very favorably.

In St. John's church in the afternoon at 4 o'clock a number of members were received into the church as communicants. The Bishops' address was based upon "The Vine and the Branches."

In the evening at All Saints' church the Bishop administered the rite of confirmation to fifty-eight candidates including twenty-seven men and boys, and thirty-one women and girls, who were presented by the rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb. The beautiful and impressive ceremony was witnessed by a congregation that taxed the church to its capacity. The Bishop's text was taken from Mathew VI., 19-20, "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth where moth and rust doth corrupt and where thieves break through and steal, but lay up for yourselves treasures on heaven where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt and where thieves do not break through and steal."

During the offertory Mr. G. Chandler sang "Be Thou Faithful Unto Death and I Will Give Thee a Crown of Life."

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful drak shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

CHURCH CHOIRS SET NEW PRECEDENT IN SERVICE

Murray Street and St. Andrew's Singers and Organists Exchange Places Last Night.

A new departure was noted in local church history yesterday when the choirs of the Murray Street Baptist Church and St. Andrew's Church exchanged places for the evening service. Universal church brotherhood, as well as the form of church union now in contemplation was advanced another stage by the innovation. The precedent established is likely to be generally adopted by local churches in the future.

Every department of the Baptist Church choir was preceded to its new field of endeavor last night by an excellent reputation, which was fully sustained in each case—Miss Ida Sanderson, the accomplished organist, Mr. Asa Huycke, the skilled leader, and the choir itself as one of the best trained musical organizations in the city.

The new surroundings and music did not dismay the visitors. The first selection with which they were confronted was that good old Presbyterian song of faith, the 23rd Psalm, which they rendered as though to the manor born, as if the metrical translations of the works of the minstrel king were in their own books of praise.

Two of the special numbers rendered, besides the offertory anthem, were a duet from "Love Triumphant," by Miss Ida Lynn and Mr. O. M. Steer, and a solo, "Peace, Be Still," by Mr. Huycke, who was never heard to better effect.

At the conclusion of the service, Mr. Rowand, the pastor, thanked the choir for their splendid work and said that the exchange of musical services could not fail to bring the two denominations into a closer unity.

At Murray Street Church.

At five minutes to seven o'clock last night Mr. Treneer, the organist of St. Andrews, took his place at the Murray Street organ as naturally as though he has been doing the same fifty Sundays every year.

At seven o'clock the choir of over thirty voices answered the call of the bazaar and coming to the choir gallery, led the congregation in singing the doxology.

The verdict of all who were present was that that the entire service was an inspiration. Whoever was responsible for the idea of "a change of choirs" has certainly started what will in the future from time to time be practiced by all the churches. This pioneer in praise polity has put all the churches of the city under tribute to him.

There were those present who had never heard St. Andrew's choir and they left the building conscious that the Scotch kirk had something in the line of music apart from the immortal "Psalms of David."

The balance of the parts was manifest in the rendering of "Hark, Hark My Soul," while the difficult solo parts taken by Miss McLaren and Mr Farr were superbly rendered.

At the offertory Miss McLaren sang "The Vesper Prayer," by Brackett, and after the sermon the duett by Miss McLaren and Mr. Farr, "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," could not have been more appropriate or helpful.

The sermon was based on the first verse of the twentieth Psalm, "The Lord hear Thee in the day of trouble, the name of the God of Jacob defend Thee," and while Mr. Webb told his congregation that he had no idea of what music was to be presentd, nor had the choir any hint of his subject, the whole evening could not have been better arranged if the leader of St. Andrew's choir and the pastor of Murray Street church had been in conference for hours.

The playing of Mr. Treneer is beyond praise. When Ruskin said, "That we 'play' instruments rather than 'work' them because it is assumed that there is soul pleasure for the one capable of producing these harmonies and not drudgery," he was surely thinking of such masters as the organist of St. Andrew's whose sould is seen and felt as the fingers travel over the organ keys. Th choir from "the hill" will always be welcome visitors at the Stone church on Central Park.

"Their Name Liveth for Evermore"

RUDYARD KIPLING has sent to the London Times a statement with regard to the work being carried on by the Imperial War Graves Commission, of which he is a member. The origin and development of the commission is simple. In the first days of the war the different armies created special commissions whose duty it was to register and tend the graves of the soldiers fallen in action, and, when possible, to send photographs of them to relatives. Later a National Committee was formed, and on the suggestion of the Prince of Wales this was expanded into an Imperial Commission to mark and tend the graves of the soldiers of the Empire wherever they had fallen. All parts of the Empire, says Mr. Kipling, have generously and unreservedly promised to bear their share of the expense. As the author says, these graves are to be found as vast cities of the dead in France and Flanders, where more than half a million of British soldiers sleep forever, and as scattered mounds in Africa and Asia, in jungle glades, on far-away islands, amid desert sands and desolate ravines. Wherever they are they will be identified and cared for by agents of the commission.

It was felt desirable that at the head of each grave should be some memorial as lasting as the art of man could design, and the expression of some central idea. To this end Sir Frederick Kenyon was engaged to make a report, and it has been decided on his suggestion that in each cemetery shall stand a Cross of Sacrifice, and an altar-like Stone of Remembrance, and that the headstones of the graves, officers and men, should be of uniform size and shape. Stone crosses to succeed the temporary wooden crosses were at first suggested, but crosses of the smallness necessary because of the nearness of the graves to each other do not allow sufficient space for the men's names and the inscriptions, and are, by their shape, too fragile and too subject to the action of frost and weather for enduring use. Plain headstones, therefore, measuring two feet six inches by one foot three inches have been chosen, upon which the cross or other emblem of the dead man's faith could be inscribed, together with his regimental badge, his name and number and other necessary data. In cases where the relatives desire to add to the formal record they will be permitted to do so at their own expense for lettering, so long as the letters do not exceed 65.

In each cemetery there will be erected a building which will contain a register of each grave with the birthplace, age and parentage of the dead recorded. In honor of the Indian troops who fought in France in 1914-16 a Hindu temple and a Mohammedan mosque will be built. It is also intended to rear special memorials to commemorate the part borne by particular armies and divisions in particular actions, such, for instance, as the Canadians at Ypres, the Australians at Amiens, the South Africans at Delville Wood and the British at the breaking of the Hindenburg line; and no doubt there will be a particularly glorious monument to the Old Contemptibles. Mr. Kipling says that it is hoped that the art of the Empire will give its services and advise in the designing of these memorials. He lays emphasis upon the fact that so far the work of the commission has only been blocked out, and that advice and suggestion will be welcomed from the public.

After so many years of fighting over densely populated and civilized countries like France and Belgium, it is inevitable that there must be single graves and groups in positions where, when the life of the land goes forward again, they cannot be reached or tended. Some lie in what were once town or village thoroughfares and will be so again; others by the side of railway station and freight-yards, houses, or factories, in arable or pasture fields, parks, gardens, and the like. The objections to leaving these graves where they are need not be dwelt upon. No precautions will save them from being encroached upon or obliterated in the course of time. There is, moreover, a strong sentiment among all ranks that such scattered graves look lonely; and the instinct of the Services demands that those who fell by the wayside should be gathered in to rest with the nearest main body of their companions. That is what the commission, with all due care and reverence, propose to do. In view of the enormous number of our dead in France alone, the removal of bodies to England would be impossible, even were there a general desire for it. But the overwhelming majority of relatives are content that their kin should lie — officers and men together—in the countries that they have redeemed. The Allied nations, too, have freely given their land to our dead for ever, and that offer has been accepted by the Governments. To allow exhumation and removal in the few cases where it has been suggested would, it seemed to the commission, be undesirable if only on the principle of equality, and, judging from what many gallant fighters have said and written before they in turn fell, a violation in all but a few special cases, of the desire of the dead themselves.

Saving Fuel.

The campaign among the railroads of the United States for conservation of fuel may result in an annual saving of 10,000,000 tons of coal and 840,000 gallons of oil.

THE CHANNEL TUNNEL.

Old Scheme To Be Carried Out at Last.

Already plans are being prepared for the carrying out of one of the greatest engineering enterprises ever undertaken by man—the boring of a tunnel to connect France with England—and it will doubtless be begun as soon as the mess of war has been cleaned up.

The digging of such a tunnel beneath the English Channel, making direct undersea communication between Dover and Calais, has been advocated for a century. Beginnings of it were actually made a few years ago at both ends. But the project was defeated by the fear of conservative Britishers lest the hole under the strait be used by the French, in case of war, for an invasion of England.

Of course, this was a foolish idea; for nothing could be easier in an emergency than to block the tunnel, or even to blow up a section of it, rendering it impassable.

The great war, however, has taught a lesson. If the tunnel had existed, troops and supplies could have been sent through it from England to France in an endless stream, safe from submarines or other enemy attack, while releasing much-needed ships for other purposes. Wounded and sick soldiers would have been carried back by the same route without peril from the murderous Hun.

Incidentally—and by no means of least importance — England would have been wholly safe from the starvation which the Huns hoped to inflict upon her by the operations of their submarines.

The mistake is not to be perpetuated. The tunnel is to be dug, and in accordance with plans long presumably, with some modifications.

If the floor of the Channel were of soft material—say, of silt, such as often furnishes the make-up of river bottoms to a great depth—the engineering problem involved might be one of utmost difficulty. But, happily, the fact is quite otherwise. Currents flowing between the North Sea and the Atlantic keep the bottom of the strait scoured clean, and its floor is of solid chalk—stuff almost impervious to water and easy to bore through. This chalk stratum is more than 200 feet thick.

The distance from Dover to Calais is only twenty-one miles. But actually the tunnel will be thirty-two miles long, connecting the Dover-London railway with the Calais-Paris railway, and thus enabling a passenger to get aboard a train in the British capital and travel direct to Paris, dismounting from the coach at the station in that city. Electric locomotives will do the hauling.

It is estimated that no more than four years will be required to complete the project, digging from both ends.

The total cost is reckoned at $80,000,000, and the expectation is that the investment will yield at least six per cent. per annum.

Globule Magic.

By a simple lantern experiment it has been shown how a drop of water is, though one of the commonest, also one of the most marvellous and interesting things. The shape of a drop is due to the condition of the surface, which is in a state of tension, and possesses the properties of an elastic skin, like a piece of thin stretched India rubber. This was demonstrated by a thin pieces of brass, eight times the weight of water, floating on the surface and stretching the "skin" downwards. Every drop would be round like a soap bubble but for its own weight within this skin. To prove this, several liquids were used, "the most expensive being ordinary golden syrup, which was only obtained for the lecture by dodging the controller." It was, for instance, much more difficult to obtain than orthotoluidine, though appearances and orthography were in its favor. Condensed milk and glycerine were also used.

The phenomena attendant upon the breaking away of drops from the end of a tube in air could not be observed by the eye owing to the rapidity of the action, but by allowing the drop to form and fall in another liquid almost as dense, all the details might be observed at leisure. Thus by forming drops of orthotoluidine in water at 15 deg. C., the varying shapes assumed by the hanging drop, the drawing out of the neck before the partition, and the invariable formation of a droplet from the neck were plainly seen.

The Obvious Answer.

They had chummed up in hospital and were discussing the virtues of their respective wives, according to London Answers. Presently one of them explained that his wife had been a Miss Mary Wilson. "And a fine girl, too," he added enthusiastically, in praise of his absent spouse. "Miss Mary Wilson!" chuckled the other. "Oh!" "What, d'you know her then?" asked the proud husband. "I should think I did! I remember one day, when we were out boating, and we came to an island where we landed. 'Now, Mary, m'dear,' I said, 'either you kiss me or we both drown!' " "And d-did you kiss her?" gasped the husband, in jealous fury. "Was she drowned?" asked the other slowly.

"Mr. Speaker."

An English election story is told of Mr. J. W. Lowther, who has filled the Speaker's chair in the British House of Commons with distinction for thirteen years. He was once canvassing for election to Parliament when he accosted a farmer one day, and adopted sweet persuasive measures to the usual end. "Vote for you? I would sooner vote for the devil."

"But supposing your friend doesn't stand," said the canvasser, suavely, "will you give me your vote in that event?"

Great Riches Contained In Famous "Pitch Lake" On Island of Trinidad

EVERY year 300,000 tons of asphalt are taken from the famous "pitch lake" on the island of Trinidad. This has been going on for a very long time, supplying material for the paving of streets all over the world; yet the quantity of asphalt remaining in the lake has not been the least bit diminished.

It is one of the wonders of the world; and scientists of late have been making a special study of it, in an effort to find out the origin of the deposit and why and how it renews itself.

The lake is nearly circular in shape, three miles in circumference, and more than 140 feet deep. To sound it further has been impracticable because the stuff down below is so soft that the drills would not "stay put."

It really is a lake, in no way different from any other, except that it is of asphalt instead of water. Waves it has, and they are in motion, washing up on its shores; but one cannot see them move. A chip thrown into the middle of the lake may be cast up on shore a year or two later.

The surface looks like an old, broken-down pavement, full of cracks and depressions, with pools of water here and there and occasional clumps of vegetation that has sprouted from bits of soil. Imagine the hottest place on earth—for Trinidad is all of that—and figure to yourself a neglected area of asphalt paving extending over 114 acres. You will thus get the picture.

The stuff is too gummy and tough for excavating by machine, so it has to be dug out with picks and loaded on cars that carry it to the shore of the lake. Thence it is transported half a mile to the seashore by bucket conveyers and dumped into ships.

In the hold of the ship it soon settles into a gummy solid, on the voyage, so that it has to be dug out with picks again. Too soft to be handled as a solid, and too solid to be dealt with as a fluid, it is one of the most difficult of substances to manage. Delivered at a refinery, it is melted by high heat, and the dirt and vegetable matter, being lighter, rise to the surface. These extraneous matters being removed, it is ready for paving purposes.

The island of Trinidad is off the northeasternmost point of South America, being separated from the coast of Venezuela by a strait six miles wide. It belongs to Great Britain, and the American company that "farms" the asphalt pays to the British Government a royalty of so much per ton.

When the sun is hot, the surface of the lake is so soft that a light footfall leaves an impression. Indeed, one's feet, even though shod, are scorched. Near the centre the stuff bubbles up through the crust in a liquid state.

There is much petroleum under the island, and it is of a kind that has asphalt as a base. When oils of this asphaltic character are distilled, various elements more or less volatile pass off in the process, leaving the asphalt behind. The theory now accepted is, therefore, that the "pitch lake" is in effect a natural refinery of crude oil—more accurately speaking, a residue of a natural refining process.

Its material, incidental to this refining, is continually resupplied from underground; and this is why there is no diminution of the quantity of asphalt in the lake, even though 300,000 tons are taken out of it annually. It has an outlet to the sea, through which there would be a steady flow but for this withdrawal of its material.

"I had r[illegible] area of eternal ice when my port propeller jammed, and I dropped to the ground to make repairs. Before I knew it the air was black with fliers, and a hundred of these Black Pirates were leaping to the ground all about me.

"With drawn swords they made for me, but before I went down beneath them they had tasted of the steel of my father's sword, and I had given such an account of myself as I know would have pleased you had you been there to witness it.

"A prisoner, I was taken to the very temple of Issus itself and for looking on her was doomed to die within a year. She is nothing but an old dried up black bag wh[illegible] has made a goddess of."

slightly reduced our speed with the dawning of a sense of security, but now I took the helm once more, and we raced north again at terrific velocity.

"The next day we were flying over the land of Barsoom when something seemed to go amiss with the engine and we descended to a small hill in order to better make any necessary repairs. We had hardly descended when we heard the report of a gun from above us, and on looking upward we saw, just clearing the tops of the nearer hills, a great battleship swinging majestically through the air. As she drew nearer I could not suppress a wild cry of elation, for upon her bows I saw the device of Helium.

As Carthoris, Tars Tarkas and I stood gazing at the magnificent vessel, which meant so much to all of us, we saw a second and then a third top the summit of the hills and glide gracefully after their sister.

Now a score of one man air scouts were launching from the upper decks of the nearer vessel, and in a moment more were speeding in long, swift dives to the ground about us.

In another instant we were surrounded by armed sailors, and an officer stepped forward to address us when his eyes fell upon Carthoris.

With an expression of surprise [illegible] pleasure he sprang forward and, placing his hand upon the boy's shoulder, called him by name.

"Carthoris, my prince!" he cried. "Kaor! Kaor! Hor Vastus greets the son of Dejah Thoris, princess of Helium, and of her husband, John Carter. Where have you been, O my prince? All Helium has been plunged in sorrow. Terrible have been the calamities that have befallen your great grandsire's mighty nation since the fatal day that saw you leave our midst."

"Grieve not, my good Hor Vastus," cried Carthoris, "since I bring not back myself alone to cheer my mother's heart and the hearts of my beloved people, but also one whom all Barsoom loved best—her greatest warrior and her savior—John Carter, Prince of Helium!"

Hor Vastus turned in the direction indicated by Carthoris, and as his eyes fell upon me he almost collapsed from sheer surprise.

"John Carter!" he exclaimed, and then a sudden troubled look came into his eyes. "My prince," he started, "where hast thou"—

And then he stopped, but I knew the question that his lips dared not frame. The loyal fellow would not be the one to force from mine a confession of the terrible truth that I had returned from the bosom of Iss, the river of mystery, back from the shore of the sea of Korus and the valley Dor.

"Ah, my prince," he continued, as though no thought had interrupted his greeting, "that you are back is sufficient, and let Hor Vastus' sword have the high honor of being first at thy feet."

With these words the noble fellow unbuckled his scabbard and flung his sword upon the ground before me.

Could you know the customs and the character of red Martians you would appreciate the depth of meaning that that simple act conveyed to me and to all about us who witnessed it.

The thing was equivalent to saying: 'My sword, my body, my life, my soul are yours to do with as you wish. Until death and after death I look to you alone for authority for my every act. Be you right or wrong, your word shall be my only truth. Whoso raises his hand against you must answer to my sword."

It is the oath of fealty that men occasionally pay to a jeddak whose high character and chivalrous acts have inspired their enthusiastic love of his followers. Never had I known this high tribute paid to a lesser mortal.

There was but one response possible. I stooped and lifted the sword from the ground, raised the hilt to my lips, and then, stepping to Hor Vastus, I buckled the weapon upon him with my own hands.

"Hor Vastus," I said, placing my hand upon his shoulder, "you know best the promptings of your own heart. That I shall need your sword I have little doubt, but accept from John Carter upon his sacred honor the assurance that he will never call upon you to draw this sword other than in the cause of truth, justice and righteousness."

"That I knew, my prince," he replied, "ere ever I threw my beloved blade at thy feet."

As we spoke other fliers came and went between the ground and the battleship, and presently a larger boat was launched from above, one capable of carrying a dozen persons, perhaps, and dropped lightly near us. As she touched, an officer sprang from her deck to the ground, and, advancing to Hor Vastus, saluted.

"Kantos Kan desires that this party whom we have rescued be brought immediately to the deck of the Xavarian," he said.

As we approached the little craft I looked about for the members of my party and for the first time noticed that Thuvia was not among them.

Immediately Hor Vastus dispatched a dozen air scouts in as many directions to search for her. It could not be possible that she had gone far since we had last seen her. We others stepped to the deck of the craft that had been sent to fetch us and a moment later were upon the Xavarian.

The first man to greet me was Kantos Kan himself. My old friend had won to the highest place in the navy of Helium, but he was still to me the same brave comrade who had shared with me the privations of a Warhoon dungeon, the terrible atrocities of the great games and later the dangers of our search for Dejah Thoris within the hostile city of Zodanga.

Then I had been an unknown wanderer upon a strange planet and he a simple padwar in the navy of Helium. Today he commanded all Helium's great terrors of the skies, and I was a prince of the house of Tardos Mors, Jeddak of Helium.

He did not ask me where I had been. Like Hor Vastus, he, too, dreaded the truth and would not be the one to wrest a statement from me. That it must come some time he well knew, but until it came he seemed satisfied to know that I was with him once more.

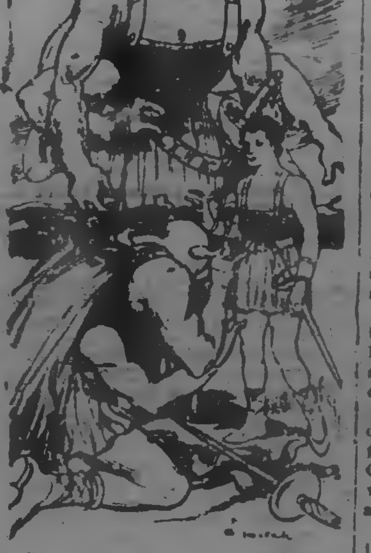
He greeted Carthoris and Tars Tarkas with the keenest delight, but he asked neither where he had been. He could scarcely keep his hands off the boy.

"You do not know, John Carter," he said to me, "how we of Helium love this son of yours. It is as though all the great love we bore his noble father and his poor mother had been centered in him. When it became known that he was lost 10,000,000 people wept."

"What mean you, Kantos Kan," I whispered, "by 'his poor mother'?" for the words had seemed to carry a sinister meaning which I could not fathom.

He drew me to one side.

"For a year," he said, "ever since Carthoris disappeared, Dejah Thoris has grieved and mourned for her lost boy. The blow of years ago when you did not return from the atmosphere plant was lessened to some extent by the duties of motherhood, for your son was born that very night.



He Flung His Sword Upon the Ground Before Me.

"That she suffered terribly, that all Helium knew, for did not all Helium suffer with her the loss of her lord?

"But with the boy gone there was nothing left, and after expedition upon expedition returned with the same hopeless tale of no clew as to his whereabouts, our beloved princess drooped lower and lower until all who saw her felt that it could be but a matter of days ere she went to join her loved ones within the precincts of the valley Dor.

"As a last resort Mors Kajak, her father, and Tardos Mors, her grandfather, took command of two mighty expeditions and a month ago sailed away to explore every inch of ground in the northern hemisphere of Barsoom.

"For two weeks no word has come back from them, but rumors were rife that they had met with a terrible disaster and that all were dead.

"About this time Zat Arras renewed his importunities for her hand in marriage. He has been forever after her since you disappeared.

"She hated him and feared him, but with both her father and grandfather gone Zat Arras was very powerful, for he is still Jed of Zodanga, to which Mors appointed him after you had refused the honor.

"He had a secret audience with her six days ago. What took place none knows, but the next day Dejah Thoris had disappeared, and with her had gone a dozen of her household guard and body servants, including Sola, the green woman—Tars Tarkas' daughter, you recall.

"No word left they of their intentions, but it is always thus with those who go upon the voluntary pilgrimage from which none returns. We cannot think aught than that Dejah Thoris has sought the icy bosom of Iss and that her devoted servants have chosen to accompany her.

"Zat Arras was at Helium when she disappeared. He commands this fleet, which has been searching for her since. No trace of her have we found, and I fear that it be a futile quest."

CHAPTER X.

Under Arrest.

WHILE we talked Hor Vastus' fliers were turning to the Xavarian. Not one, however, had discovered a trace of Thuvia. I was much depressed over the news of Dejah Thoris' disappearance, and now there was added the further burden of apprehension concerning the fate of Thuvia.

I felt keen responsibility for the welfare of this girl, whom I believed to be the daughter of some proud Barsoomian house, and it had been my intention to make every effort to return her to her people.

I was about to ask Kantos Kan to prosecute a further search for her when a flier from the flagship of the fleet arrived at the Xavarian with an officer bearing a message to Kantos Kan from Arras.

My friend read the dispatch and then turned to me.

"Zat Arras commands me to bring our 'prisoners' before him. There is naught else to do. He is supreme in Helium, yet it would be far more in keeping with chivalry and good taste were he to come hither and greet the savior of Barsoom with the honors that are his due."

I smiled.

"You know full well, my friend," I said, "that Zat Arras hates me. Nothing would please him better than to humiliate me and then kill me. He has an excellent excuse. Let us go and see if he has the courage to take advantage of it."

Summoning Carthoris and Tars Tarkas, we entered the small flier with Kantos Kan and Zat Arras' officer and in a moment were stepping to the deck of Zat Arras' flagship.

As we approached the jed of Zodanga no sign of greeting or recognition crossed his face. Not even to Carthoris did he vouchsafe a friendly word. His attitude was cold, haughty and uncompromising.

"Kaor, Zat Arras," I said in greeting, but he did [illegible]

THEATRICAL

ALL STAR VAUDEVILLE AT GRAND THURSDAY, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

On account of previous bookings at the Grand the regular programme of Vaudeville and pictures will be presented on Thursday, Friday and Saturday this week instead of Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Wednesday.

The great favorite Norma Talmadge will be seen in her biggest success "Her Only Way," from the stage play of the same name. The star vaudeville bill will be headed by the famous Lind, in singing and dancing paintings. "Lind," is one of the world's most wonderful female impersonators, whose really remarkable camouflage has entertained and bewildered people in every section of the universe. Though "every inch a man" his form, attire, beauty, voice appearance and womanly eccentricities are unquestionably feminine and most decided deceptive.

"Lind" offers a most pretentious callclassical posing, terpsichorean and vocal novelty which is billed under the title of "Singing and Dancing Paintings," consisting of a series of beautiful character pictures posed in a massive frame, following each pose a characteristic dance emblematical of the subject pictured, is presented by this remarkable artist. Each study is marked by the most delicate and artistic attention, while the matter of costuming dignifies it as pre-eminent in its class. Such a wealth of costumes are provided for this act that it is not necessary to repeat them often in an engagement.

The offering stands so quite apart in the realm of vaudeville from the commonplace acts so familiar to the public, that the work of this splendid artist is assuredly the last word in an act peculiar to the genius of its originator. Lind not only poses well, but contrives to identify himself with each characterization, even more so then Eltinge and other leaders in this type of entertainment. Expert dancing and a singing voice requisite to the needs of the production are part of his equipment, special scenery and incidental music adds much to what can be truthfully called the best act of its kind yet seen in vaudeville. It is an attraction that will unquestionably prove the big drawing card of the season for it has all the elements that give the most complete satisfaction to the amusement seeker.

Foster & Foster, in the Volunteer Pianist, a man who besides being a comedian of exceptional ability is a pianist of international reputation and a woman with unusual personality who sings and does imitations comprise this team of entertainers who present a singing and talking skit entitled "The Volunteer Pianist," of the many comedy acts to be seen this season, none will perhaps provoke more genuine laughter and please more highly than this offering of Edward Minnie Foster.

The skit was built for laughing purposes and of course accentuates Ed. Foster's ability as a player of the piano; in the number he introduces his remarkable trick playing as well as furnishing a musical treat that will be most acceptable The skit has a thread of a story, but is somewhat of the surprise order that would hardly justify disclosing. You can, however, feel assured you are going to see something worth while. Something that will make you laugh out loud and something you cannot or do not hear often.

ED. in his comedy make up and Minnie beautifully costumed is a comparison justly worth a laugh and take my tip, be at the theatre and get that laugh for it's bound to last you many days for every time you think of him you absolutely have to grin. That's the kind of comedy act, Foster & Foster have, one of the "lasting" kind.

Vincent & Raymond will be seen in a delightfully interesting entertaining skit conceded to be one of the neatest and classiest offerings in vaudeville, which they bill under the title of "Names Don't Count" consisting of some exceedingly clever acting, good music, and a dialogue sparkling with epigrams and repartee with a clever little story woven through it.

Both members of this due are experienced vaudevillians, who thoroughly understand the wants of the public as regards a stock of amusement. Both are splendid singers [illegible] cross fire conversation that is seemingly endless of which there is no part that an audience would be willing to miss.

All their "patter" has a newness that is of that sparkly character that brings laughs. Their parodies are genuinely original and delightfully amusing. Their feature number is a travesty on "Family Affairs" representing the first month and two years after marriage that is a scream. It is cleverly acted and one of the best written travesties seen in many a day. The act as a whole is exceedingly well presented, refined and amusingly funny throughout.

A special Chaplin Comedy and Screen Magazine.

This is one of the best vaudeville bills ever presented in Peterborough and at prices to suit everybody, 10, 15. Matinees, 15c, 25c evenings.

Gus Hill's Artists At Grand Tonight

Gates and Morange, scenic painters of theatrical productions with a fame in New York as distinctive as that of the Metropolitan Opera House that has hung many of their canvasses, are the artists who painted the scenery for the season's greatest minstrel organization Gus Hill's Big Minstrels, to be seen at the Grand Opera House tonight.

AT THE GRAND TONIGHT

BILLIE BURKE, THE STAR

Recognized throughout the country as a comedienne of exceptional ability, Billie Burke is one of the most prominent motion picture stars in the country. She has gathered an immense clientele of admirers everywhere by her magnetism, artistry and charm. Her portrayals in manw successful Paramount pictures have accentuated the reputation she made on the legitimate stage and added immeasurably to her popularity as a star of the silent drama of the highest quality. In her latest photoplay "In Pursuit of Polly," she has a delightful role and one, doubtless, that will add greatly to her reputation for delicate characterization and splendid grasp of the requirements of the most difficult rales in the portrayal of which she excels.

At the Empire today and tomorrow.

Few Flowers in London.

Only princesses and profiteers wear flowers in London nowadays. Oh, and brides, of course, and one or two very popular actresses, but just folks no longer dream of buying them. Why, a big bunch of roses cost as much as a fur scarf, $25, and even a modest cluster of violets brings $3.

To the English this dearth of flowers is a real deprivation and no wonder. Most rooms are darkly papered, and even those originally light have grown dingy with the war, so a vase of flowers helped to dispel the winter gloom.

Women have invented all kinds of bright decorations for their dinner tables which have long since been guiltless of white cloths. Among the most successful of these are the bunches of silk oranges or tomatoes or grapes which are fastened to satin centre pieces edged with gold filigree [illegible] to simulate a golden dish. These were first introduced by a royal princess and the idea raged right over London. It takes exceptionally clever fingers and time, too, to make this satin fruit, so there is not much of it about.

Disabled soldiers have taken up the notion and make the most natural imitation, and somehow the men seem more clever than women in grouping their pieces though they usually need advice about color blending.

A table set of a centrepiece of grapes and plums on mauve satin edged with silver and individual doilies each with a tiny Della Robbi border of silken fruit all made by a soldier with one arm, sold at a recent bazaar for $50.

Chinese Method of Beckoning.

The Chinese do not beckon as we do, with the palm of the hand turned up, the finger curled and the index finger successively bending and straightening. They beckon with the fingers curled downwards, sweeping the whole hand vigorously back and forth.

The World's Laziest Woman!

The world's laziest woman, according to the London Daily Express, is Mary Jane Toone of near Market Bosworth, Leicestershire. In the courts of Market Bosworth it has been stated that she has stayed in bed for more than three years and has refused to get up, though perfectly healthy.

"She had allowed her house to get into such a dirty condition that it had become a public nuisance. The Market Bosworth District Council have prosecuted her several times without obtaining an improvement. Her husband told the court that the last time he induced his wife to get up he only did so by throwing water over her."

As a last resort the police were called in and dragged her out of bed and took her to prison.

Hyphenated Occupations.

Gardening, which has for generations been a recreation for the wealthy in England, has been quiescent during the last four years, but is again looking up. An English periodical devoted to flower culture announces that it will insert advertisements from gardeners, or those who require them, without charge. Among these advertisements, curiously enough, are several which call for a man who will combine garden culture with other useful work about a "gentleman's place"—these men being called "groom-gardeners," "chauffeur-gardeners," and "cowman-gardeners."

Stainless Steel Cutlery.

The making of stainless steel cutlery, which originated in England, was suspended during the war. The result is achieved by adding about 13 per cent. of chromium.

JACK DEMPSEY REGRETS BAGRAIN WITH WILLARD

Believes That He Should Have More Than the $27,500 Guarantee and May Yet Break the Agreement.

Apparently all is not sweet in the Rickard - Dempsey - Willard camp Dempsey is tired of waiting for word regarding the scene of battle and announces that if he does not hear by May 4 he will sail over the briny deep to take on George Carpentier. No doubt it would be a more profitable venture for Dempsey first to dispose of Carpentier, with about $50,000 at stake, and then, with the added prestige, to take on Willard—and perhaps demand an increase of guarantee. Maybe divers persons have been talking to Dempsey and Jack Kearns. It is possible that Dempsey once more has regretted that he signed for "only" $27,500. He has been talked into believing that he made a grievous error. From Willard's camp comes a reiteration of the story that Rickard is only a partner of the champion in the venture and both are giving the guarantee to Dempsey. Rickard denies this and declares that it is the work of disappointed individuals in Chicago.

Also Chicago is responsible for the story that Willard "summoned" Jack Curley and Tom Jones to Chicago last week not alone to settle their old claim against him but to hire the pair to take care of his end of the promotion of the fight. This, too, Rickard denies with vehemence and traces to a certain sport writer in the Windy City. Be that as it may, the fact remains that there is a hitch somewhere. Dempsey has no right to complain since he has not yet posted his $50,000 forfeit. Willard already has posted his. The failure of the New York legislature to pass the Walker bill no doubt upset Rickard's plans, as he felt that there was a strong chance of the passage of the twelve round measure. Now he will have to take his show to the provinces, where it is likely to be a better fight but a poorer financial proposition.

Not Down and Out.

Anyone who thinks Jack Johnson, former heavyweight champion, is down and out should take a trip to Mexico, where the negro boxer is living like a king in one of the palatial residence of the Mexican capital. Johnson wants for nothing. He is still looked upon as a champion by the Mexicans, attracts attention on the streets, and has access of all places of business and amusement.

Besides branching out as a bull-fighter in Spain, Johnson became a "doctor." He obtained the formula for a medicine said to cure nervousness. The Spaniards fell for it and Jack derived a neat revenue.

Johnson was taken to Cuba by a syndicate of Mexicans, headed by Generals Juan and Merigo and Alfredo Breceda. The former is a member of President Carranza's staff and wealthy. The latter owns one of the finest residences there. Johnson has his gymnasium i the basement.

That these men are among the most influential in the city was shown by this incident. The owner of an American drug store refused to serve the former champion a glass of soda water. aJck made this known to members of the syndicate, who promptly escorted Johnson back to the drug store and compelled the druggist to serve him.

The syndicate plans to arrange for American boxers to go to Mexico and give exhibitions with the negro. They are particularly anxious to get Fred Fulton, although overtures will be made to Jack Dempsey, Jess Willard and other heavyweights.

The ex-champion still maintains that his bout with Willard was fixed and that he agreed to lay down to the present champion after Jack Curley and the other promoters had promised to fix it with federal authorities for his safe return to the United States.

Sporting Gossip

Russell Ford, who passed out of active baseball history in 1915, celebrated his thirty-sixth birthday Friday, as he was born in Manitoba on April 25, 1883. Ford was the inventor of the emery ball, but that didn't help him to stay in the game after he was thirty-three. In 1914 Russ pulled a glorious come-back with the Buffalo Feds, leading the twirlers of the Federal circuit with 21 victories to his credit and only 6 defeats chalked up against him. In the following year Ford slumped and had won only two games for the Buffeds when he was released in July. Later he was recalled and given another chance, but in the latter part of August of that year he again received his unconditional release. Russ' downfall was due to the ban placed on the emery ball by the Federal League directors. Ford, who was known as the inventor of this form of delivery, had nothing else to offer, and with the emery ball barred he was all through.

Ford started professional pitching with Cedar Rapids in 1905 and remained in the Iowa city two seasons. Then followed two years with Atlanta, and his work in the Southern League was so good that he was purchased by the New York Americans, but was turned over to Jersey City for further seasoning in 1909. The next year he joined the hurling staff of the Yankees, then managed by George Stallings. Ford was the sensation of the year, winning 26 games while he met but 6 defeats. His work was largely instrumental in enabling the Yanks to finish in second place. In that year Ford proved himself the greatest recruit that ever broke into fast company. In 1911 Russ had 22 wins against 11 defeats. In 1912 he scored but 13 triumphs as against 21 defeats, and was knocked out of the box repeatedly. Except for his one big year with the Feds, when the emery ball saved his bacon, Russ has never redeemed the great promise of his early career in the majors.

6th LINE DEFEATS 8th LINE BOWLERS

Saturday night on the Water Street Alleys the 8th line five pin bowlers suffered a defeat before their opponents, the 6th line. The 6th line got away to a good start in the first game and although the 8th boys won the next two games they failed to overcome the lead thus were defeated by a 14 pin margin. R. Porter was high man with 461 for a total, while J. Porter and S. Johnson, also of the 8th line reached the 400 mark. For the 6th line R. Hope and F. Hall had totals of 417 and 408. J. Porter had high single game of 192. The scores were:

What's Your Speed?

QUITE some food for thought is offered in Ernest Welleck's article in a current issue of Popular Science, entitled "What's Your Speed?" This question, as Mr. Welleck considerately points out, does not apply to your car (if you have one), but to your brain. The writer asks: "How promptly does your brain respond to impressions by muscular reaction?" And then he says:

"If you don't know, and the chances are you don't, go to Dr. Amar, in Paris, and let him find out for you. He will submit you to a few psychographic tests, and at their conclusion will tell you your speed to the hundredth part of a second. Incidentally, he will tell you whether you are fitted for the profession or occupation in which you are engaged or intend to become engaged.

"The apparatus that Dr. Amar uses is a psychograph of his own invention, a device for registering the promptness, intensity, duration, etc., of muscular responses to impressions received by eye, ear, or sense of touch of the person tested. The apparatus has a cylinder covered with paper coated with lampblack.

"This cylinder is revolved by clockwork at the rate of one revolution a second. A vibrating needle, which makes one hundred double vibrations a second, marks a wavy line that serves as time measure for minute fractions of a second upon the blackened paper. The muscular reactions of the subject tested are transmitted by air pressure to two needles, which mark a record of these reactions on the cylinder.

"Dr Amar will seat you in front of a table equipped with the testing apparatus. Directly before you are two little pneumatic drums. When you have received your instructions you place a finger upon the membrane of one of the little drums, your eyes focussed on something that resembles a small camera.

"A few minutes later a touch of the doctor's finger upon the shutter releases allows a flash of the electric light in the box behind the lens to reach your eye. At the same moment—so it seems to you—you press your finger upon the drum head. The air pressure in the drum simultaneously causes a needle to mark a line, more or less curved, on the lampblack covered paper.

"Then the paper is taken off the cylinder. Here is the mark of the doctor's signal and there is the record of your reaction. The doctor counts the number of waves of the vibrating needle on the paper and informs you that 20-100 of a second elapsed between the signal and your response. And you imagined your pressure to have been simultaneous with the signal!

"You are assured that your brain functions normally — that the time for simple visual reactions in normal subjects averages between 0.195 and 0.21 seconds.

"In the tests for reactions involving deliberation the same device is used. You place one finger of the left hand on one of the little drums, one finger of the right hand on the other drum. You are informed that the left drum means blue, the right drum red. The doctor flashes a red or a blue light through the lens of the camera-like device, and you signal back the impression by pressing the right or the left drumhead. On examining the record on the cylinder you find that it took you more than twice as long to react in this visual test as in the simple visual test in which you were not called upon to decide whether the light was red or blue.

"The statistical material so far collected shows that the age of the subject, between the limits of eighteen and forty-five years, does not materially affect the time of simple reactions. Subjects whose occupation demands alertness—for instance, designers, typists and mechanics—react more promptly than farmers, who are invariably slower by 0.02 seconds or more. The records of persons who have sustained injuries of the brain, or who have been operated on because of such injuries, show much higher figures: 0.32 seconds for visual signals, 0.24 for sound signals and 0.21 seconds for touch signals represent the average for that class of invalids."

Mining the War Zone.

Europe's battlefields, says an editorial writer in the Mining and Scientific Press, have been showered with steel and iron and brass from shells, exploded and unexploded, and from hand-grenades. He goes on:

"Much of this metal will be removed as a necessary preliminary to the resumption of peaceful pursuits. The quantity of metal is so great that it would be a source of annoyance and even of danger to the tiller of the soil. A systematic sweeping, so to speak, of all the bombarded regions will be necessary. A French engineering journal describes an apparatus which, though created for this special purpose, can be applied to other uses for it will indicate the presence of steel and iron not too deeply buried in the soil. This, however, is a slow way to proceed where long-continued bombardment has literally filled the soil with metallic fragments. Methods of salvaging are contemplated that involve passing the soil through plants for recovering the metal, and returning the soil to its place leveled and ready for tillage. It is also pointed out that the concentration of fixed nitrogen in these battlefield soils, resulting from the enormous quantities of explosives used will make these areas exceptionally fertile."

During the war the British covered the seas with something like 4,000,000 of mines, costing from $500 apiece upward.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

AN AMERICAN SPEAKS.

Tells How He Altered His Views on England.

"We have grossly misunderstood the part that Great Britain has played in this war," writes Henry Seidel Canby in the Century Magazine. "We have taken the Englishman in particular at his own published valuation. Now, the Englishman, although he has a reputation for self-superiority, is actually diffident, self-critical and obstinate in national self-depreciation. He has filled his papers and our own for four years with complaints of his inefficiency and mistakes. He has written far more of the humorous experiences of his Tommies than of the remarkable organization of the First Expeditionary Army or the astounding transformation of central Great Britain into a workshop of military supplies, where for hours in the train one never loses sight of the machinery of war.

"He has told us far more of the asinine incapacity of his leaders than of the right-about march of England from the easy ways of commerce or leisures, accomplished, one supposes, under these very men. The British have not boasted, they are certainly not boasting now; but with a kind of shamefaced grumble, 'We've been grousing too much,' they are willing as never before to be judged.

"The truth is that the Englishman has always been fiercely intolerant of the faults of his countrymen, and therefore, by natural continuation, on the defensive against nations without. Nor can one deny a belief in radical superiority. It is all this that made him the reserved and supercilious person who became the "type" Britisher for us in America. The trait was preferable to German self-assertion, but it was not lovable. And now it has changed.

"To see the 'haughty Englishman' as he was, you must go to Ireland, where special and most unfortunate circumstances still automatically develop all that is most unhappy in the British breed. At home it is a different story. For weeks, to cite a trivial instance, I looked for the well-known figure who refuses to speak except under compulsion, and found instead quiet men in railway carriages who made excuse of the least incident of travel to ask for American impressions, and would give gladly in exchange from their years of bitter experience. At last I met him, churlish, silent, cold, as he sat beside me each morning in the breakfast room—only to learn that he was deaf, stone deaf!"

Took Time to Prepare Work.

The more one reads of the great war the more one must appreciate the fact that Victor Hugo's immortal description of the battle of Waterloo was not written until 1861, or 46 years after it happened, and time had been given for the dust to settle. It was 37 years after Waterloo that Tennyson wrote "Bury the Great Duke With an Empire's Lamentation."

To Curl Feathers at Home.

When ostrich feathers have become a sorry sight, after exposure to dampness, they may be fluffed up again and given some curl by holding them over a very small gas flame. Great care should be taken to have the flame low and to hold the feathers high enough to move slightly in the warm air, and so escape catching fire. If feathers are treated in this manner they will become surprisingly freshened almost immediately.

Lees, of this city, delivered an address at the morning service of the Lakefield Presbyterian Church. Mr. Lees gave a lucid and concise explanation of the referendum which is to be submitted to the people next Fall with regard to the Ontario Temperance Act. He dealt separately and in detail with each of the four questions that are to appear on the ballot paper when that vote is taken, and called attention to the fact that each voter would be required to declare himself on all of the questions, otherwise his ballot would not count.

If the first question is so decided that the Act is repealed, then the other three are automatically disposed of and there is to be a reversion to the license system that was in force prior to the operation of the prohibition law.

If the voters decide in favor of the sale of light beer by standard hotels then that provision may be rendered of no effect by any community that adopts local option.

Mr. Lees told his audience that the term "light" beer was misleading. If the percentage of alcohol as now proposed is permitted, the beverage will possess the "kick" that all topers crave in their liquid refreshment. The figures of the different percentages as given are apparently almost the same, but the proposed increase is out of all proportion to the present standing, as the percentage is to be determined by weight instead of by measure.

Mr. Lees warned the friends of temperance that the liquor interests will make a supreme effort to defeat the act and will spend money freely. They have immense financial resources from which to draw. Money to secure the retention of prohibition will be required, but must be raised solely by voluntary contributions.

The audience gave the speaker an attentive hearing, and at the close of the address over $75 was subscribed to carry on the campaign. The Lakefield Presbyterian Church is flourishing under the able pastorate of Rev. J. P. Jull, who has been in his present position for the past year and a half.

CHILDREN'S FETE AT Y.W.C.A.

Childrens Inside

The children's fete at the Y.W.C.A. on Saturday afternoon under the supervision of Mrs. Field was so successful in every way that it was decided to repeat the event again next year.

Mrs. H. Stenton was in charge of the tea room assisted by Mrs. R.R. Hall, Mrs. R. Hall, Mrs. Adam Hall, Mrs. Meredith, Mrs. Widdess and Mrs. Carmichael.

The children were served ice-cream and cakes and the adults tea and cakes.

Games were played in the gymnasium and were in charge of Misses Littlefield, English and McDonald, Miss Bates danced the Sailor's Hornpipe. The rooster dance was the event of the afternoon. Children's games and dances were played during the afternoon.

Mrs. Sanderson as Madame Paas gave out grab bags. Miss Neill and Mrs. Birnie sold eggs which the children in turn gave to Madame Paas who then gave each a small gift.

The prizes for the prettiest costumes were given to Jim Rogers, Edward Pennefather, Gwendoline Hall and Caroline Campazzie.

Among those present were Miss Rush and Mesdames Pennefather, Copping, Waddell, Rush, Thompson, Fiske, Campazzie, Gilman and mothers of nearly all the children.

STRONG APPEAL FOR HARMONY

DR. BELAND MAKES STIRRING ADDRESS TO AUDIENCE IN TORONTO

Toronto, April 28.—An earnest appeal for unity between the French and English speaking races of Canada; a demand that Governmental action be taken immediately to lower the tariff so as to meet the request of the farmers and to relieve the workmen from the burdens under which they are suffering; a warning to the Dominion Government not to tamper with the franchise Canadians enjoy; and a note of caution advising the Government to preserve Canadian autonomy—these were the outstanding features of a stirring and brilliant address delivered by Hon. Dr. Henri Beland, M.P., for Beauce, Que., to a gathering which had assembled to do him honor at the Ontario Club on Saturday night. The keynote of the entire meeting was unity of the races. It was emphasized by all the speakers, who paid warm tributes to the French-Canadians for their share in the development of the country. "Liberty, autonomy, comfort and tolerance—these are the stars that should guide the destinies of the Liberal party and the Canadian people in the future," declared Dr. Beland.

OBITUARY

MRS. WILLIAM LEE

Mary J. Hammond, widow of the late William Lee, passed away yesterday afternoon at the old family residence, 710 George street, at the advanced age of 78 years, after a protracted illness.

The late Mrs. Lee was born in Lachute, Quebec, and came to this city after her marriage to the late William Lee in 1872. Her husband, who was one of the pioneer residents of Peterborough and who was active in the municipal life of the city of that day, predeceased her eleven years ago.

Deceased was well known in the city and highly respected by a wide circle of friends and acquaintances. She was a member of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, and before her advancing years effected her, was an active church worker.

About three years ago the late Mrs. Lee suffered a stroke of paralysis, and since that time, has been in poor health.

She leaves to mourn her passing three sons and two daughters. The former are, John Thompson, of Sentinel, Arizona, and William and Richard, of Penhold, Alberta; Mrs. E. Manning of 710 George street, city, and Miss Ida, of Mono Lake, California are the daughters.

Three brothers and three sisters of the deceased also survive. They are, Richard Hammond, of Lachute, Que.; John, of Mono Lake, Cal.; Johnathan, of Seattle Wash.; Mrs. Jones, Hamilton, Mrs. John Chapman Lachute, and Mrs. Robert Wills, of Montreal.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Lee will be held from the family residence, 710 George street, tomorrow afternoon at 2.30, to Little Lake cemetery. Service will be held at the house half an hour earlier. Rev. Robert Pogue will officiate.

REVIVAL OPENS OT PARK STREET

EVANGELIST TORRIE BEGINS CAMPAIGN TONIGHT IN BAPTIST CHURCH

Rev. Alexander Torrie, the celebrated evangelist of Toronto, arrived in Peterborough today and will for a week conduct a series of services in Park street Baptist church.

Upon leaving Peterborough Mr. Torrie will proceed to Montreal where he will conduct a campaign similar to that which is to be carried on here this week.

Mr. Torrie has recently closed a series of services in Oshawa, which were productive of great good and of which the ministers of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptist churches of that place speak very highly. As a result of his campaign in Oshawa there were 300 professed conversions.

Mrs. Torrie, who is a talented soloist, assists in the services. She will arrive here in time to assist in the work tomorrow night.

Evangelist Torrie has held revival missions throughout Canada and the United States in Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist and Congregational churches. Many of these have been union campaigns, in which all evangelical denominations took part. He is a forcible speaker and comes to Peterborough highly recommended.

Major E. J. Ashton while at Regina, asked for the resignation of Major Secord, the legal representative of the Soldiers' Settlement Board, on the ground that the major had made it plain he did not favor the settlement scheme. Major Secord has refused to resign.

BRIDGE OR NO BRIDGE WAS QUESTION PUT TO LABOR MEN

Mayor and Council Urge Modified Scale of Wages or City Will Be Held up on Bridge Building Proposition—Civic Officials Receive Quite an Ovation—45c per Hour Adopted.

Mayor Duncan, Ald. J. J. Turner, Phelan, Gainey, McIntyre, Morrison and Garside invaded the sacred precincts of Labor Hall last evening with a proposition that the city laborers, then in union session, co-operate with the city in an effort to get a contract price for the new bridge within the money voted by the people. The laborers were at that moment deciding on their scale of wages to go into effect on May 1, announced in advance as 50 cents an hour for outside work, and his Worship and his colleagues pressed for modification in the interests of the men themselves. They pointed out that building the bridge this year hinged on the cost of labor here as compared with that in other cities of the same size as Peterborough, and, while sympathizing with the laborers in their position generally, emphasized the fact that while 40 cents an hour would assure them early and extended work, a 50-cent rate would hold up the city in its effort to create employment. As a matter of fact the question in a nutshell resolved itself into "Bridge or no bridge, work or no work."

The men received his Worship and the aldermen with marked enthusiasm, and acclaimed their appearance and subsequent addresses in a manner quite flattering. The proceedings were punctured with commendable good nature and consideration, although one or two extremists, as usual in such bodies, expressed a determined insistence for the maximum wage, work or no work, so to speak.

The hall was thronged with labor men, over two hundred being in evidence, and President Riley governed the meeting in an admirable manner.

The scale for outside labor eventually struck was 45 cents an hour.

Forty Cents Suggested.

Mayor Duncan explained that the estimated cost of the bridge on prices prevailing before the war was $260,000, and $20,000 for removing the present bridge from Hunter to London street. This money had been voted by the people, but out of the $260,000 must come the cost of engineering and damage to property. Present prices, however, would not allow of the work being completed, unless the labor union fixed its scale at no more than 40 cents an hour, which would probably mean a saving in cost of $20,000. Then another saving could be effected by narrowing the bridge. While anxious to create work by building this bridge, the sewage disposal plant at a cost of $150,000, and paving on Water street, still neither he nor the aldermen were going to leave themselves liable for any excess in expenditure on the bridge over the money voted. Besides, an injunction will stop proceedings unless a price within the city's appropriation is reached.

His Worship went on to say that the cost of living now, excepting perhaps clothing, is not in excess of conditions in 1917, when laborers were getting 35 cents an hour, and he wanted to be fair to the men and meet them half way, and get some employment moving. "But," he concluded, "this is no time for bulldozing, and if you want to co-operate with the city in providing work you've got to make some concessions."

One man here replied that nothing less than 50 cents an hour would do. "If you want us to back you up you must back us up."

The Mayor—"That's all right, but will you people reimburse me if I lose personally a few thousand dollars by backing you up for 50 cents an hour?"

Contract or No Contract?

Ald. Gainey said that as a labor alderman he would stand by the labor wage scale; but whether a con-

READY FOR FLIGHT ACROSS THE OCEAN

AVIATORS AT ST. JOHN'S MAY START LONG TRIP TODAY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

St. John's Nfld., April 29. — The weather at ten o'clock this morning was bright and clear, but the wind changed to the eastward with a drizzling rain. The Martinsyde aviator will fly this afternoon if conditions are no worse than at present. The Sopwith airman says his action depends upon the former's.

It had already been decided that the start when made would be in the afternoon preferably about 3 o'clock. This was in keeping with the plan of both Raynhad and Hawker to minimize flying in darkness by meeting the "westbound" sun as they flew east and also to effect a landing on the other side before dusk on the following day. The pilots' watches have been adjusted to Greenwich time. It would be necessary to set out here three an one half hours before sundown in order to arrive in England in the second twilight but the aviators believe they could land on the Irish coast within twenty hours if conditions dictated.

Later Despatch.

The Transatlantic airplane race is expected to start from St. John's some time this afternoon. Reports received here this morning were that the weather conditions over the ocean were favorable and Capt. Raynham the British aviator, and Harry Hawker his Australian rival, each had his belongings packed and the wings of his machine preened this morning for te flight toward Europe.

Flight Is Off.

A later despatch says: Owing to increasing fog and rain prevailing locally and over the western section of the Atlantic all hopes of a flight being made today were abandoned.

BRIDGE COMMITTEE PASS ON AGREEMENT FOR CONTRACT

Have no Intention of Building Bridge, However, Unless Cost is Reduced—Ald. Turner Urges That Aldermen Must not Class Legislate at Expense of People as a Whole.

The City Council's Bridge Committee, last night, went over with City Solicitor Widdifield the rough draft of an agreement and general and special specifications with the Russel-Townsend Co., of Toronto, for the construction of Hunter street concrete high level bridge.

Just why this action was taken is not quite clear in the face of the committee's recognition that it will never do to recommend Council's acceptance of the Russel-Townsend proposition to build the bridge on a cost-plus basis of $249,200. Full heed is being given to the threatened injunction should such a course be pursued and the Committee also appreciates that all party to exceeding the amount voted by the people for this bridge will be held personally liable. However the agreement and specifications for contract have now been approved by the Committee as amended by them here and there, and will, perhaps, come in useful eventually, when again amended to suit conditions under which the bridge may be constructed.

In the cost plus estimate of Russell-Townsend Co., $29,500 is allowed the contractors for the use of their plant and supervision of the work, which the agreement prepared stipulated must be completed in 18 months. The agreement also provides that the contractors must employ Peterborough labor as far as possible and pay the union wages prevailing in this city.

[illegible] Modification

Ald. Turner, in connection with Peterborough labor, thought the clause calling for union wages should be somewhat modified. Basing his figures on Ex-Ald. Dobbin's letter in the press he could see no reason why the city should pay $42,000 more for the bridge by paying Peterborough laborers 50c an hour, a wage in excess of that paid for the same class of work in other cities in the same standing as Peterboro. All things being equal, he would insist that the work be done by home labor, but when union wages for laborers in other cities like this range from 35 to 37 and 40c the hour, he thought it out of the question to expect contractors to pay 50c for Peterborough labor. "This is competitive business and should be treated in a competitive manner. The council is elected to legislate for the people as a whole and not for any one class."

Again [illegible] Ex-Ald. Dobbin's figures, Ald Turner pointed out that increasing the cost of the bridge by $42,000 by employing Peterborough labor would represent a tax of $2 per head for every man, woman and child in Peterborough, and to that he could not consent. The bridge should not cost more to build here than a similar structure would cost in other cities of Peterborough's size and importance.

Ald. Morrison here contended that Ex-Ald. Dobbin's letter was misleading in that his figures for labor elsewhere could not be taken as those which will come in force on May first, and also that the 50c per hour rate is not yet in force here and may never be.

Making Enquiries

Chairman Ald. Phelan here explained that the City Clerk has written to such towns as Kingston, Ottawa, Hamilton, Galt, Guelph and Woodstock for their prevailing and prospective rate of wages for laborers and carpenters.

Lump-Sum Contract

Ald. Turner here went on to say that the difference between the cost plus proposition and a lump sum contract is $40,000, which practically amounts to the difference between Peterborough labor and labor elsewhere. And this led him to hope that if the labor men here and the contractor got together on the ques-

ED. CONROY MAKES NEW PROPOSITION

FOR HUNTER ST. BRIDGE—ASKS $13,000 FOR FEES AND RENT OF PLANT

Edward Conroy submitted a proposition last night for building the Hunter street bridge, addressed to the City Council. But the Bridge Committee discussed the proposition, which read as follows:

He agreed to accept $13,000 as a fixed sum for rental of plant and supervision of work on either a wide or narrow bridge. He would keep traffic open while the bridge was under construction, and would give Council a guaranteed cost price for the work as a whole. When the work is completed he would purchase from the city left over timber and so forth at a fair price.

The fee the Russel-Towsend people have stipulated for use of plant and supervision in their cost-plus proposition is $29,500.

Ald. Turner and the Mayor moved that Conroy's proposition go to the Board of Works.

Ald. Gainey and McIntyre moved that Conroy be asked to submit his guaranteed price.

The committee were at deadlock on the resolution, and in any event they concluded that as Conroy's proposition was addressed to the Council to the Council it belonged for preliminary action.

His Worship was firm in his contention that by order of Council the Board of Works is the only committee which can call for or accept tenders.

POLICE RUN-DOWN DOURO DEFAULTER

DAN McMURRAY ARRESTED EARLY THIS MORNING AND PLEADS GUILTY.

Daniel McMurray, of Douro township was arrested by a posse of Dominion Police in charge of Sergeant William Carmody at two o'clock this morning, in his father's house, first concession of Douro, charged with having been a defaulter under the Military Service Act and this morning upon appearing in police court pleaded guilty to the accusation and was remanded in custody until Saturday in order that the fiat might be secured.

Sometime in the early hours of the morning the Dominion Police started for the McMurray farm in an automobile. Upon arriving at the house the men were stationed about at strategic points and Sergeant Carmody entered the place and with the aid of a flash light found his way to the head of the stairs.

Here he found a boy of about fifteen years of age asleep upon a mattress on the floor. While playing his light upon the boy he heard a shuffling noise issuing from behind a big packing-box which stood near the side of the room.

This aroused the suspicion of the officer who immediately shot his electric beam in that direction and found his man upon hand and knees. McMurray had evidently been indulging in a little old fashioned game of "peek-a-boo" with the Sergeant, keeping the box between himself and the officer.

Sergeant Carmody called upon him to come out from his hiding place and seeing the glint of an automatic in the hand of the policeman, the young man decided that discretion was the better part of valor and obeyed.

Mr. McMurray, senior appeared at the head of the stairs at this juncture and proceeded to take a hand in the game. He called upon an extensive vocabulary of profanity which he had evidently been holding in store for just such an event and in strident tones ordered the Dominion Police Officer down the stairs and out of the house. Sergeant Carmody stood his ground and endeavored to keep his flash playing upon both the prisoner and the father.

The latter seeing that he could not bluff his midnight visitor proceeded to tell him what he thought of him and what he would do to him if he got the chance, making use the while of qualifying and qauntifying adjectives, many of which were new to the Sergeant, although he is a veteran of the war and has seen much service in the trenches of France, and it is claimed that army vernacular is very descriptive.

Mr. McMurray then assumed a threatening posture swinging his arms about his head like a Dutch windmill and announcing that if Carmody did not get downstairs at once he would throw him down.

Fearing that trouble might arise with two or three men to keep track of with his flash light Sergeant Carmody tapped upon the window and one of the men came to the head of the stairs and induced Mr. McMurray to descend to the kitchen.

Following the example of his parent the prisoner then waxed abusive but was finally compelled to don his coat and accompany the Dominion Police to Peterborough where he was lodged in the lockup.

This morning before Magistrate Dumble he was charged with having failed to report for military service when ordered to do so by the Registrar, on May 10, 1918. He claimed that he had lost the order to report also the post office order for transportation. He pleaded guilty to the accusation, however, and as stated above was remanded in custody until Saturday when he will be sentenced.

GALA TIME IN VERSAILLES WHEN TREATY IS SIGNED

Flags Will Fly From Every Building—Part of German Delegation, Including Many Women, Has Reached City—Party Evidently Prepared For Indefinite Stay.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Versailles, April 29.—Eighty-seven members of the German Peace Commission arrived here tonight being the second party to reach the scene of presentation of the peace terms. Of these, thirty were women. The Germans include a commission on limitation of armaments, composed of Drs. Von Becker and Schall and Major Botticher and that on commercial affairs. Sixteen of the latter ommission are women. With the party were the Official Courier, Von Bismarck, a doctor, a barber and Rudolph Barnd a press representative. There were also a number of telegraph and telephone operators.

While there will be but few witnesses of the signature of the treaty in the hall of mirrors, the mayor has asked that the public be admitted during the days following that event so that they may see the arrangements of the historic apartment. All buildings here will be decked with flags on the day that the treaty is signed. Count Von Brockdorff Rantzau German Foreign Minister, is expected to arrive tomorrow with the rest of the enemy delegation.

Japanese Confer With President

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 29.—Before the meeting of the Council of Three this morning Baron Makino, head of the Japanese Mission, and Viscount Chinda, his colleague, conferred with President Wilson. The conference lasted nearly an hour. Presumably the question of Kiao-Chau was under discussion. The Council of Three at the beginning of its session received a committee from the Belgian cabinet and gave a hearing regarding the question of indemnities.

New League to Meet In Washington

Paris, April 29.—A proposal is on foot to hold the first meeting of the League of Nations in Washington during the current year. Should the assembly meet first in Washington it is said President Wilson doubtlessly would be asked to become the first president of the League.

He had been suffering for years with stomach trouble. He was born at Epsom, Ont., in 1858, and had been railroading in various capacities since he was 14 years of age.

LABOR TROUBLES RIFE IN GERMANY

RAILWAY EMPLOYES THREATEN TO CALL GENERAL STRIKE ON MAY DAY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 29.—Renewed agitation in almost all parts of Germany is reported in German advices received here. The railway employes in the Berlin district are threatening to bring on a general strike on May 7 if their claims are not satisfied, while in Ruhr industrial district the Spartacans are again displaying great activity and endeavoring to organise a general strike in this region. Already there have been outbreaks in which casualties have occurred, the advices show. Electric railway employes in Silesia are generally reported to have struck.

Dealing with Spartacans.

Meanwhile government forces are dealing with troubles in Nuremburg where the Spartacan leader, Albert Schmidt, was killed by government troops, and a state of siege is proclaimed. The Spartacans there took on of the majority socialist leaders a prisoner.

Munich Surrounded.

The encirclement of Munich by German government troops has been completed, according to German despatches received here. This result was accomplished, it is said, by the occupation of Landshut, about 35 miles northeast of Munich, which city has been closely approached on all sides.

RAILWAY BILL CARRIED IN HOUSE BY MAJORITY OF 52

Attempt of Opposition to Strangle Public Ownership Ends in Dismal Failure—Leader McKenzie Makes One Last Desperate Effort to Square His Party's Record.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, April 29.—By a vote of 93 to 41, the Government bill incorporating the Canadian National Railways passed the committee stage at two o'clock this morning when the debate automatically stopped under the closure rule. Daniel D. Mackenzie Leader of the Opposition, closed the discussion with a fighting speech, which his followers cheered to the echo. He said he resented the attempt of Acting Premier Sir Thomas White to lead the country to believe that the Opposition was opposed to public ownership of the C.N.R. Attacking Sir Thomas personally, he said he was on record as a private ownership supporter against public ownership. Sir Thomas he said, "was everything by turns and nothing very long." Moreover, he said, "he was godly when godliness pays."

The vote was taken on the clause proposed by the Opposition leader, providing for penalties, but this amendment was defeated on a division as above. Donald Nicholson, of P.E.I. alone of the Government supporters voted with the Opposition. The schedules were then adopted by 51 majority. The House adjourned at 2.15 a.m.

THREE AMERICAN SOLDIERS KILLED

HAD FATAL QUARREL WITH COLORED TROOPS FROM SOUTH AFRICA.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, April 29.—Three Americans were killed at Winchester repatriation camp last night in a fight with South African negro soldiers. Winchester camp was estbalished for Americans who served in the British army and are awaiting transportation home. The feeling between the force of South African blacks and the Americans has been strong. The blacks last night armed themselves with sticks and attached the Americans, three of whom are said to have been killed while thirty were injured. British troops quelled the disturbances.

Dr. Copeland, New York Health Commissioner, fearing violence to physicians who refuse to supply drug victims has called a conference to consider methods of suppressing the evil.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

TUESDAY, APRIL 29, 1919

THE PATRIOTIC FUND.

ANYONE WHO IS looking for an outstanding example of careful administration of public trust need go no further than the case of the Patriotic Fund in this city, a detailed report of the operation of which was recently published. The record attained by the management has made the city of Peterborough famous in the government department in charge of this branch of the military service. That record is unique as the fund here has been administered at a nominal cost, the percentage for operating expenses being lower than that attained by any similar organization in the country. The best business talent in the city has been available without cost in carrying on this work, and the executive office directly responsible worked without ceasing in the interests of the cause.

And then to think of it! That same executive, for some inexplicable reason, was not deemed worthy to serve the city in the capacity of alderman, but was turned down for men whose managerial and financial ability is still problematic.

A QUESTION OF SPELLING.

THE HIGHBROWS of Toronto are having a dispute over the question of spelling "airplane" and words belonging to the same family. Is the original form, aeroplane, to be retained, or is the spelling of these words to be modernized? Minister of Education Cody has been appealed to, and he has decided in favor of the former course. The derivative history of the word is to be preserved in the orthography, the characteristic decision of a scholastic umpire.

When we bring a foreigner into this country, an attempt is—or should be—made to make him as like one of ourselves as possible. He is taught the language of his adopted country and is encouraged to adopt the style of clothing and other characteristics of the people among whom he finds himself. When a word is imported or kidnapped from another language, why not follow the same course as that adopted in the case of the alien immigrant, and submit it to a renovating process of thorough Anglicization?

THE STRENGTH OF THE LEAGUE.

NO INDIVIDUAL of the proper spirit likes to have an outsider interfere in his purely private affairs. Nations have the same characteristic. Trouble always ensues when a foreign power butts into the business of a lesser commonwealth. The smaller and weaker the aggrieved nation, the more vindictive is the attitude of the people toward the aggressor.

Recognizing this universal trait, the League of Nations has profited by the knowledge. There is to be no dictation with regard to the domestic affairs of any country. If there is one provision in the League's constitution that betokens wisdom, that assures it a successful career, here it is.

ENVIRONMENT AND POLITICS.

THERE USED TO BE a time-honored belief—and, by the way, it has not entirely disappeared—that a man's political faith was largely a matter of principle, just as his religion was supposed to be. All who held other opinions were doomed to be cast out into utter darkness. It was only those on one side who were truly loyal. Those over the way were the concocters of treason, stratagems and the accumulators of all manner of spoils.

The idea that a man's spiritual future is to any degree determined by his political faith is no longer generally accepted. There are no such conditions hung out on the pearly gates. A man's conscience in these matters should be his guide. Self-determination is not to be denied him. So long as his political record is honest, that is all that is required.

It is environment and self-interest that largely determines the political affiliation of a community or individual. Of course, there are some who inherit their opinions, just as they do money or real estate, and accept conditions without a question. The man who never changes his location rarely finds it necessary to make a shift of his political coat. With those who move it is different.

"Red" Michael Clark, he who has made the West famous in the parliamentary records, would be different beyond all question if his lot were cast in some other section of the Dominion. If "Red" Michael, for example, represented an Ontario instead of a Saskatchewan constituency, he would still probably be a Liberal, at least in name, but he would not be the rabid and unreasonable free trader that he is today. If he owned a timber limit in British Columbia instead of a wheat farm in Red Deer he would, with an eye to the main chance, probably be as anxious as anyone to see the duty on American lumber maintained, being ready to supply all demands with the products of his own mill. But even if he still lived in Saskatchewan, and instead of raising wheat was in the hardware business, was the owner of a tailoring establishment or engaged in some other commercial pursuit, we mistake the man's character if he would not be as averse as the most of them to seeing the money of the country [illegible] across the border to pay for goods of American manufacture.

It is the wheat growers, the one crop men of the West, who are making all this free trade clamor. They are organized, and besides they have the majority in the parliamentary representation of the West. The members who come from the prairie district are strong of lung and set in their purpose. They talk free trade in and out of the House, in committee room, in caucus, in club and on the street corner. The newspapers relay their opinions from one end of the country to the other, until the impression has become general that the people of the West are a unit for the reduction of the tariff now and its ultimate abolition by gradual process.

But there are other than farmers in the West. There are business men who hope to see the four provinces in that corner of the Dominion converted into manufacturing centres, with all sorts of industrial plants on the Red and the Saskatchewan Rivers. The power is there to be developed. Everything is propitious for the realization of this dream of future industrial greatness. The only hindrance is the agitation that is carried on by the men on the land. The West is by no means a unit on the trade question. If the farmers are united on that issue, then the business men are just as well organized in the opposite camp. Why retard the growth of the greatest region on the North American continent in a spirit of pure and unadulterated selfishness? Why sacrifice a nation for a theory the fallacy of which has been demonstrated by the experience of ages? Why precipitate disaster simply because of shortened vision? The fiscal policy that has developed Ontario and other sections of the East will eventually do as much for the West.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

• • • • •

THE LANGUAGE question is not confined to Canada. Even the League of Nations has to wrestle with it.

• • • • •

THEN AGAIN, there are some brands of diplomacy that for its own sake is better kept under a bushel.

• • • • •

AFTER CIVIC GOVERNMENT by injunction has been tried out, overnment by commission may be given a fair trial.

• • • • •

THE DREAM of a universal language can never be realized until every word adopted from other tongues is thoroughly Anglicized.

• • • • •

WHY SHOULD the Opposition in Parliament attempt to withhold remedial measures for the railway fiasco which they themselves created?

• • • • •

THE COVENANT of the League. There is a good old Celtic suggestion in the term that encourages hope for the stability of the new organization.

• • • • •

THE TROUBLE with a secret treaty is that the general public does not know when it is likely to be violated and so cannot prepare for the worst.

• • • • •

IN CENTRAL EUROPE these days the man who can make a premier to fill the bill has the edge on the individual whose ambition is to create a king.

• • • • •

THE TORONTO STAR wonders what will happen if prices keep going up. Surely there is in the unexplored azure heights something solid enough to stop the ascent.

• • • • •

EXCLUSIVE cotton growing has impoverished the soil and the people of the South. Exclusive wheat growing, if persisted in, will do as much for the Canadian West.

• • • • •

UNDER PROHIBITION the voluptuous citizen who removes his library to the basement of his home may in a double sense include the best cellar among his possessions.

• • • • •

"JIMMY" SIMPSON should not worry about the price of Canadian-made machinery in foreign countries. The idea is to have such machines made by well-paid Canadian labor.

• • • • •

WHY SPELL IT aeroplane for no other reason than to preserve the history of the origin of the term? The foreigner removes his whiskers in order to appear more like the native-born.

• • • • •

NO MAN IS USUALLY so ready to sign a note as the man whose intentions to meet the obligation are nebulous. Some way or other this idea crops up in connection with Germany's avowed decision to shut its eyes and sign the treaty of peace.

TO-DAY'S STORY

"Vodeville ain't what it used to be," sighed the lady in lavender tights.

"Pursue," invited the fat comedian.

"I mean just this," went on the lavender one; "in vodeville, nowadays, we're restricted to the plain li'l song an' dance. When they want a regular act, with the regular dope on realism they go to the movies for it, and it's spoiled our game.

"To me the saddest thing in this age of changes is the passing of the one act drama, that used to be the headliner on the bill. Now, when I was a young thing—and that ain't been so long either—I had a lovely act. There was a real locomotive whistle, and it was just grand. In one place in the act I had to slither across the stage clutching a tattered shawl about me while fans in the wings blew wintry gales, and stage winds howled that were guaranteed to send shivers down the spinal cords of any well regulated audience. Johnnie Burns never did regulate that wind right. The villain hid behind the property rubber tree, and gobs of snow fell in handfuls.

"Now, when they need a snowstorm the director says, 'Here, boy, go out and photograph a snowstorm, just like that. Real wet and slush and all that sort of thing, not giving the audience a chance to use its imagination! So when they need a snowstorm they go scare up a real one, but I don't see how any right-minded audience can get a thrill out of a picture of snow!

"Still, I guess the movies are here to stay," and we may as well make the most of it. Lots of second rate actors who can't get anything else go into the movies. As Shakespeare said 'It's an ill wind that blows nobody any good'."

"I agree with you, Nellie," drawled the fat comedian, carelessly juggling a silk hat on the tip of his third finger. "I'm jumping my next engagement to go into the movies at—well, a lot more per I'll be headed for the coast in a couple of weeks. You—you don't think, Nellie, that a change of climate would be a good thing? I've been thinkin' that two could live on my new salary as cheaply as one."

"Well, of all the blithering idiots!" ejaculated the lavender exponent of song and dance. "But, say, I am tired of this game!"

WIT AND WISDOM

Times Have Changed.

Wellesley was bewailing the lack of romance in the average girl of today.

"It's sickening," he growled. "A feller can pour out his soul all the blessed night on a violin and she won't trouble to look out of the window. But give three toots on a motor horn any afternoon and she's outside in a jiffy."

Even They Are Dangerous.

"He's a man of few words."

"That so?"

"Yep, but even those few words very often get him into trouble."

A Clerical Error.

Morning service was in progress at the village church, and the vicar had announced the banns and marriages, the last couple to be mentioned being John Thomas Hay and Susan Grass. The curate then announced the anthem by the choir, "What will the harvest be?" Needless to say, the vicar will exercise greater care in choosing his anthems next time.

A fiction writer speaks of the promenade at the opera house, where the audience "walk and chatter between the acts."

The Jabber Walk, huh?

Slightly Mixed.

A prospective juryman of foreign birth was being questioned. "What is perjury?" he was asked.

"Having more than one wife," the man answered.

Irish Convalescence.

"How's your husband getting along Mrs. Fogarty?"

"Well, sometimes he's better an' sometimes he's worse, but from the way he growls an' takes on whin he's better, Oi think he's better whin he's worse."

STOP LOOK and LISTEN before purchasing a baking powder that may possibly contain injurious ingredients. Many food scientists claim that baking powder containing alum is unsafe for use in food. The mere fact that some brands of baking powder have the words "No Alum" on the label is not sufficient proof that they are what they are represented to be. Our chemists find a good many have "No Alum" on the outside but large quantities of it inside.

Italy's Opportunity For Justice

(New York Commercial.)

President Wilson's attitude toward the territorial claims of Italy and that country's quasi-ultimatum is the attitude of the United States. Significant evidence of this state of mind is to be found in the fact that the President's most caustic critics in the national Senate admire and endorse his stand against Italy's imperial aspirations—aspirations based, as were those of the Central Empires, on a wonderful dream of national power and glory. While the discussion of the Italian contentions was before the conference Mr. Wilson tactfully withheld his presence, because the United States was not a party to the Pact of London nor to any secret treaty whatever. As the crisis drew nearer however, he was forced into the thankless position of saying frankly how this nation would regard the Italian demand and he faced the situation with courage and candor. It is not surprising that the Italian envoys received the President's statement with rancor, because it dispelled an illusion that was fast becoming a national obsession.

It may be that Signor Orlando is as honestly mistaken as to the objects of the Peace Conference as he is regarding the history of Fiume, which he seems actually to believe is, and was, an Italian city—in spite of the facts. The melodramatic exit of Premier Orlando and a part of his entourage from Paris was worthy of the best traditions of histrionic art. It was superbly staged, with the dramatic skill in which the Latin race excels. But is this a time for theatricalism? The Paris conference is the most important meeting held in centuries. It has taken the Chief Executive of this country away from stupendous home duties and await impatiently the culmination of its labors. In its basic, fundamental idea the conference is against imperialism — against accretion of territory by conquest. All of the Allied nations there represented are friendly to Italy; all agreed that she was entitled to her alienated territory, long since stolen from her. At this point the iron of ambition entered into the soul of the Italian people, who dreamed of expansion leaving out of consideration its effect upon those whose territory would have to be taken, forcibly or otherwise, to allow for that expansion, and forgetting that it was the same form of ambition, nursed by Teutons, that left a large part of Europe in ashes and a heritage of horror. If "the evil that men do lives after them," it must be that the impish spirit of Machiavelli has for the moment poisoned the sense of justice in many of those who lived after him. His malign spirit can be imagined as chuckling over the bomb thrown into the peace conference by Orlando and gleefully waiting for it to explode. How much better for the future of the great Italian nation to have heeded William Blake's answer to Bacon's doctrine that "the increase of any state must be upon the foreigner," when he (Blake) wrote: "The increase of a state, as of a man, is from internal improvement and intellectual acquirement. Man is not improved by the hurt of another; states are not improved at the expense of the foreigner." Had Germany heeded this homely, honest and truthful axiom the would still remain unwritten. For a civilised nation to contemplate warfare in the fact of recent experience, except in the cause of self-defense, is unthinkable.

"Bloodiest chapter in the Book of time"

If Premier Orlando really feels aggrieved because he thinks that President Wilson shot an arrow of reason over his head in the direction of the Italian people, he should not forget that he (Orlando) was at the time holding a pistol at the head of the world conference with the demand of "Fiume or nothing." Perhaps the Italian Premier is too near to the desire of his heart to appreciate the ethics of the situation.

Mr. Wilson voiced the feeling of his fellow countrymen when he said: "America is Italy's friend. Her people are drawn, millions strong, from Italy's own fair countryside. She is linked in blood, as well as in affection, with the Italian people." May that people realize that as the outcome of the deadly grapple with world-seeking ambition they have come into their ancient heritage and regained their long mourned provinces! The United States has shed its blood and treasurer with noble generosity and asks nothing in return but justice for the peoples of the world.

It is devoutly to be wished that the great heart of the Italian people will respond in a spirit of amity to the graceful thought embodies in the parting salute of the Paris Petit Journal to Signor Orlando: "Au revoir; but not farewell."

LESSONS IN RIGHT LIVING

By Dr. W. A. BRADY

Clothing probably has a great deal to do with the slouchy posture so many young women seem to affect nowadays. Round shoulders, flat or sunken chest, ptosed or sagging abdomen, one knee caving in and pronated feet pointing outward when she walks—the fashionable young woman of the day evidently lacks something. The something is quite obvious—it is physical education.

Between the ages of 13 and 18—high school age—a vast number of girls go wrong physically, for the simple reason that the educational authorities do not care whether students receive any physical training or not so long as they pass their mental tests.

The more I learn about woman and her ills and certainly I have still a whole lot to learn, the more I feel that, aside from the unhappiness and suffering she is doomed to undergo as her recompense for man's beastliness, the most of her troubles are attributable to neglect of her physical education. The foundation for these troubles is laid at the age of 13 or thereabout, when she reaches the high school, discards her dolls, lengthens her skirts and begins to yearn for something resembling corsets and high heeled shoes. And her foolish, ignorant indulgent mother falls right in with the idea and encourages the budding woman to follow the same old path.

At 13, if not before, a girl's physical education should certainly begin. From 13 to 18 years of age she must devote a reasonable amount of each day's time to the training of her body as well as improving her mind, for what use is a sound mind in a weak or diseased body?

Any system of education which fails to provide for the physical training of the young woman is wrong. The high school or academy without a properly equipped gymnasium and competent physical instructors is far behind the times and no place for a twentieth century woman to receive her preliminary education.

Any girl unavoidably sentenced to attend backward high schools need not despair. She may carry on her own physical training at home and acquire a normally developed body in spite of the penury of the community and the antediluvian character of the schools provided. She can invest in a textbook of physical training which will aid her in building a strong, well proportioned, vigorous body and keep her from degenerating into a caricature of her sex.

What to do for Pimples.

"Please let me know in your column what to do for a case of pimples on the face? I am 16 years old.

"A. M. D."

Write me again and inclose a self-addressed, 3 cent stamped envelope and I will tell you what to do.

Bran Bread.

"Can you give me the recipe for bran bread which you published several months ago? My brother's family have been using it and they say it has solved the constipation problem for them. L. G. I."

One quart each of wheat bran, white flour and buttermilk or sour milk; one cup each of seeded raisins and molasses; one teaspoonful each of baking powder and salt and one-half teaspoonful of soda. Mix according to the art, put batter into three well greased tins and bake in a slow oven. This bread certainly get 'em—and saves considerably on the usual outlay for alleged liver pills.

X-Ray Versus Surgery.

"I am a graduate nurse from hospital and a faithful follower of your articles. Because I have great faith in you I seek your advice . . . a lump in the breast . . . advised X-ray . . . advised the knife. A friend of mine who started taking X-ray treatment for similar trouble died of the cancer anaesthetic. What do you advise?"

Any woman with a lump in the breast should at once submit to examination by her physician or by any competent physician. In such a case surgery, followed by X-ray treatments to prevent recurrence, would be my advice, assuming that the lump is cancer.

Water in the Office.

"Do you approve of keeping a bucket of water on the radiator or stove in the office? "MIKE"

Yes.

INDUSTRIES A UNIT FOR A BIGGER AND BETTER CITY

Manufacturers' Branch of Board of Trade Organize at Enthusiastic Meeting of the Leading Business Men Last Night.

When Chairman Breyfogle of the Manufacturers' Association called the first regular meeting of that body to order last night in the new Council room of the Board of Trade, he announced that twenty-four of the big industries had already subscribed to the obligation to work and pull as a unit to build up industrial Peterborough.

The meeting was a representative one and included all of the larger employers who were in the city. Among those were Charles H. Thompson, the new manager of the Brinton Carpet Company; Captain Claud Rogers, Peterborough Canoe Co.; W. C. Ackerman, of Ackerman, Son & Co.; E. R. Wilson, Peterborough Machine Co.; Homer Meyers, Peterborough Cereal Mills; G. W. Green and T. O. Donaldson, of G. Walter Green Company; W. R. Breyfogle, of the De Laval Company; A. E. Coulthard, Colonial Weaving Co.; A. and William Hall, of Adam Hall Company; E. H. Howson, Peterborough Lock Works; Alderman James Hamilton, P. P. Westbye, of the William Hamilton Works; M. W. Lyle, Canadian Canoe Co.; Daniel J. Holland, Campbell Flour Mills.

Much of the evening was devoted framing a set of bylaws and rules that would ensure thorough co-operation and guarantee unity of purpose and interest. This is the first time in the history of the city that a real union of manufacturers has been formed and care is being taken to entrench it securely for a vigorous stand on broad, big lines.

The chief purpose of the association is to make Peterborough stand up and grow as a high-class, prosperous centre of industry and to build on the basic principles of mutual consideration and good faith among all concerned in manufacturing "All of us for a bigger, busier and better Peterborough" is the way one man put it and that spells all together the workmen, the managers and the owners.

Special consideration was given to the problem of employment during the uncertain period of transition from war conditions to normal business and Chairman Breyfogle is charged with the selection of several important committees which are to find the way to win out.

The Peterborough manufacturers believe that big business for Peterborough is sure to come. They think that the expansion of business is certain from the present needs of Europe and from the steady growth of Canada's population and business. Peterborough is certain to get its share of this and the manufacturers believe that good feeling toward one another fair dealing, above-board methods, and sound business principles will enable Peterborough to keep employment and wages at par and win her big share of the coming prosperity.

Heretofore, new industries have been brought to Peterborough on a bonusing basis. Now they are to come because Peterborough is to use good and substantial business logic to get new factories. The manufacturers propose to advertise Peterborough in a business-like way.

Belgium.

Belgium was formerly part of the Netherlands, which comprised Holland as well, Belgium constituting the southern part. Racial and religious differences brought about a separation, and in 1830 Belgium was separated from Holland and became an independent state. It has been the scene of much warfare and has a very mixed population, with different languages. According to a census of 1900, out of a population of a little more than 6,000,000, 2,574,805 spoke French only; 2,822,000 spoke Flemish only; 28,314 spoke German only; 801,587 spoke French and Flemish; 66,447 spoke French and German; 7,238 spoke Flemish and German; 42,884 spoke all three of the languages. In 1839 the powers guaranteed the neutrality of Belgium, and it was maintained until the present war. On the outbreak of the war between France and Germany in 1870, Belgium feared invasion, but Great Britain declared her intention to maintain the neutrality, and both belligerents agreed to it. A considerable portion of the French army routed at Sedan sought refuge across the Belgian frontier, but they laid down their arms, according to agreement, and were interned.

Missing For a Year

Gen. Russky, a famous general, arrived in Vladivostok, Russia, and offered his services to aid in putting down the Bolsheviki. He is one of the generals who have made good during the war. He came to the front in the first year, when he defeated the Austrians time after time, and proved himself a strategist of the highest order. Ill health (or some other cause not publicly stated) caused his retirement, and he was largely responsible for the negotiations which led to the abdication of the Czar. He failed to agree with the extremists, and for some time little or nothing has been heard of him.

Evidence of Failure.

We frequently find men of culture who take pride in their art or their science but who have no feeling for morality or religion and are rather proud of the fact. Is it not rather an evidence that their culture is failing to raise the possibilities of experience to their highest power?—Minneapolis Journal.

ORGAN RECITAL AT ST. PAUL'S

One of the most delightful evenings ever experienced by music lovers of the city was spent at St. Paul's Church last night listening to the organ and piano recital by Mr. Frank Tattersall the brilliant pianist and organist who presided at the organ at the Sunday services in St. Paul's church.

It is not unusual to find organists of rare ability nor is it extraordinary to find a pianist who can make the most of his instrument but to find a musician who is thoroughly at home upon both the pipe organ and the piano is somewhat unusual. Mr. Tattersall is a master in both branches of the art and in him the profession has an artist who has combined to a most surprising degree marked ability in the handling of both instruments.

After giving a program of beautiful and difficult numbers upon the pipe organ, last night, Mr. Tattersall took his place at the piano and continued his recital upon that instrument without the slightest difficulty and with results which rivalled his performance upon the organ.

That section of the audience who are in love with the deeper melody of the organ found in the first part of Mr. Tattersall's recital a field of unlimtied enjoyment and those whose taste runs to the sweet music of the piano were delighted beyond measure by the latter portion of the program.

If an organ can be said to speak at any time, that in St Paul's church did so last night under the skilfull hand of Mr. Tattersall. Some of his numbers descriptive of natural phenomenona were amazing in their power of presentation. Birds sang so clearly in two of his numbers that the identity of several of them was easy of recognition.

His organ work was only surpassed by his piano performance to the degree to which the listener favored either instrument. Those who prefer the organ state that his numbers upon that instrument were as near perfection as is possible of attainment and pianoforte critics claim the same for his performance upon their favorite instrument.

At any rate Mr. Tattersall captivated both sections of his audience and pleased everyone by his splendid recital and the excellent choice he showed in the selection of his programme.

He is undoubtedly a musician of unusual ability and has but recently arrived from the old country where he has been engaged most of his time in Birmingham and other cities in the north of England. Since coming to Canada he has given recitals in several of the cities of the Maritime provinces and in Quebec.

Organ

Grand chorus
Barcarolle
Pastorale
Grand Chorus
Sunrise and sunset in the Alps
Storm
Invocation
March

Piano

Prelude
Schergi
Prelude
Les Oiseaux
St. Francis of Assise preaching to the Birds.
Two Etudes—Paganini and Liszt.

Many feel that Mr. Tattersall's rendering of "Sunrise and Sunset on the Alps," upon the organ was his masterpiece of the evening. This number represented an Alpine scene and under the player's just interpretation of the difficult number the audience could perceive the various periods of the day and usual events which the composer sought to incorporate in his beautiful composition.

First came day break with the organ playing softly and the volume of sound gradually growing in intensity as the sun swung higher in the heavens. The peasant's morning carol can be plainly heard also the sweet chorus of the peasants upon their flutes and the echoes faintly sounding against the distant cliffs. Then comes mid-day with the resumption of the peasants' carol upon their pipes and the sound of a multitude of birds many of the songs of which can be recognised. Then comes sunset and darkness. Played properly as was the case last night this number is one of the most beautiful pieces imaginable.

"The Storm" representative of the interruption of a church service by a thunder storm was played last night by Mr. Tattersall in a most realistic manner. The rolling of the thunder during the progress of the service is plainly distinguishable.

Another of Mr. Tattersall's organ numbers which brought forth the approbation of the audience was a march representative of a column of soldiers appearing in the distance and drawing nearer and nearer and then receding into the distance again. The faint sound of the marching feet could be plainly heard at the outset of the piece, growing louder and louder as the detachment advanced until the sound of the music which set the measured tramp could be heard through the melody. A bugle sounded and was answered by others further up the column the notes growing fainter and fainter until in the words of Lord Tennyson "They fade on hill and stream and river," and finally died away. The army resumed its mrach, the band struck up again and at last the sound of the marching feet died away in the distance.

Mr. Tattersall was equally happy in his choice of piano selections and his rendering of them. Etude, number 5 and Etude number 2—studies by Liszt of the works of the master violinist Paganini, were played in a delightful manner. These are amongst the most popular of the works adapted by Liszt who was undoubtedly the Paganini of the piano, and were rewriten several times Liszt was ambitious to rival the success of Paganini with the violin upon the piano and that he was entirely successful has long since been conceded by the musical critics of the entire world.

"St. Francois d'Assise, preaching to the Birds, another of the compositions of Liszt was done full justice to by the musician last night upon the piano.

During the progress of the program Rev. Robert Pogue, pastor of St Paul's who presided announced the numbers and gave a few words of explanation where needed.

Mr. Tattersall and the officials of St. Paul's church wish to acknowledge the use of the splendid piano which was very kindly provided for the occasion by the Heintzman company.

GIVES JUDGEMENT IN WILL CASE

CHIEF JUSTICE HANDS DOWN DECISION RE THE O'CONNOR ESTATE

The following is a copy of the judgment in the case of O'Connor vs. Fitzgerald, delivered yesterday at Osgoode Hall by Chief Justice Sir Glenholme Falconbridge. The case was heard here in February, H. H. Dinis, of Toronto, appearing for the plaintiff and J. R Corkery for the defendant. The finding is as follows:

The plaintiff without independent legal advice (although that perhaps would not have been material if the agreement had been carried out) executed the agreement set out in exhibit 4.

A will in practical conformity with the agreement was at the same time made by the husband but this will was subsequently destroyed and revoked by the testator and the new will made which has been admitted to probate The plaintiff. In ignorance of her rights and without independent advice and without consideration, endorsed the cheque for $11,000 issued to her as beneficiary and to the executors by the London & Lancashire Life and General Assurance Association to the executors who received and retain the proceeds thereof as money at the credit of the estate.

She is clearly entitled to a return of this money. See Walker vs. Boughner (1889). 18 O R 448.

As to the $9,000 joint policy, see Griffiths vs. Fleming (1909), 1 K.B 805, per Vaughan-Williams, L.J. at p. 815 sub. fin.

It follows that she could not elect to accept benefits under the will instead of dower. If anything has been done by her which would seem to indicate an election in that way it was done in ignorance of her rights and without independent advice—if she has inadvertently accepted any benefit under the will—credit may be given for the value thereof upon the insurance money.

But I am of opinion that the preferring by plaintiff of the claim for the insurance money and my allowance thereof are (although exhibit 4 does not specifically state that it should be in lieu of dower) inconsistent with her now also having dower out of the lands.

Costs of all parties out of the estate; those of the executors (with whose conduct I have no fault to find) as between solicitor and client.

Fifteen days' stay.

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys If Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat form uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts fro many pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralise the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

FEELS BETTER NOW THAN IN 28 YEARS

SAM HOOPER HAS GOTTEN OVER HIS BREAKDOWN THROUGH USING TANLAC

"Tanlac has overcome all my troubles, and I am actually feeling better than I have in twenty-eight years," said Sam Hooper, of 56 O'Hara Street, Toronto, Ontario, Canada.

"For the past four or five years," he continued, "I suffered from nervousness and a general rundown condition, and was getting worse all the time. Gas would bloat me up and cause terrible pains all through my sides and stomach; I lost over thirty pounds. I couldn't half sleep and was so weak and wornout that I had to give up work and just lay around feeling good for nothing."

"Since taking Tanlac I can hardly tell I had stomach trouble at all. My nerves are strong and steady. I sleep fine and my friends are congratulating me on my wonderful improvement, for Tanlac has about made me over again and has helped me so wonderfully that I am glad to tell about it."

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

MISSION OPENS AT PARK STREET

REV. ALEXANDER TORRIE NOTED EVANGELIST, BEGINS SPECIAL SERVICES.

Evangelist Alexander Torrie, B.A., of Toronto, opened his mission in Park Street Baptist Church last evening. He told of some remarkable cases of conversion in some of his missions in Canada and the United States.

His address last night was more of an informal talk to the members of the church for hearty co-operation on the part of each member.

His subject tonight will be on "Evangelism". The need of evangelism in Peterborough and the kinds of evangelism Peterborough needs." A large chorus choir is being organized and Mrs. Torrie, who arrives from Toronto today will sing at each service. The famous Billy Sunday book, "Songs for Service," will be used. The people of Peterborough are cordially invited to these meetings. The service will begin tonight at 7.45 with a bright song service led by the Evangelist.

S. A. TEMPLE BAND

The Temple Band will meet for practice tonight at 8 o'clock. A full attendance is requested.

It is said that less than 90 per cent of the regular church goers complain of the sermons' being too short.

HIAWATHA RENDERS REAL AID TO RETURNED HEROES

Men Who Enlisted From That Section Are Presented With Ten Acres of Land Each

The Hiawatha band and the people of the surrounding country gave a reception to their soldier boys on Friday night last, which was a very successful event, considering the inclemency of the weather.

Mr. Wellington Crowie took the chair at 8 o'clock, and after an opening address and the singing of God Save the King, the choir sang "Won't You Be Enlisted as a Volunteer," after which Col. T. Johnson was called upon for an address, in which he stated his pleasure at being present on such an occasion. He spoke briefly of his battalion of which some of the boys present formed a part. He also spoke of the Indians who being exempt from draft for fighting in any foreign country, yet responded to the call of arms all over the Dominion as soon as they knew their Motherland was in danger and the discipline of the Indian was second to none. He also expressed his sorrow for his battalion being broken up.

Pte. N. Marsden, 136th Battalion Cobourg, was called on for a few words and he spoke briefly of his experience in the war.

Pte. Walter Johnson, of Peterborough, who enlisted in Winnipeg in the 49th Battalion, also spoke briefly of his experience and expressed his pleasure of being present on this occasion.

Mr. Albert Crowe was next called and he sang "All Hail to the Union Jack", after which he rendered "Home Sweet Home" and "When We Wind Up the Watch on the Rhine." on the violin.

Mr. Robert Paudash was then called, he being an old veteran of the Fenian Raid.

The chairman next called Mrs. Henry Cowle, who read the following address, while Miss Violet Crowe made the presentation, "wrapped in the Union Jack":

"We, the people of this community do hereby wish to extend our heartiest welcome to our boys who so nobly played their part in upholding Canada's honor and crushing her brutal foes on the battle fields of France and Flanders and to show our appreciation for the services they rendered for their King and country and humanity's sake by giving to Pte Cecil Mathers, 93rd Battalion, this purse and to our own boys, members of this band, namely, Pte. Johnson Paudash, 21st Battalion; Geo. Paudash, 21st Battalion; Hanlen Howard 21st Battalion; Wm. Anderson, 21st Battalion, and Henry Muskrat, 93rd Battalion, ten acres of land each. Please accept our humble offering as a slight token of our appreciation of your services so faithfully rendered and trusting that prosperity and happiness may attend you one and all."

Pte. Johnson Paudash then thanked the band and community on behalf of the other five boys for the kindness tendered them.

A sumptous supper was then served for all present, at which Col. and Mrs Johnson and all returned men present dined at one table. After supper the young folks had an enjoyable time with their brave comrades from the blood-stained fields of France. Music was furnished by Mr. Albert Crowe and daughter, while Mr. Alex Johnson, of Peterborough, acted as floor manager. Henry Cowle and Wm. Anderson Committee.

21st Battalion Now on Their Way to Canada Will Be Given a Reception When They Reach Peterborough.

The officers and men of the 21st Battalion who to a large extent came from the City and County of Peterborough have commenced to make arrangements for the return to this city of the men of this Battalion who are now believed to be on their way to Canada and it is hoped that they are favored with beter weather than on the ocasion of the reception to the Iron Seconds.

In advance to such reception it might not be out of place to give a short history of this famous battalion which is expected to arrive next week.

The 21st Canadian Infantry Battalion landed in France on the 15th day of September, 1915 and received their first baptism of fire about three weeks later when they relieved the Second East Surreys.

During the winter of 1915 they were continuously in the M. and N. trenches in the Ypres salient and experienced their first battle of real fire around St. Eloi in the fight for the craters when it will be remembered that this push at this time was initiated to relieve the pressure at Verdun

About the middle of the year 1916 along with the rest of the Second Division they removed to the Somme and were in the famous battle of Courcelett in the fight at the sugar refinery. The 21st Canadian battalion remained at the Somme for some time but eventually around the first of 1917 were removed to the Cologne front and in January of the same year with the rest of the 4th Infantry Brigade, were instrumental in carrying off the best raid which had ever taken place up to this time but which later was surpassed by a London regiment.

While on this front they participated in the battle of Vimy Ridge and Hill 70 or Lens and in November of the same year went through the Passchendaele show.

After Passchendaele the battalion came back to their former front and while there participated in the battle of Amiens and Mons just before the Armistice.

"ESCAPED"

HEAR LIEUT. ROBINSON TELL THE STORY OF HIS ESCAPE FROM GERMANY.

Watch and wait for Lieut. Beverley Robinson's thrilling story of his escape from German thraldom, told by himself in his own inimitable way. Lieut. Robinson is the only Canadian officer who succeeded in escaping from a Hun prison camp and in safety reaching once more the protection of Allied freedom and civilization. In St. Paul's Church on May 9 he will give a vivid word picture of his wonderful achievement, in an address which cannot be excelled for interest and entertainment.

Lieut. Robinson spent two and a half years as a prisoner of war in Germany; he was in nine different prison camps, including the notoriously brutal camps of Stroben and Holzminden. After numerous attempts he finally succeeded in reaching Holland in April, 1918. And on May 9 he is going to give his audience a faithful account of his extraordinary experience. See that you do not miss it.

This absorbing story given to the British world by the principal himself, is under the distinguished patronage of His Grace the Duke of Devonshire, Governor General of Canada.

J. H. Burnham, M.P. Wires His Regrets

The following telegram was received this morning by City Clerk Armstrong from J. H. Burnham, M.P.:

"The City's kind invitation asking me to reply to the toast of The Canadian Army at the soldiers' banquet received. I regret that I cannot make arrangements at this date to accept. Please convey my thanks to the Council and my recognition of the magnificent work of the soldiers. Canada may some day realize what "The Canadian Army" has done for her.

BRIDGE COMMITTEE

tion of wages a lump sum contract might be agreed to at a cost-plus price.

Ald Morrison—"Why not wait and and take the price of labor after May first.

Ald. Turner said he would propose that Council average up the wages paid in five or six cities the size of Peterborough and thus arrive at a fair wage which the contractor or contractors must pay. Should Peterborough men refuse to work for it, then let the conractors seek elsewhere for men who will. He did not think the city should be held up by labor demands for wages in excess of those paid generally.

Not a Hold Up

Ald. Gainey replied that the laborers are not holding the city up for 50c an hour for all classes of labor. They are simply asking 50c for outside work, at which much time is lost through weather conditions and break downs of machinery.

Men Are Reasonable.

Mayor Duncan here opined that the contractors expected the town to fix the price of labor to be paid on the bridge. "Hundreds of men in Peterborough," he said, "are willing to work for 40c per hour and glad to get it. Then why should they be denied the opportunity because a hundred perhaps, are sticking out for 50c. But the majority of the laborers are reasonable, and I believe that if we explain to their union that a 40c rate would give contractors a chance to bid within the amount voted by the people, and thus assure the bridge being built. They will govern themselves accordingly.

Invade the Labor Hall

The laborers' union was at this moment in session on their wage scale to come in force may 1st, and Ald Garside suggested that a deputation wait upon them and present the Bridge Committee's views and hopes.

This proposition found favor with all and the whole committee invaded the labor hall, where they were enthusiastically received and given a cordial hearing.

45c an Hour.

Later in the evening a deputation from the laborers' union waited upon the Bridge Committee in the city building and presented the unions' decision.

This decision was embodied in a copy of a resolution just passed that the laborers' work day consist of 8 hours, their pay 45c an hour, overtime to be paid at the rate of time and a half, double pay for work on Sundays and holidays; this scale to remain in force for one year, and to apply to all civic labor in the city of Peterborough. The resolution also asked that work on the bridge and elsewhere be started at the earliest possible moment.

The deputation pointed out that the main idea of an 8-hour day was to distribute employment amongst the greater number of men.

An account of the committee's visit to the official home of labor will be found elsewhere.

Members Present.

Chairman Ald. Phelan, Mayor Duncan, Ald Gainey, A. A. McIntyre, J. J. Turner and Morrison. Ald. Garside while not a member of the committee, was also in attendance.

To Wait on Carpenters.

The Bridge Committee will wait on the carpenters with a view to getting some modification of their scale, of 67½c an hour to facilitate building the bridge. It is hoped that a meeting of the Carpenters' Union can be arranged for tonight.

Have you seen the Hydro Lamp Shop yet? 202 Charlotte street.

OWEN SOUND'S CLOCK.

At a recent meeting of the Owen Sound council the aldermen turned down the proposal to have a clock placed in the tower of the town building. They decided that such a move would entail needless expense and decided that it would be much more economical to ask the Federal Government to install a clock in the post office tower.

OPPOSE NEW WAR

Rome, April 29. The Socialist parliamentary group has adopted and sent to Premier Orlando a resolution emphatically declaring against a new war, warning the Government not to submit to parliament a "fait accompli" (accomplished fact) which would lead to the resumption of hostilities or the delay in the demobilization.

tract would go through at their scale or not is another question. However, he suggested that the men get together and conclude as to how far they can go in helping the aldermen who are endeavoring to help them.

To the question as to whether the city would recognize the union, his Worship replied in the affirmative, and added that it is not a question of whether 50 cents an hour is too much for a family man, but if the bridge can be built on that basis.

Fair Wage.

Ald. Phelan believed in a fair wage, but objected to being a party in a bridge deal which would hold him personally responsible for excess in expenditure.

D[illegible] Labor Hinted At.

Ald. Morrison explained conditions regarding the tenders for the bridge quite lucidly. "And now," he said, "you see the outcome. We are here to learn whether or not you as a body are willing to meet us in our dilemma. I don't believe in cutting down wages, but I do believe in building the bridge, and in order to do so, some concessions must be made. We may have to resort to day labor, and appoint a man to supervise the work. That was my plan at first, and I don't know that I have changed my views."

Bind Contractors.

To President Riley his Worship replied that the city would bind the contractors to employ union men if the union's co-operation is forthcoming as suggested. "But," he added, "I'm not going to sign an agreement by which I stand to lose my all."

Voice—"Can't keep a family on $3.20 a day."

The Mayor—"Hundreds are out of work and not earnig $3.20; we want to alleviate the situation."

H. Coyt—"We might just as well starve out of work as in work."

$200 in the Hole.

A. Pince pointed out that some of the unemployed are already $200 or $300 in debt owing to lack of employment, and even 50 cents an hour would mean considerable scratching to wipe out that debt and provide for the winter. "Of course," he said, "I'm an exception. I've only got eleven to feed."

The Mayor—"Is it better to go ahead with the bridge or let it drop?"

Voice—"Go ahead."

His Worship—"We can't at the proposed cost of labor."

Voice—"Just as well to drop the proposition as to accept less than 50 cents."

The Mayor—"You all know me and who I am. I've been just as poor as any of you, and the little I've saved I've worked hard for. I don't propose to drop any of it in a contract which might run $100,000 in excess of our appropriation."

How About 45 Cents?

One man here asked: "Did you say you would meet us half way?"

The Mayor: "Yes."

"Then how about 45 cents an hour?"

His Worship: "That would help some."

Ald. Turner here explained that if the scale for labor is 50 cents, the Council will sign no contract for the bridge, as an injunction would block proceedings. "Is it better to stick for the higher wage and tie up the matter or take less and create considerable work?"

The Mayor here replied to Mr. Pince that 45 cents would probably allow the work to go ahead, and the latter replied: "That would let us out with the majority of our ratepayers."

$1000 To Live.

Ald. McIntyre said he would like to see the men get 50 cents an hour, but in such an event the city is going to be up against it. Fifty cents the hour, deducting lost time, only represented some $800 a year, and he could not see how a family could live on less than $1000. He believed in raising the standard of workingmen. (Cheers.) "But still," he concluded, "I ask you to consider this matter seriously, and I'll back you up in your conclusion. If you could see your way clear to drop five cents the hour it would strengthen our hands."

The Half Loaf.

Ald. Garside contended that contractors won't build at 50 cents an hour for laborers and 67½ cents for carpenters. "If you split the scale we can go ahead with the bridge. Half a loaf is better than none. You wonder why there is no work in the city. It is the labor men who are holding it up."

H. Coyt here suggested that Ald. Garside "cut out the half loaf business; a baker won't cut the price of his loaf in half."

Nine-Hour Day.

Ald. Turner here suggested that the men, by adopting a nine hour day, would even at a modified scale increase their earning power per man to $1000 a year for 50 weeks, and $1123 for 52 weeks. This, he said, would help the men to pay off their debts. Then why not this year turn all available time to account?

Meet the Carpenters.

After the Mayor assuring the meeting that he and his colleagues would meet the carpenters on the wage question, they retired amid applause.

45 Cents the Hour.

As stated elsewhere, the union ruled for a 45c an hour scale for an eight hour day.

DEMAND THAT U.S. EXTEND CREDIT

BUSINESS MEN IN SESSION IN CHICAGO REACH THAT CONCLUSION

Chicago, April 29.—The sixth National Foreign Trade Convention closed the sessions by adopting resolutions for a comprehensive business and legislative program that include the most conclusive plan fro foreign trade which have been advanced on the four days' discussion of American opportunity.

The report of the general committee, which was presented by James A. Farrell, chairman of the National Foreign Trade Council and president of the United States Steel Corporation outlined the country's business and legislative needs for the extension of foreign trade.

One of the results of this momentous convention will be a demand by trade and industry for immediate steps looking to the absorption in America of foreign securities. Opinions expressed by big men attending the sessions and those contained in the papers read at the three-day sessions were unanimous that banks must come forward energetically to meet this problem, upon which the future of Amerian foreign trade largely rests. In addition, it was contended that direct action toward the financing of foreign securities should be undertaken by the Government.

According to the news of the big leaders in business the turning point in foreign trade propaganda has been reached and that the coming year will be decisivo for the United States. With America the greatest creditor nation of the world, the debtor nation likely to urtail purhase, something must be done by which the crippled nations can be financed so as to maintain their purchasing power and provide a free flow of goods from this country.

Anther vital necessity for foreign trade is ships and the resolution urges the earliest possible completion of the government's shipbuilding program and the removal of all restrictions on American shipbuilding and permit the free construction of vessels for sales to foreign interests. Opposition to any entinuance of government operation of the United States merchant marine is declared.

It is urged that the government owned vessels be allocated to suitable trades and trading routes for operation by any qualified competent American shipping enterprise, under conditions of sale or charter that American flag ot any port in the world on a fair trading competitive basis.

Enactment of laws providing a bargaining tariff for the protection of American commercial interests in foreign countries.

Extension of the international parcel post service.

One of the most advanced demands in the revolution was that urging Government action to develop aerial commerce. The plan for the air service was launched at the convention by Colonel Bingham, former Yale professor.

Dark days ahead for prohibitionists. W. H. Anderson, New York anti-saloon league says its possible for a man to go out with a ripsaw and get drunk on a fence because alcohol can be made from sawdust.

William J. Smith, former captain of the bell boys in the Longacre Hotel, New York, was such an engaging man that when Mrs. Catherine L. Taylor died last April at the age of 93 she left him $76,000 a large part of her fortune though fifteen relatives were willing to accept legacies.

Fifteen of twenty-two farmers in Illinois reporting on the question of tractor efficiency replaced one horse or more by the use of a tractor. On the average the figures show that a man in that section farms 22 crop acres per horse without the use of a tractor and 29.7 acres per horse when the tractor is used.

"Why were [illegible] prisoners not disarmed?" he [illegible] Kantos Kan.

"They are not prisoners, Zat Arras," replied the officer. "Two of them are of Helium's most noble family. Tars Tarkas, jeddak of Thark, is Tardos Mors' best beloved ally. The other is a friend and companion of the Prince of Helium. That is enough for me to know."

"It is not enough for me, however," retorted Zat Arras. "More must I hear from those who have taken the pilgrimage than their names. Where have you been, John Carter?"

"I have just come from the valley Dor, Zat Arras," I replied.

"Ah!" he exclaimed in evident pleasure. "You do not deny it then? You have returned from the bosom of Iss?"

"I have come back from a land of false hope, from a valley of torture and death. With my companions I have escaped from the hideous clutches of lying fiends. I have come back to the Barsoom that I saved from a painless death again to save her, but this time from death in its most frightful form."

"Cease, blasphemer!" cried Zat Arras. "Hope not to save thy cowardly carcass by inventing horrid lies to"—

He got no further.

One does not call John Carter "coward" and "liar" thus lightly, and Zat Arras should have known it.

Before a hand could be raised to stop me I was at his side, and one hand grasped his throat.

"Came I from heaven or hell, Zat Arras, you will find me still the same John Carter that I have always been, nor did ever man call me such names and live—without apologizing."

And with that I commenced to bend him back across my knee and tighten my grip upon his throat.

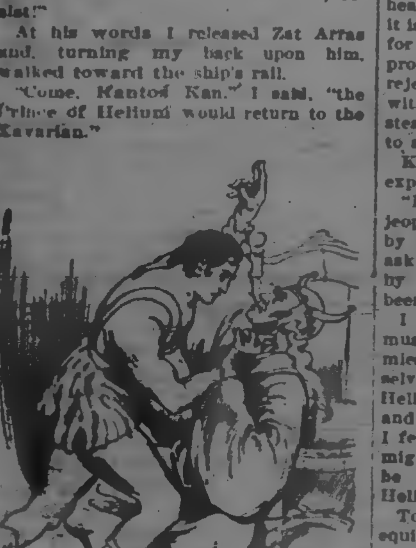
"Seize him!" cried Zat Arras, and a dozen officers sprang forward to assist him.

Kantos Kan came close and whispered to me:

"Desist, I beg of you! It will but involve us all, for I cannot see these men lay hands upon you without aiding you. My officers and men will join me, and we shall have a mutiny then that may lead to revolution. For the sake of Tardos Mors and Helium, desist!"

At his words I released Zat Arras and, turning my back upon him, walked toward the ship's rail.

"Come, Kantos Kan," I said, "the Prince of Helium would return to the Xavarian."



"Seize him!" cried Zat Arras.

None interfered. Zat Arras stood, white and trembling amid his officers. Some there were who looked upon him with scorn and drew toward me, while one, a man long in the service and confidence of Tardos Mors, spoke to me in a low tone as I passed him.

"You may count my metal among your fighting men, John Carter," he said.

I thanked him and passed on. In silence we embarked and shortly after stepped once more upon the deck of the Xavarian. Fifteen minutes later we received orders from the flagship to proceed toward Helium.

Our journey thither was uneventful. Carthoris and I were wrapped in the gloomiest of thoughts. Kantos Kan was somber in contemplation of the further calamity that might fall upon Helium should Zat Arras attempt to follow the age old precedent that allotted a terrible death to fugitives from the valley Dor.

Xodar alone was care free. He could be no worse off in Helium than elsewhere.

"Let us hope that we may at least go out with good red blood upon our blades," he said.

It was a simple wish and one most likely to be gratified.

Among the officers of the Xavarian I thought I could already note a division into factions ere we had reached Helium. There were those who gathered about Carthoris and myself whenever the opportunity presented, while about an equal number held aloof from us.

They offered us only the most courteous treatment, but were evidently bound by their superstitious belief in the doctrine of Dor and Iss and Korus. I could not blame them, for I knew how strong a hold a creed, however ridiculous it may be, may gain upon an otherwise intelligent people.

By returning from Dor we had committed a sacrilege; by recounting our adventures there and stating the facts as they existed we had outraged the religion of their fathers. We were blasphemers, lying heretics.

Even those who still clung to us from personal love and loyalty, I think did so in the face of the fact that at heart they questioned our veracity—it is very hard to accept a new religion for an old, no matter how alluring the promises of the new may be. But to reject the old as a tissue of falsehoods without being offered anything in its stead is indeed a most difficult thing to ask of any people.

Kantos Kan would not talk of our experiences among the therns.

"It is enough," he said, "that I jeopardize my life here and hereafter by countenancing you at all. Do not ask me to add still further to my sins by listening to what I have always been taught was the rankest heresy."

I knew that sooner or later the time must come when our friends and enemies would be forced to declare themselves openly. When we reached Helium there must be an accounting, and if Tardos Mors had not returned I feared that the enmity of Zat Arras might weigh heavily against us, for he represented the government of Helium.

To take sides against him were equivalent to treason. The majority of the troops would doubtless follow the lead of their officers, and I knew that many of the highest and most [illegible] land and air forces would cleave to John Carter in the face of god, man or devil!

On the other hand, the majority of the populace unquestionably would demand that we pay the penalty of our sacrilege. The outlook seemed dark from whatever angle I viewed it, but my mind was so torn with anguish at the thought of Dejah Thoris that I realize now that I gave the terrible question of Helium's plight but scant attention at that time.

There was always before me day and night, a horrible nightmare of the frightful scenes through which I knew my princess might even then be passing—the horrid plant men, the ferocious white apes.

At times I would cover my face with my hands in a vain effort to shut the fearful thing from my mind.

It was in the forenoon that we arrived at the mile high scarlet tower which marks greater Helium from her twin city. As we descended in great circles toward the navy docks a mighty multitude could be seen surging in the streets beneath. Helium had been notified by radio-aerogram of our approach.

From the deck of the Xavarian we three—Carthoris, Tars Tarkas and I—were transferred to a lesser flier to be transported to quarters within the temple of Reward.

It is here that Martian justice is meted to benefactor and malefactor. Here the hero is decorated. Here the felon is condemned. We were taken into the temple from the landing stage upon the roof, so that we did not pass among the people at all, as is customary.

Always before I had seen prisoners of note or returned wanderers of that hence paraded from the gate of Jeddaks to the temple of Reward by the broad Avenue of Ancestors through dense crowds of jeering or cheering citizens.

I knew that Zat Arras dared not trust the people near to us, for he feared that their love for Carthoris and myself might break into a demonstration which would wipe out their superstitious horror of the crime we were to be charged with.

What his plans were I could only guess, but that they were sinister was evidenced by the fact that only his most trusted servitors accompanied us upon the flier to the temple of Reward.

We were lodged in a room upon the south side of the temple, overlooking the Avenue of Ancestors, down which we could see the full length to the gate of Jeddaks, five miles away. The people had gathered in the temple plaza and in the streets for a distance of a full mile and were standing as close packed as it was possible for them to get.

They were very quiet and orderly; there were neither scoffs nor plaudits, and when they saw us at the window above them there were many who buried their faces in their arms and wept.

Late in the afternoon a messenger arrived from Zat Arras to inform us that we would be tried by an impartial body of nobles in the great hall of the temple at the first zode on the following day, or about 8:40 a. m., earth time.

CHAPTER XI.

The Death Sentence.

A FEW moments before the appointed time on the following morning a strong guard of Zat Arras' officers appeared at our quarters to conduct us to the great hall of the temple.

In twos we entered the chamber and marched down the broad aisle of hope, as it is called, to the platform in the center of the hall. Before and behind us marched armed guards, while three solid ranks of Zodangan soldiery lined either side of the aisle from the entrance to the rostrum.

As we reached the raised inclosure I saw our judges. As is the custom upon Barsoom, there were thirty-one, supposedly selected by lot from men of the noble class, for nobles were on trial.

But to my amazement I saw no single friendly face among them. Practically all were Zodangans, and it was I to whom Zodanga owed her defeat at the hands of the green hordes and her subsequent vassalage to Helium.

There could be little justice here for John Carter or his son or the [illegible] Thark who had commanded the savage tribesmen who overran Zodanga's broad avenues, looting, burning and murdering.

About us the vast circular coliseum was packed to its fullest capacity. All classes were represented, all ages and both sexes. As we entered the hall the hum of subdued conversation ceased until as we halted upon the platform or throne of righteousness the silence of death enveloped the spectators.

The judges were seated in a great circle about the periphery of the circular platform. We were assigned seats with our backs toward a small platform in the exact center of the larger one.

This placed us facing the judges and the audience. Upon the smaller platform each would take his place while his case was being heard.

Zat Arras himself sat in the golden chair of the presiding magistrate. As we were seated and our guards retired to the foot of the stairway leading to the platform he arose and called my name.

"John Carter," he cried, "take your place upon the pedestal of truth to be judged impartially according to your acts and here to know the reward you have earned thereby."

Then, turning to and fro toward the audience, he narrated the acts upon the value of which my reward was to be determined.

"Know you, O judges and people of Helium," he said, "that John Carter, one time Prince of Helium, has returned, by his own statement, from the valley Dor and even from the temple of Issus itself.

"That, in the presence of many men of Helium, he has blasphemed against the sacred Iss, and against the valley Dor, and the lost sea of Korus, and the holy therns themselves, and even against Issus, goddess of death and life eternal.

"And know you further by witness of thine own eyes that see him here now upon the pedestal of truth that he has indeed returned from these sacred precincts in the face of our ancient customs and in violation of the sanctity of our ancient religion.

"He who be once dead may not live again. He who attempts it must be made dead forever. Judges, your duty lies plain before you—there can be no testimony in contravention of truth. What reward shall be meted to John Carter in accordance with the acts he has committed?"

"Death!" shouted one of the judges.

And then a man sprang to his feet in the audience and, raising his hand on high, cried, "Justice, justice, justice!"

It was Kantos Kan, and as all eyes turned toward him he leaped past the Zodangan soldiery and sprang upon the platform.

"What manner of justice is this?" he cried to Zat Arras. "The defendant has not been heard, nor has he had an opportunity to call others in his behalf. In the name of the people of Helium, I demand fair and impartial treatment for the Prince of Helium."

A great cry rose from the audience then, "Justice, justice, justice!" And Zat Arras dared not deny them.

"Speak, then," he snarled, turning to me. "But blaspheme not against the things that are sacred upon Barsoom."

"Men of Helium," I cried, turning to the spectators and speaking over the heads of my judges, "how can John Carter expect justice from the men of Zodanga? He cannot, nor does he ask it.

"It is to the men of Helium that he states his case, nor does he appeal for mercy to any. It is not in his own cause that he speaks now, it is in yours, in the cause of your wives and daughters and of wives and daughters yet unborn.

"It is to save them from the unthinkably atrocious indignities that I have seen heaped upon the fair women of Barsoom in the place men call the temple of Issus. It is to save them from the plant men, from the fangs of the white apes of Dor, from the cruelty of the holy therns, from all that the cold, dead Iss carries them to from homes of love and happiness.

THEATRICAL

EXTRA SPECIAL ATTRACTION AT THE GRAND THURSDAY, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

On account of previous booking of Vaudeville and pictures will be presented on Thursday, Friday and Saturday instead of the first half of this week.

The great favorite Norma Talmadge will be seen in her biggest success "Her Only Way," from the stage play of the same name. The star vaudeville bill will be headed by the famous "Lind," in singing and dancing paintings. "Lind," is one of the world's most wonderful female impersonators, whose really remarkable camouflage has entertained and mystified people in every section of the universe. Though "every inch a man," his form, attire, beauty, voice appearance and womanly eccentricities are unquestionalby feminine and most decidedly deceptive.

"Lind" offers a most pretentious callclassical posing, terpsichorean and vocal novelty which is billed under the title of "Singing and Dancing Paintings," consisting of a series of beautiful character pictures posed in a massive frame, following each pose a characteristic dance emblematical of the subject pictured is presented by this remarkable artist.

The work of this splendid artist is assuredly the last word in an act peculiar to the genius of its originator. Expert dancing and a singing voice requisite to the needs of the production are part of his equipment. It is an attraction that will unquestionably prove the big drawing card of the season.

Foster and Foster will be seen in a Skit entitled "The Volunteer Pianist." Of the many comedy acts to be seen here this season none will provoke more genuine laughter and please more highly than this offering of Ed. and Minnie Foster.

As an added attraction Raymond & Vincent, a delightfully entertaining couple, present a bill under the caption of "Names Don't Count," consisting of some exceedingly clever acting and good music. Both are splendid singers. Their parodies and original and amusing. Their feature number a travesty on family affairs, representing the first month, and two years after marriage, is a scream. It is cleverly acted and the best travesty seen in many a day.

Charlie Chaplin will be seen in "Oh, What a Night!" and a special screen Magazine. Altogether this is the best bill ever offered in Peterboro and at prices to suit everybody. 10c-15c Matinees, and 15c-25c evenings. Reserve your seats in advance.

WHISKEY STILL IN DURHAM COUNTY

OFFICERS FIND PLANT THAT TURNED OUT 100 GALLONS A DAY

Bowmanville, April 29.—One of the largest "moonshine" whiskey stills ever known to exist in this part of the province was found by the high constable for these united counties; Richard Jarvis, Bowmanville's chief of police; and the counties' license inspector, George Goodrich, Cobourg in the northern part of West Durham, the famous local option district. Chief Jarvis received a hint Sunday that something of special interest might be found in a farmhouse on the William Brown farm near Lotus. These two agents of the law, on arriving there finding the doors locked and no person on the premises forced a door open, and in the cellar found a complete whiskey still, with copper boilers, coolers, etc., with a capacity estimated at 100 gallons per day. They found in proces of distillation over 600 gallons, contained in 12 barrels of 50 gallons each, which was poured out on the cellar floor. In another part of the ellar were found a 25-gallon keg and two 10-gallon kegs of whiskey ready for shipment.

Upstairs was found the bottling branch with some 200 bottles the dye for coloring whiskey the proper shade, etc. The good "moonshine" whiskey was taken to Pontypool station and expressed to the License Department, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

The farm fronts on the town line of Cartwright and Manvers, about seven miles from Burketon. Two Jews are said to have rented the property from Mr. Brown, who resides in Toronto, and took possession some two months ago. From information obtained; another Jew who runs an auto is in league with the moonshiners and conveys the product to Toronto, his activities being carried on at night, too. The main traveled road is about a quarter of a mile from the house, which is in a secluded locality, where few people travel. The constable was informed that the occupants, being Hebrews, were in Toronto attending a Jewish festival.

AT THE GRAND

The worst has happened. The Hunter street bridge has been made the subjet of minstrel jest. Gus Hill's artists, with the burnt cork facial disguises, at the Grand Opera House last night, passed that local topic from one to the other on the stage like a football game, classing the building of the brdge with such remote possibilities as home rule for Ireland, the civilization of the Huns and the like.

The famous minstrels, always good, are this season better than ever, all the old favorite members of the troupe being up to form and a number of new faces appearing in the cast. In singing and dancing the company left nothing that the audience could in reason demand and the recalls for the various numbers were frequent and insistant. The comedy was clean and the jokes all fairly juvenile, a few ancient chestnuts being introduced simply as so many relics of a by-gone age. Let it be related to the credit of this organization that they no longer find those over-worker themes, such as the policeman and the much traduced mother-in-law promising material for the creation of hilarity.

The performance ended with a spectacular war scene, showing the U. S. battleship Texas with a company of mariners who gave excellent exhibition of drill and sailor games.

The bill at the Grand for tonight and tomorrow, with the usual matinees is "The Kaiser's Finish," the story of a Canadian boy who went to get the one man in the world he hated and who succeeded.

Department Exams Are Postponed

NEW DATES HAVE BEEN MADE NECESSARY BY "FLU" EPIDEMIC.

Because of the change made by the Department of Education in the time of the midsummer examinations to be held this year, Hon. Dr. H. J. Cody yesterday issued a statement as to the dates the results will be made known. He said that the public probably would not fully realize the fact that the change had been made and would make their summer plans in accordance with the dates the results were made known in former years. The dates of tho examinations were put off for about two weeks in each case this year because of the unavoidable interruptions to school work last year, chiefly from the influenza epidemic, and there will be a corresponding delay in announcing the results as compared with previous years.

The dates of the examinations as announced are: Junior high school entrance, July 2; junior public school graduation, June 30; lower school, July 2; middle school, July 11; pass matriculation, July 2; upper school and honor matriculation, June 30.

Japanese Idea of Music.

Among the Japanese especially, a directly divine origin is attributed to music. The mythical legend runs that the art was invented by the gods to appease the anger of the sun goddess and to induce her to shine once more upon the earth and upon the other divinities. The melodies which resulted were potent to prevail upon her, and thus was light restored to the world and music and dancing were given for its delight.

Soya Bean Oil Production.

Soya bean oil, which originates principally in Manchuria, is almost entirely controlled by Japanese. The supply of beans last year was very large and the amount of oil turned out was limited only by the capacity of mills. A number of large new plants were started both in Manchuria and Japan and most of the already established mills increased their capacity.

Wasting Light.

A lighting expert says that about $200,000,000 worth of light is wasted every year in this country through failure to keep windows, globes, reflectors and other light sources free from dust and dirt. The lighting bill for the nation is about $510,000,000, and if this expert is right, we are wasting two-fifths of this.

Christmas Box Nuisance.

The Christmas box was at one time greatly in evidence—so much in evidence that it finally became an intolerable nuisance, and the people rose up in rebellion against it. At Christmas time hordes of boys and journeymen and apprentices crowded the shops and ran about the streets in certain parts of England begging coins for the small boxes they carried. One can readily imagine how much of a nuisance the boy might make himself under such circumstances.

Antiquity of Gloves.

Gloves are of great antiquity, having been worn in England as long ago as in Saxon times. Practically the only change which there has ever been in styles of gloves has been in their decoration. Sometimes they were richly adorned with jewels, £5 having been paid for a pair in the fourteenth century.

Like as Not; Like as Not.

As children we used to think that the sardines came from Sardinia. Now Maine cans and sends out $10,000,000 worth a year, and claims there are no better ones on the market. We suppose the olive oil the fish are packed in comes from Mississippi or South Carolina.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Origin of Apple Dumplings.

A dumpling is a good old English dish and comes from the word dumpen, that meant to throw down suddenly and the diminutive ending ling. The idea was a little cake that was made by throwing raw rough dough into boiling water.

JIM SAVAGE PICKS DEMPSEY TO KNOCK OUT JESS WILLARD

Willard's Former Trainer Says Jess Will Take a Lot of Punishment, but Jack Looks Good to Him—Gossip on the Big Fight.

Jim Savage, who assisted in training Jess Willard for his championship battle with Jack Johnson, hazards the rather surprizing opinion that Jack Dempsey will win via the knockout route if the pair ever meet.

"Dempsey isn't a wonder of wonders as a ringman, but just the same he shouldn't have much trouble in knocking out the champion if the bout goes ten or more rounds." asserts Savage. "Willard's only chance for victory, in my opinion is to shoot home his terrible uppercut which will drop any living man who feels the full force of it. But against a man like Dempsey, fast and aggressive, who never stays still the possibility of Willard landing is rather remote.

The natural assumption of many is that because of his great height reach, strength and tremendous bulk Willard can deal out crushing blows from any angle. But that idea is erroneous. Odd as it may seem, Willard can put stunning blows only in his upper cut. Willard's jabs, hooks and straight blows and push-punches nothing more. He lacks the knack of putting snap into those deliveries, And it is the snap that drops men for the count.

"I boxed daily with Willard for nearly a period of two months, and never once did he hurt me with any of his jabs, his hooks or his straight blows. Why? Simply because they were punch-blows. There's a thud to them—and a sting, too. But there isn't power in them sufficient to drop a man with the splendid stamina of Dempsey.

"But that upper cut is something far different. When Jess lets it go with malice aforethought and it hits its mark, something is going to drop. One day in Havana, while I was sparring with him Willard caught me under the chin with that uppercut—and it wasn't carrying all his force behind it. Yet for about ten seconds I thought he had broken my neck, and for nearly an hour I was dizzy and I had a headache for a day. That's a punch—an awful one—and if Jess ever rips it to the head of Dempsey, or into the stomach, Dempsey's championship ambitions probably will end there and then.

"I don't think Willard will be in championship condition by July."

"Why not?"

"Because he hates training as no other nopnotcher ringman has ever hated it," replied Savage. "Take Willard's Havana fight as an illustration When he was matched with Johnson he realized that the opportunity of a life time was before him. And he knew that the vital thing was to get into superb physical condition. Every man interested in him preached the training sermon. Every effort was made to stimulate within Willard an enthusiasm for work. But those efforts were failures.

"Willard had to be driven to his work in Havana. His training program called for long runs every morning. Jess knew as does every athlete that there is nothing more wonderful for building up endurance powers, the wind and the muscles than is cross-country running. But Jess so disliked exertion that instead of running every morning for several miles with Walter Monahan, Tex O'Rourke or myself, he would compromise with a fast walk —and with the championship of the world at stake.

Willard is younger then than he is now. Added years deaden one's enthusiasm for rigorous training. If Willard in 1915 with the heavy weight title of the world within his grasp, wouldn't enthuse about training it isn't logical to suppose that now he cares less for it? And Willard must do at least twice as much training—or training twice as intensive—as was necessary in 1915 Do you think he will do it?

"How do you think Dempsey will accomplish a knockout?"

"He probably will finish the fight with a punch to the jaw," answered Savage.

"But if Dempsey has any idea that he can finish Willard with one or two smashes to the head or several to the stomach, he is very much mistaken. Willard has a mighty solid jaw, and had in 1915, a stomach that seemed to be protected by ten inches of concrete. But there is one spot where he doesn't like to be hit—and that's the place that Dempsey most likely will pick out for his opening target.

"Willard doesn't like to take wallops around the heart. Every fighter has a weakness as far as taking punishment is concerned and that's Willard's weakness. Dempsey undoubtedly will open up with a bombardment for the heart. If he lands often enough and hard enough, it won't be long before he will have Willard in such shape that a little driving for the jaw will finish the fight.

"Another factor in Dempsey's favor is that he is best at in-fighting while Willard's best work is at long range. Dempsey undoubtedly will be the aggressor and will force Willard to fight his way in close. Naturally he will have Willard at a disadvantage. Willard may attempt to keep Dempsey at long range, but Jack isn't the type that will be denied. Undoubtedly he will go tearing in at Willard with the tap of the first gong and keep after him unceasingly.

"Dempsey's program undoubtedly calls for carrying the fight to Willard and never giving the champion a letup. That's a course of action that will favor Dempsey. Being far younger than Willard, faster and with unlimited endurance powers he can travel along at a whirlwind clip without fatigue. Jess can't. He never liked fast work, and now that he is older, heavier and naturally slower, he surely will dislike speed a whole lot more than he ever did before.

"Jess is a friend of mine and a big good-natured, lovable fellow But even this does not change my belief that Jack Dempsey will take his measure in any fight where the distance is more than ten rounds."

Wasted Patience.

He was a green Scottish lad, and one of his duties was to answer the telephone. When first called on to do so, in reply to the usual query: "Are you there?" he nodded assent. Again the question came and again and yet again, and each time the boy gave the answering nod. When the question came for the fifth time, however, the boy, losing his temper, roared through the transmitter: "Man, are ye blin'? I've been noddin' ma heid aff for the last half oor!"—Boston Transcript.

Cubeb.

Cubeb berries are from the climbing plant called Piper Cubeba, native of the West Indies, being extensively cultivated in Java and Sumatra. It is used as local stimulant in indigestion and as a flavoring vehicle in mixtures and gargles. It is valuable particularly in diseases of the mucous membrane, especially of the bronchi. Frequently smoked in cigarettes for their effect on the mucous membrane of the bronchi and larynx.

Bee Farming Has Future.

It is a fascinating business, that of bee farming, and a business which notwithstanding the fact that it dates back to prehistoric times, is even yet an infant industry. Which is to say, it is not one-fourth developed to the potential limit. There is an immense amount of honey wasted every year because there are not enough bees to gather it.

Power for Good and Evil.

Into the hands of every individual is given a marvelous power for good or for evil—the silent, unconscious, unseen influence of his life. This is simply the constant radiation of what a man really is, not what he pretends to be. Life is a state of constant radiation and absorption; to exist is to radiate; to exist is to be the recipient of radiations.

Palm Brushes.

The same Chinese palms which provide the ordinary palmleaf fans are now being cultivated for fiber as well as for leaves. The outer portion of the leaf steins is removed, the fiber cut into different lengths, and the product is ready to be shipped to the United States for use in brush manufacture.

Refresh Your Principles.

When a man starts afresh, either with the newness of a new year or with the stimulus of altered circumstances or with the inspiration of a new work, what his start ought to do for him is to refresh the deepest principles by which he lives.—Phillips Brooks.

Fuel In Greece.

Her supply of coal being stopped by the war, Greece was put to the necessity of finding some substitute within her own boundaries, and accordingly the lignite deposits at Kymi, Peashna Aliveri and Arapes were exploited. More than 100,000 tons of lignite are said to have been mined from these deposits during 1917. A project is now afoot, which has the hearty approval of the Greek Government, to manufacture this lignite into briquets, which for many purposes will be equal, it is thought, to coal. It is hoped that through this means it may become possible to return to gas to Athens and Piraeus. For cooking and heating purposes wood must now be used at very high prices, if one is unable to afford the charcoal which is vended from house to house in strictly limited amounts.

The Vicar's Break.

A vicar was invited to dinner at the house of one of the leading men in the town. At the dinner table he was placed opposite a goose.

The lady of the house was seated on the vicar's left. Seeing the goose, he remarked:

"Shall I sit so close to the goose?"

Finding his words a bit equivocal, he turned round and said:

"Excuse me, Mrs. Blank, I meant the roast one."

Musical Treat For Prescott People

The Prescott Journal of recent date says:

"The people of Prescott enjoyed a great treat in the remarkable piano playing of little Agnes Logan, of Peterborough, on Tuesday evening in Victoria Opera House. All that was said of Miss Logan was proved abundantly true and the large audience was delighted with her wonderful command of the key board. Her playing of Schubert's Impromptu was most musicianly with fine singing tone and phrasing Weber's Movement Perpetual received a brilliant and clean cut rendering that roused enthusiasm in the audience. Her group of Chopin numbers included Etudes No 2 and 7, and the ever popular Ballade. These were played with daintiness, beautiful phrasing and lovely singing tone The Alceste of Saint-Saens was a fine bit of piano playing, showing the young artiste going on from strength to strength as her program advanced. Her final numbers Lavallee's Le Pappillon and Percy Grainger's Shepherds Hey, were the climax of a wonderful feat for a young player Numerous encores were accorded the young artiste and a beautiful basket bouquet of flowers were ingenuously and gracefully received.

Fellowship Tea At All Saints

A very enjoyable and profitable fellowship tea was held by the S.T.S. Young Men's Bible Class of All Saints' Church on Sunday afternoon at five o'clock, at which the members of the class with some of their friends including several recently returned men to the number of thirty eight partook of an excellently arranged tea supervised by a number of the ladies of the congregation. The occasion was distinctly honored by the presence of Bishop Sweeney who was in the city administering the right of confirmation at St. Georges, St. John's and All Saints, Churches His Lordship spoke briefly to the men after tea expressing the hope that the profitable lessons of thrift, service and giving so well learned during the war, might not be lost but should be applied in the extension of Our Master's Kingdom among us. He called attention to the problems of the three R.'s—Reaction, Readjustment and Reconstruction now confronting us and appealed to the men to play their part in conection with the same, guided by the principles of Christ.

The Rector, Mr. Grobb, expressed his pleasure at being present and his appreciation of the efforts of the class.

The interval till the time of leaving for the evening service was spent in becoming beter acquainted and in the hearty singing of several hymns.

COVENANT IS ADOPTED.

Not One Dissenting Voice in the Peace Conference.

Paris, April 29.—The covenant of the League of Nations in revised form moved by President Wilson, was adopted by the Peace Conference in plenary session without a dissenting voice.

Thus one of the notable works of the Conference passes its final stage and is incorporated in the Peace Treaty.

The French and Japanese amendments, after a brief discussion, were not pressed, and the way was thus cleared for unanimous acceptance of the League.

Italy was not represented at the session, but the name of Italy appears as one of the members of the League in the covenant as finally adopted.

Nine Labor principles were adopted for insertion in the treaty.

CARPENTERS HINT AT 65c RATE OF PAY FOR OUTSIDE WORKERS

But Local Would not Discriminate Against Union Men From Outside the City—City Fathers Take Carpenters into Their Confidence.

The City Fathers last evening waited on the Carpenters' Union, called in special session to hear an appeal for co-operation in reducing the cost of the proposed new high-level bridge to a sum within the amount available to the city for construction purposes and all contingencies connected therewith.

The same explanation of the situation were forthcoming from the Council as advanced to the Laborers' Union, resulting in a tentative hint by the carpenters that the union might consider a 65c scale for outside workers and thus effect a saving of 2½c per hour. However, as but some 24 members were inattendance, and the majority of them being canoe men and inside workers, the matter will be laid before the union at its regular meeting tomorrow evening.

Bridge or No Bridge.

Mayor Duncan drove home the fact that unless a saving of some $40,000 or $50,000 is reached in the present estimated cost of the bridge no bridge can be built this year. The Council, he said, has secured a concession of 5c the hour from the laborers and a similar concession from the carpenters might create a saving of $10,000. "I would not suggest any reduction in wages were times good. But men are wanting work, and we are anxious to create work for them." The Mayor added that Council is seeking concessions on supplies.

Ald. Phelan endorsed His Worship's position. "In order to build this bridge we must have," he declared. "reductions in sight before any contract is signed."

Ald. McIntyre said he would not press the men to cut their wages; he believed in the workingman getting pay commensurate with living conditions. Still Council asked their co-operation in any way possible to strengthen Council's hands.

Ald. Morrison said: "I am not here to tell this union what to do. But we have a problem in which we are interested, for should the bridge not be contructed there will be so much less work for outside carpenters. The laborers, the lowest paid men in the city, have made a compromise at 5c an hour, and we would ask you to give our position earnest consideration. Think of it; we are thinking of the problem four or five nights a week. Act as you think best to the advantage of yourselves and the city.

No Representative.

Carpenter Parliament here pointed out that no decision could be reached tonight, as but 24 of 90 members were present, and they are not representative of outside workers. However, he wanted to know if the carpenters made a concession would lumbermen do likewise.

His Worship replied that in referring to material he had cement in his mind, on which a saving can be effected.

Union Principles.

Ald. Edger was satisfied that the men would act in the interest of themselves and of the city.

SCHOOL BOARD PROPOSES TO EMBARK IN REAL ESTATE

Decide to Expropriate 16 Acres of Chamberlain Estate Beyond Monaghan Road For School Location, Surplus Space to be Sold For Desirable Residence Sites.

Peterborough's new public school will be built upon property of the Chamberlain estate lying in North Monaghan south west of the city and comprising 16 acres, according to announcement of Trustee E. G. Patterson, chairman of the Special Building Committee made at a meeting of the Board of Education last night.

Furthermore if the Estate refuses to part with the property for what is considered a reasonable figure, Trustee Patterson stated last night that by virtue of a recently passed amendment to the Schools Act of Ontar the Board of Education can proceed to expropriate this land. Until recently proceedings of this kind could not be taken in such a case unless the school was to be a union institution.

Mr. Patterson stated that $25,000 was the amount offered the Chamberlain estate for the entire parcel of land, comprising 16 acres and that the proposal made to the Board in the interests of the Estate was $3,000 an acre which would amount to $48,000 for the entire purchase. He had informed the agent of the Estate that his offer was perfectly ridiculous and expressed a hope that the matter might be settled by arbitration in which case Mr. Vincent Eastwood, would act in the interests of the Board of Education.

Sketches of the proposed school were on exhibition at the Board meeting last night and Mr. Patterson pointed out some of the advantages of each and stated that the first step to be taken was to request the City Council to pass a By-law authorizing the issue of Debentures to raise a sufficient sum of money to purchase the land after which plans and specifications could be prepared and submitted to the Board for the new school and after being approved tenders could be requested.

As will be noted in the report of the Special Building Committee which was submitted by Mr. Patterson last night and a copy of which appears further down in this article, Mr. Walter R. L. Blackwell, a former Peterborough boy with considerable experience has been recommended as the architect.

Trustee Patterson then read the amendment to the Schools Act which gave Boards of Education power to expropriate land in an adjoining township for a school site. It is as follows: Amendment to Section 5 of the School Sites Act: (2) "The Board of Education for a city may acquire by purchase or otherwise or may expropriate land in the township for the purpose of a school site where such land adjoins a road forming a boundary road between the city and township."

As will be seen from the amendment it could not have been more applicable to the present situation had the legislation been passed with a view to meeting the dilemma of the Peterborough Board of Education.

The report of the Special Building Committee as submitted by Mr. Patterson last night was:

"That an 18 to 20 room South Central School be erected as quickly as possible.

"That the Chamberlain property on the Monaghan Road be acquired as a site for such a school and that the Chairman and the Secretary be hereby instructed to offer the estate $25,000 for it's property comprising approximately 16 acres.

"That the City Council be requested to issue debentures for such a sum of money.

"That in the event of arbitration proceedings Mr. Vincent Eastwood be appointed the representative of the Board.

"That Walter R. L. Blackwell be engaged as the architect of the Board upon the usual terms of 5 per cent of the cost of the building as his fee and that the usual agreement be drawn up by the Board's Solicitor to be executed between the city and the architect and that the chairman and the secretary be authorized to execute the same on behalf of the Board.

"That the architect shall be under the supervision of the Building Committee.

That plans and specifications be prepared and submitted to the Board for approval after which tenders be called for by advertisements in the Peterborough and Toronto papers and also in the Contractor's Journal."

Trustee Patterson moved the adoption of the report which was seconded by Trustee Fowler. G. N. Gordon was the only Trustee who refused to vote for it stating that he had not time to go into the matter as fully as the passage of a motion which would involve expenditure of such a large amount of money demanded.

In the first place Mr. Gordon wanted to know why the Board of Edu-

ALDERMAN TIRES OF CIVIC LIFE; TALKS OF RESIGNING OFFICE

Objects to Criticism of Public With Regard to Hunter Street Bridge—Some of This Criticism Unjust, While Some is Warranted.

There is a vacancy now in the City Council, and there is likely to be another in the not very distant future unless an aldermanic mind undergoes a change. One member of the Council new to the civic arena has wearied of the game, and to a number of his intimate friends has signified his intention of pulling out. In other words, he has trod the bridge which the Board has been attempting to build largely out of heated air until his own pedal extremities have become cold.

Beyond all question there are on the present aldermanic board a number of men with established business reputations. They rank high in the commercial world. Their executive ability has been demonstrated in their own private enterprise. Once they set out to reach a certain goal they rest not until they have attained it with all the dispatch that is consistent with careful procedure.

There are aldermen who have sacrificed their own business interests, who have curtailed their social pastimes in order to give the city the benefit of their experience. They receive no remuneration for their sacrifices, and even the thanks or appreciation of the people is denied them. The tangle over the bridge has given rise to a lot of criticism which some of the aldermen resent, unused as they are to anything of the kind. Then a visiting minstrel troupe begins to joke about the bridge. That was the last straw and the back of the aldermanic camel is at the breaking point. Hence this talk of a return to the peace and security of private life.

In many respects the aldermen have been given a raw deal on the bridge question. For this they may be themselves partly to blame for the reason that they refused to take the people into their confidence. Contract figures published in the papers wer grossly misleading because all the conditions were not stated. The cost-plus tenders of the various contractors differed by several thousand dollars, but a low figure was supplemented by some for plant and machinery, something the papers did not always state.

Still, the aldermen need not lay all the blame upon the public. At least some of the criticism has been justified. What would the members of the Council have done had they constituted a board of directors for a private enterprise planning a new addition to their plant? They would have been granted an appropriation and would have been expected to keep within that estimate. To exceed it would be to bring trouble on their own heads.

The wise tailor cuts his cloth according to the specifications called for by the suit he is about to manufacture. This same principle pervades the entire business world. The aldermen were given $260,000 with which to build a bridge, and keeping within bounds was one of their official duties.

C. P. R. SERVICE TO BE IMPROVED

TRAINS TO AND FROM TORONTO EVERY SUNDAY AFTER MAY 4.

Mr. J. B. Tinning travelling passenger agent of the C. P. R., was in the city today and made an announcement which will please the residents of Peterborough, especially those who have frequent occasion to use this line of railway. What the city has long been after is to be secured at last.

There will be a Sunday train to and from Toronto. The train which now reaches here at 12:25 week days will be run daily, but will arrive in Peterborough twenty-five minutes earlier than at present or at 12 noon exactly. On week days this train will run through to Montreal, but on Sundays it will not go farther than Havelock. It will return to Toronto the same day, leaving here at about the same hour as the present afternoon train. This means easy access to Toronto and return on Sundays, and two trains week days for Montreal, the night train leaving Toronto at about 11.52. The Ottawa train will leave here at 1:30 a.m., or fifteen minutes later than the present schedule calls for.

These changes will become effective on Sunday next.

OFFICERS SECURE HAUL OF WHISKEY

INSPECTOR STEWART AND CONSTABLE MOORE ALSO LAND MAN IN JAIL.

John Johnston is in jail and over 380 bottles of liquor is safe in the custody of the authorities as the result of two hauls made this morning by Inspector Joseph Stewart in company with High Contable Archie Moore

At 4.30 this morning the two officers were at Kendry the first station west of the city on the C.P.R. They waited and when the Montreal train pulled in she stopped at the crossing and four big cases addressed to the Henry Hope Company of Peterborough were heaved out of the door of one of the express cars, onto the road.

Inspector Stewart upon investigating found that each of the big boxes contained smaller cases in which were in all 240 bottles of whiskey.

He brought the liquor to Peterborough and is holding it until the proper time when he will ship it to the Government warehouse in Toronto.

At nine o'clock this morning Inspector Stewart and Constable Archie Moore were driving along the road to Norwood, when they met a team and light wagon with a bulky load covered by a tarpaulin.

Investigation showed that under the canvas were nine new suitcases in each of which were 20 bottles of Gooderham and Wortz whiskey making a total of 180 bottles.

John Johnston, the man in charge of the shipment which had evidently been taken from the train at Norwood and was being brought to the city by wagon was taken into custody and is now lodged in the jail.

MAY DAY STRIKES ARE EXPECTED

CITIES THROUGHOUT CANADA SEETHING WITH UNREST OF WORKINGMEN.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, April 30.—May Day strikes are expected in various parts of Canada. In Toronto, the machinists are expected to be out, interfering considerably with shipbuilding and other industries. There will be big May Day demonstrations in the Arena and in Queen's Park.

In Ottawa a big strike in the building trades is promised, and in other cities conditions are generally unsettled.

In Montreal there will be a big May Day demonstration and it has been officially announced by the mayor that any red flags carried will be confiscated and arrests made.

Brantford, St. Catharines and other cities in Western Ontario were flooded with radical communist literature last night and arrests are expected.

PROSPECTS FOR BRIDGE BLDG. THIS YEAR NONE TOO BRIGHT

Recommendation That Russell-Townsend Tender Be Accepted is Rescinded—Aldermen Play Battledore and Shuttlecock With Problem of Vital Interest to Workingmen.

The more the City Fathers discuss the ways and means for building the proposed high-level bridge—first in the Bridge Committee and then in the Board of Works—the further off they get from reaching any concrete conclusion. The proposition seems to have envolved into a game of battledore and shuttle-cock in which the latter (the bridge) is coming off second best. In fact, as the matter now stands, the people may well be pardoned for concluding to abandon all hope of seeing any start made on the bridge this year. At all events, the culmination of last night's deliberations certainly leaves no room for optimism in this regard.

The Board of Works spent three hours and a half in discussing this, to them vexed problem—part of the time with the Carpenters' Union—and finally passed a resolution rescinding the Board's recommendation that the Russell-Townsend tender be accepted. This resolution is as followed:

Moved by Ald. Taylor, seconded by Ald. Morrison. That the motion of April 22nd, recommending the acceptance of the Russell-Townsend Co's tender for constructing the new high-level bridge on a cost-plus basis be rescinded and that the three tenders who put in a lump sum tender be invited to meet the board in the question of a narrow bridge after definite information is to hand as to just exactly what amount of grant can be expected from the Dominion Government toward a bridge costing less than $350,000, and also as to the wages the Carpenters' Union will demand.

This resolution carried on a vote of 5 to 4. But Ald. Hamilton did not vote; he did not feel like voting either way, he said, and at the same time was not in favor of cancelling the recommendation that the Russell-Townsend tender be accepted. Well had he voted against the resolution a tie division would have avoided the cancellation he objected to.

Then there was no earthly reason for that cancellation clause. As the real end in view was to secure definite information as to wages and the Government grant together with a consultation with contractors on a lump sum proposition for a narrow bridge at a price within the money in sight. However, the present situation has been created, and does not meet with the approval of the majority of those responsible for it, judging by expressions made after adjournment. Ald. Morrison, when questioned why he seconded the resolution, declared he had no idea it would carry. The turn of events has certainly reached in favor of one contractor, who nevertheless, would not secure a majority vote in the consideration of tenders unless some aldermen repudiated their previously expressed convictions. But, of course judging from past experience in this matter that is not impossible. And

ITALIANS STAND BEHIND PREMIER

VOTES OF CONFIDENCE PASSED BY BOTH HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Rome, April 30.—Premier Orlando's government was given a unanimous vote of confidence in the Italian senate, following the vote of confidence given him in the House of Deputies. A great demonstration followed the premier's address before the senate. The vote in the chamber of Deputies was 382 to 40. The ballots opposing the resolution were cast by the Intransigeant Socialists.

Lloyd George Loses Another Seat

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, April 30.—The Coalition Government of Premier Lloyd George has lost another seat in the House of Commons, its fourth since the parliament was elected in December, in the victory of the central district of Aberdeen and Kincardine of Major M. Wood, a Liberal. Major Wood defeated the Coalition Unionist and Labor candidates.

NO FLIGHT TODAY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

St. John's, Nfld., April 30.—A severe rainstorm which raged throughout last night and still continues, renders a flight today unlikely.

HOPE TO SATISFY JAPS AND CHINESE

CONFERENCE BELIEVED TO HAVE REACHED SOLUTION OF FIXING PROBLEM.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 30.—A formula for the solution of the problem of Kiao-Chau, which it is hoped will remove any possibility of a definite break and prove mutually acceptable to the Chinese and Japanese, has been reported by the powers, it was stated in authoritative quarters today. The nature of the indicated solution, however, has as yet not been disclosed.

BUSINESS GOES ON WITHOUT ORLANDO

ABSENCE OF ITALIANS WILL NOT AFFECT THE FINAL ACTION.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 30.—It is planned in Peace Conference Circles to go ahead with the treaty of peace without regard to any action by Italy as it is considered probably the Italian delegation will not return, certainly not within the present week. The delivery of the treaty and the first exchanges with Germans therefore, will occur without the participation of Italy and it is said that this procedure will go forward steadily up till the signing of the treaty. The first reading with Germans will probably occur Friday afternoon or Saturday when the pact will be presented.

The first session of the Peace Congress will be held in the room now used by the Supreme War Council and will be devoted to a verification of credentials. The text of the peace treaty will be presented to the Germans at the second session in the dining room of the Hotel Trianon.

WORK PROBLEM NOT ALARMING

IN BRITAIN ACCORDING TO MINISTER OF LABOR IN LONDON.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, April 30—In defending the Government's policy of donations to the unemployed Sir Robert Stevenson Horne, Minister of Labor, in the House of Commons, today said it was unnecessary to take a gloomy view of the unemployment question. Since the armistice, he said, four million persons have been demobilized from the army and naval forces and from civilian employment, and one million remain unemployed. Eighty per cent of the demobilised soldiers, fifty-five per cent of the civilian males and forty-five per cent of civilian women have been absorbed by peace industries.

This, the minister said, was a remarkable achievement.

Canada is to have a new Air Board.

PRESIDENT TELLS HIS REASONS

FOR TAKING THE STAND HE DID ON ITALIAN QUESTION.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, April 30.—A statement issued last night dealing with the memorandum sent by President Wilson to the Italian delegation on April 14 says:

"I felt bound to square every conclusion that I should reach as accurately as possible with the fourteen principles of peace which I set forth in my address to the Congress of the United States on January 8, 1918, and in subsequent addresses. Personally, I am quite willing that Italy should be accorded along the whole front of her northern frontier and wherever she comes into contact with Austrian territory all that was accorded her in the so-called pact of London, but I am of the clear opinion that the pact of London can no longer apply to the settlement of her eastern boudaries."

Allies Repulse The Bolsheviki

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Archangel, April 30.—British and American troops at Kurgoman, on the right bank of the Dvina, repulsed a strong Bolshevik attack on Sunday night, taking prisoners.

BRIDGE OR NO BRIDGE.

Toronto Man Interested Takes Part in Golf Game.

It is quite evident that the heads of the Russell-Townsend Company are not worrying excessively over the bridge situation in Peterborough.

Mr. Navin, one of the members of the firm who has been in Peterborough for several days in the interests of the company, took advantage this afternoon of the fine weather and went golfing. He intends returning to Toronto upon the 5:30 train this evening.

Winnipeg city council voted against daylight saving by 8 to 5.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 30, 1919

IN THE AIR AGAIN.

FOLLOWING THE FLU epidemic, which claimed five million lives, India, a part of the British Empire, is being ravaged by famine. An appeal for aid has been sent to the civilized world, and already there are organizations being formed in Canada to answer the call.

There is something more than a possibility that hunger, if not actual famine, will yet overtake the people of our own nation and city unless there is a change in industrial conditions. It avails the working classes of Peterborough not at all that there is food enough and to spare in this country if they lack the means to purchase it. The man out of work is certain to find his credit limited with the grocer, the butcher and the fuel dealer.

The members of the City Council had an opportunity to relieve the local situation by beginning public works, the performance of which is mandatory upon the city. These works include the construction of the Hunter street bridge, which would have afforded employment to hundreds of men. After exasperating delay the aldermen have again renounced all their negotiations with a reliable firm of contractors, and stand now just where they did when the first tenders were called for.

On a question involving such outlay there was certain to be a difference of opinion among citizens and aldermen alike. But these differences should have been disposed of long ago, if the same methods were pursued as would be followed by a private corporation dealing with a similar matter. Can it be that the aldermen have been upset by popular clamor and by the threat of an injunction which would involve them in litigation? If aldermen elected by the people are not to be allowed a free hand, if they are to be swayed by every objection which is made to their discussions, then the objects of popular election are defeated.

Unused to such delay and vacillation, a number of the contractors who sent in tenders have abandoned the field. The one reliable outside firm left in the negotiations were assured of the acceptance of their offer by a majority of the committee. Now the finding of that committee has been rescinde. No one need be surprised if the Russell-Townsend people, too, decline further consideration of the proposition and that the Council will go begging for tenders from reliable firms.

The present Hunter street bridge has not been condemned as unsafe for traffic. It could probably be made to answer the purposes of ordinary traffic for years to come But that is not the point. The city is under obligation to the Quaker Oats Company to build a high level bridge, work to be started this year. That is one reason why the aldermen should shake themselves out of the inertia which seems to have overwhelmed them and get the work started.

Another reason is that the working population of Peterborough requires employment. That is a serious local issue today, and by giving them this employment the city could achieve a double purpose, helping its own people and at the same time carrying out the terms of an agreement entered into with one of the leading manufacturing firms in the city.

But now, the aldermen, having cleared the decks, may begin a new action. There are still the points as between a concrete and a steel bridge, between a single and a double track structure, to be disposed of, but with all the discussion that has been had on the subject, the way to a final settlement should be comparatively easy

"A KING CAN MAKE a belted knight," as Burns says, but nature alone can create a Harry Lauder, who was designed for something better than a mere camp follower of the nobility.

UNIFORM WAGES AND HOURS.

ONE OF THE DUTIES with which the new League of Nations is to be charged is the equalising of labor conditions in every country that is a party to the agreement. A uniform work day of eight hours is the goal, and so far as possible the same rate of wages is to prevail all over the civilized world. The industrial millennium, the condition which so many have hoped and prayed for, is on the way.

If there is to be general industrial harmony brought about by the ministrations of the League, once it gets in working order, a start could be made if the workers help on the movement. It is possible for labor union to work injury to its members simply by excessive demands upon the employers.

There are contractors in this city, men who under different conditions would have large forces of workmen under them, but who are now going around carrying a box of tools and who are employed just in the same way as are the regular wage-earners. These men say that they cannot afford to hire labor at the present local rates. There are no contracts available indirectly for the same reason. They allege that if there is industrial stagnation here the unions have themselves to blame and that there must be a change in labor's attitude before the local situation can show anything like improvement.

It is not so important that wages should be high or low as that they should be uniform all over the province and that the same number of hours should be worked by the members of every trade. Unless this is done, the work of the country is likely to be carried on in those communities where the labor conditions are the most desirable from the employer's standpoint. Let it once be made public that wages are abnormally high in a certain city and that place at once goes on the black list of manufacturers who are looking for a change of location or who are planning to open up new branches. Furthermore the announcement of high pay and easy hours will attract workmen from all over the country, and the result is that labor is handicapped by its own competition.

A number of the aldermen, members of the Bridge Committee, and workingmen of the city, had a conference the other night. The only regret—mutually entertained we have no doubt—in connection with the affair, is that such a method of developing harmony was not adopted long ago. Some members of the civic delegation have expressed something like surprise at the fact that the workingmen received them courteously, that they were disposed to listen to reason, and that they were capable of giving intelligent expression to their opinions. On the other side, no doubt, the conclusion was reached that even the orthodox variety of alderman is after all, considerably human in his aspirations for promoting the general welfare. At all events, a compromise was reached, and the building of the bridge was brought one degree nearer to the range of possibility.

Great reforms always are developed from small beginnings. If a uniform wage scale and working day are aimed at the world over, then the labor unions of Canada should help to inaugurate the movement by bringing about such a condition at home. Once the workers' wages are uniform, the cost of living in the various communities will automatically adjust itself, depending as it does almost entirely upon the rate of pay earned by the toilers.

HUNDREDS are hungry for bread, thousands for wealth, and millions for perpetual peace.

THE PRAIRIE FARMER'S MACHINERY.

THE WESTERN GRAIN GROWERS complain that the machinery which they use in their business is costing them too much and that their expenses in this department are away in excess of those in the East, and investigation will show that the Western farmer is in this case under no delusion. But he has himself, not the fiscal policy of the country, to blame.

Travellers through the Prairie Provinces have noticed the sad lack of thrift that characterizes so many of the land owners. The farmers' plows, binders and wagons are left out at winter, as a rule, exposed to the weather, and the result is that more machinery is ruined by neglect than is worn out in active service. The farmer deplores the expense to which he is put for machinery, and demands a lowering of the tariff, that being the only panacea which he can think of. An outbuilding in which to house his machinery between the seasons when it is not in active use is really what is required. The results would be not only more immediate but would be vastly more to the purpose. British Columbia has vast stores of timber that he owners are anxious to dispose of. The wheat growers will be welcomed as customers. There is a market for lumber on the prairies, a market that should be preserved for the home producer instead of being thrown open to the American lumbermen.

The Western grain growers and the Canadian manufacturers find themselves at variance with regard to the relative prices of American and Canadian-made machinery. The former contend that they can buy their machinery cheaper across the border. The manufacturer challenges this assertion and a deadlock in opinion results. This is a matter which should he easily and conclusively settled, and that is exactly what has been done.

The Canadian Reconstruction Association has made an investigation of such prices at a number of points in Western Canada and at places directly south in the United States. The quotations given herewith are average retail one-payment prices in the United States for 1919. Spring delivery of a standard seven-foot binder equipped with sheaf carrier and fore carriage, as compared with the highest retail one-payment prices in the districts mentioned in Canada. The prices are for implements which compete regularly in foreign markets, where Canadian-made binders are sold for even a higher price than the binder made in the United States, thus establishing its superiority beyond all question. Here are the figures:

COMPARISON NO. 1
Grand Forks, North Dakota	$240
Devil's Lake, North Dakota	$245
Any point in Manitoba as far north as Dauphin and west to the border of Saskatchewan	$248
COMPARISON NO. 2
Williston, North Dakota	$250
Regina, Moosejaw or any point in Southern Saskatchewan to west of Morse	$259
COMPARISON NO. 3
Havre, Montana	$290
Maple Creek or any other point in Southwestern Saskatchewan	$261
COMPARISON NO. 4
Great Falls, Montana	$300
Lethbridge, Calgary, Edmonton, or any point in Southern Alberta	$266

For comparison, the binder has been considered, because it is a fairly standardized implement. In the case of drills, mowers and certain other farm machinery there is a wide difference in the products of various manufacturers, and the price comparisons are apt to be misleading. Comparison is possible, however, between the prices of wagons. The inquiry made by the Canadian Reconstruction Association, and supported by actual signed orders, seems to show that a purchaser in Southern Manitoba pays $163.50 (one-payment, retail price) for a 3½-inch arm, 3-inch tire, Canadian-made wagon, complete with seat and box, while a farmer at Devil's Lake, North Dakota, has to pay for a comparable wagon $170.00. The price at Havre, Montana, appears to be $185.00 a compared with $168.00 at Maple Creek, or any other point in Southwestern Saskatchewan.

What, then, in the face of the above comparisons, becomes of the Western farmer's contention that the tariff is working him an injustice in the matter of machinery? Is it fair on the part of the Western farmer to ask for conditions that will make it possible for him to make up a loss of fifty per cent. in the cost of his machinery, a loss which is incurred by the shiftless policy of leaving his expensive binder out in all kinds of weather?

THE TREATY OF PEACE will be signed in the famous Hall of Mirrors. This will give the German delegates a chance to see themselves, but, unfortunately, not as others behold them.

THE CHURCH AND PREMIER

(Christian Guardian.)

The speech of Sir William Hearst on the occasion of the third reading of the Government bill to submit to the electors of the province a referendum on the temperance issue has been accepted generally as a clear, straightforward, unequivocal and satisfactory deliverance. The Premier gave a convincing answer to those who during recent weeks have been inclined to think that he was weakening in his attitude toward the great temperance issue, and making an effort to get from under any responsibility in regard thereto by submitting the question to the people for their judgment upon it. Both the bill, and his splendid address given last week in relation to it, show clearly and beyond any question that his attitude toward the temperance issue is just as it was when he introduced the Ontario Temperance Act, and that he is ready now, as he was then, to take the risk of bitterly antagonizing the liquor interests by bringing forward the legislation that seems to him to be in the highest interests of the country. No one can have any doubt but that the Ontario Temperance Act, the Referendum Bill just passed, and the man who is most responsible for the both of them are alike anathema to the liquor interests and the friends of the traffic of all kinds and degrees, who would be more than glad of an opportunity to wreak their vengeance in any way that lay to their hand. And this situation undoubtedly lays upon the temperance people of the province of all shades and varieties, the responsibility of giving some slight expression of appreciation for the service which the Premier has rendered the cause in which they are so keenly interested. Sir William has incurred very bitter hostility by the course he has pursued, and it is only fair to think that on the other side his action ought to call forth the warmest kind of appreciation and gratitude.

And it will be all the easier to give him this since his last action in the bill which passed last week submitting the liquor issue to the people, is so manifestly fair and satisfactory. When it became known definitely that the question was to be submitted to the people by a bill to be prepared during the recent sessions of the House some pessimists among the temperance folk were sure that we would have a ballot loaded against us in one way or another. But a careful study of the question as submitted under the guidance of the Prime Minister himself very clearly and convincingly indicates that is what we have not got. In fact, it would be very difficult to see how the whole matter at issue could be presented to the people in a fairer or more simple or more easily understandable way. The people of the province who favor temperance legislation from any point of view or to any extent will have the opportunity of giving expression to their convictions in a fair way, and this is all that any kind of temperance man should ask for. And it is only fair to remark that it would have been very easy to have prepared a ballot that would have fulfilled any pledges that had been made and yet that would have been very far from satisfactory

And, of course, unlike some referendums in the political history of Canada. we are assured that the will of the people as expressed in the voting will be implemented by the Government in full and honest fashion. The temperance people can enter the campaign with the great satisfaction that it gives them the opportunity of settling this issue for all time to come If the No's have it on the entire ballot submitted, the liquor evil in the province may not be killed absolutely, but the last action on the part of the people looking toward its complete annihilation will have been taken. That much is sure and without any controversy. And the decision stands on a majority vote of all citizens which now thank God, includes the women What more, indeed, can we ask for than has been given us?

And this final submission of the question follows a somewhat extended experience of prohibition within the province. For that we have every reason to be grateful, and grateful in a personal way to the Premier whose positiveness and conviction made that experience possible It is, of course, easy to point out more or less serious imperfections and irregularities in the working out of the Ontario Temperance Act, but it ought to be very much easier for the temperance people of the province to show how it has nevertheless, proved an unparalleled boon and blessing to the province through many dark and critical months. And Sir William's decision to postpone the taking of the vote not only until the soldiers are all home, but until they have been home for a long enough period to be able to come to some judgment for themselves as to the working of prohibition, is eminently fair and satisfactory.

And, speaking of the returning soldier, we are glad that Sir William took occasion to answer the criticism that has been made of the passing of the Ontario Temperance Act in certain quarters, supposedly in the interests of the soldier overseas. So far from the passing of that act during his absence being a curtailing of his liberty when he was not here to defend it, Sir William very convincingly pointed out that the Ontario Temperance Act enabled those who stayed at home in the province to serve the cause to which the soldier was giving his life as that cause could not possibly have been served unless a measure of prohibition had been introduced. Prohibition Ontario helped to win the war as licensed Ontario could not have done, a statement to which any common-sense and observing man would be quite willing to subscribe. And surely no case of injustice against the soldiers can be made out when the matter of the final decision of the issue is purposely left over until he is here to express his convictions. And while we do not think he average soldier has any appreciation for this would-be champion of his rights to whom the Premier made such convincing reply. we are glad that he saw, as we all ought to see, the necessity of going out of the way a little to answer in a straightforward and reasonable way any argument that may be used in an effort to stir up sectional or class feeling, and prevent an absolutely fair and unprejudiced registration of conviction touching this matter of the very gravest and most far-reaching importance

PROSPECTS FOR

'tis a pity that so much vacillation and decision has characterized the proceedings in connection with this proposed bridge that minstrel shows make it a subject for jest and Peterborough stands to lose its credit in "contracting" circles as a dependable corporation in so far as tendering is concerned.

Off to Ottawa.

On motion of Ald Turner, the Mayor and Ald Phelan will wait on the Minister of Railways and Canals at an early date to ascertain how much of a grant will be forthcoming on a bridge costing less than $350,000.

The Board of Railway Commissioners have replied that they would consider the city's application for a grant toward changing the level of the approaches to the bridge to an overhead crossing of the tracks. It is understood that there is a fund for grants amounting to 20 per cent the cost of construction of such work.

Another Tender.

Ed. Conroy submitted another tender, which read as follows: "$13,000 for use of plant and fees, estimated cost $230,000—a total of $243,000 on he cost-plus basis."

Mayor Duncan: "We have no right to consider that tender now that all the other tenders have been published

Ald. Hamilton: "We asked for a lump sum tender, and still considered and recommended acceptance of a cost-plus proposition."

Ald Taylor thought Conroy's prices had been very fair throughout

On motion of Ald Taylor and Morrison, this tender was received and slated for later consideration.

Wages in Other Cities.

The following rates of wages in other cities were to hand:

St. Catharines—Laborers on sewers 40c hour; on road work, 35c; garbage collection, 35c; street cleaning, 33½c; carpenters, 60c, 65c an hour from May first.

London Laborers, 30 to 35c hour; teamsters, 35c; carpenters, 50c.

Hamilton—Laborers 40c hour; carpenters, 45c; outside carpenters on building construction are asking 65c; mechanics 40 to 50c.

Woodstock—Laborers, 20 to 30c; carpenters, 40 to 45c an hour.

St Thomas—Laborers, 30 to 40c an hour; carpenters $5 to $6 a day.

Ottawa—Laborers, 35c an hour; carpenters, 55c; carpenters' helpers, 25c; garbage men 35c; all working nine hours a day and 5 hours Saturday. A 44-hour week is to come in force here shortly, the wages to equal up to the same amount each week as previously

For Residents Only.

Ald. Edgar proposed that in the event of the city going on with the bridge, all applicants for work thereon be required to register with the engineer that they have been resident in the city prior to April 1st. He did not believe in men flocking into the city after employment needed by our men, who are either directly or indirectly ratepayers. He moved in this direction, seconded by Ald Garside.

His Worship opposed the resolution on the ground that should labor grow scarce contractors would be handicapped in securing help.

Ald. Edgar: "Under such conditions the provision ould be amended."

Ald. Hamilton: "Teamsters living just across our borders would be shut out, and they should be considered as one might need them."

To Ald Morrison, Ald. Edgar replied that a returned soldier is a resident of Peterborough if this is his home town.

Ald. MacIntyre said our own men would get preference on the bridge, resolution or no resolution.

Ald Gainey: "There will only be 80 or a 100 men employed on the bridge; such a resolution is not necessary."

Ald. Edgar: "All the more need for restriction to Peterborough resident if only a hundred men are to be employed.

Ald. Gainey: "This would shut out men quite recently returning who have been absent on work—for the Quaker Oats for instance. One such family is only coming back this week."

The Mayor and Ald. McIntyre declared that the contract would protect Peterborough citizens.

Consequently the Carpenters' Union when the aldermen waited on them in regard to wages, opposed the resolution, and it was subsequently withdrawn.

Avoid 18 Months' Trouble.

In a discussion of the reputability of contractors and their tenders, his Worship said: "I am in favor of letting the contract to men who will work in the best interests of the city. I do not want eighteen months' trouble with any other kind of men."

Ald. Taylor: "If the work is to be done on a cost-plus basis, we might as well let the contract to local people. There are as good men in the city as the Russell-Townsend people."

Ald. Hamilton: "I don't agree with you on that; the Russell-Townsend people have evidence of their ability in bridge work in Toronto and elsewhere."

It was here advanced that a narrow bridge would save $25,000, and the aldermen again focussed their eyes on a narrow structure, which none of them realy want.

That Injunction.

City Solicitor Widdifield advised the board that injuction proceedings would be instituted if the council involved the ratepayers in an expenditure beyond the amount they had voted. But he also gave some other advice which might consistently have been heeded. The solicitor also urged that Council ascertain just exactly how much of a grant can be secured from the Government before jumping to conclusions.

Dr. Reid's letter in this regard stated that "$50,000 had been placed in the estimates as a grant towards a $350,000 bridge, but he did not say this amount would be curtailed were the work to cost less than $350,000.

TIGHT SKIRTS HERE AGAIN

AND THAT AFTER EVERYBODY HAD ARRIVED AT THE CONCLUSION THAT THEY WERE GONE FOR EVER.

The wise ones said that they would never come back. Women would stand a good deal for fashion, said the critical observers, but there was a limit. Make them uncomfortable enough, was the prophecy, and they will be in the mood to say "Never again."

Well, they made them uncomfortable enough a few years ago before the short skirts came in. Skirts were made so tight that a woman wearing one could scarcely walk, and as for a step she had to jump that, "with both feet." The name "hobble skirt" became a term of derision. The thing itself became a profound and amazing spectacle, cases that wouldn't go over the shoulders the victims had to step into them as a man might step into one leg of his trousers.

And now they have come back

Take warning. Never prophesy about the fashions.

When Fashion gets its stride it is just as likely as not to decide that it won't have any stride.

The ultra fashionable girl of today will never get into her stride until she gets out of her skirt.

The long choke-bored skirt that is now in evidence will not permit a woman to take more than one-half of the step that nature intended. The normal stride for a man is from 27 to 31 inches, all depending upon his conformation. For women the normal is eight inches less. Now, with a skirt that only permits one heel to be deposited ten inches in front of the other, what chance has the athletic girl got to be happy?

There is but one form of costume known to the world that is in the same class for absolute obstruction of movement. That one is the Japanese court dress, so designed that the long folds fall far below the feet and the wearer, walking on her own dress has the appearance of approaching the court on her knees.

Feet Binding

In the old days of China, it is true, the binding of the feet gave to women the same restricted hobble, but that was due to the compression of the feet and not the construction of the garments. With the coming of women into politics, war and athletics, and the new freedom of the sex, the new skirt is exciting a lot of comment. The girl who had been wearing something so much like the male uniform that one has to look at the curls under the cap to tell which is which is going to have a tough time trying to cut down her martial step to carry the ball and chain of fashion. And the advocates of physical culture, artists, lovers of the beautiful do not by any means look upon the departure with favor.

Their viewpoint, however, will cut little figure if the women want to be hobbled, unless the record of centuries reverses itself. There never was a gown designed, however, inartistic, that didn't find a certain number of devotees.

The new skirt has at least these interesting points: It attracts attention and it excites masculine curiosity as to what the sex will be wearing next.

Dangerous at Times

The serious objection to it is the fact that it is absolutely dangerous to attempt to navigate in it during a rush hour; that it is a time loser, and an inadequate garment for any woman who expects to climb stairs, street cars, buses or taxis.

The trim, short skirt which has found favor the past season came in for considerable criticism when it was first worn. There were those who objected in no mild way to the "scandalous expose. However, trim ankles and a bit of hosiery below the skirt's hem are Quaker costumes compared with the appalling creations of today.

In a recent lecture at one of the best women's colleges in this country, the physical culture teacher devoted her energy in a caustic plea to the young women to refrain from adopting the new style of dress. In part, she said:

"Women have been fighting for many years to be given equality with men. We have made a splendid showing and have earned the recognition of men and nations. The work we accomplished in the industrial and war relief work during the great war gave us our place in the sun. The Canadian woman on account of her splendid physical ability and great good health was able to do, and did do, a man's work in factory, office and shop. Her condition was built up by years of sane athletics by sensible clothes, by directed effort along the best rules of health. The fine swinging stride of the Canadian woman has given her wonderful vitality. Is it possible that the Canadian woman will forget for one moment how she has earned the title of the best physical type of woman and hobble herself in clothes that will not permit her to walk?

Style a Monstrosity

"The style is a monstrosity, but I am not here to discuss modes. I am here to impress upon you young women the great need of keeping up your fine record of physical perfection which has been obtained through your physical culture work in the gymnasium.

"One of the young women called my attention to some of the new gowns that she had just received from New York and enthusiastically exclaimed over the width of the bottom hem. It measured a scant 18 inches.

"When I commented on its grotesqueness and asked how she possibly expected to be able to walk in it she naively remarked:

"It's the style, so I'll have to learn."

The instructor wound up her remarks by begging the girls not to wear the hobble skirt or revert to the silly styles of past ages.

"A certain type of Canadian woman in her madness for fashion loses all sense of proportion. She is spoiling her beautiful body by destroying its fine lines. She does not consider that she is dressing to please the man who cares nothing at all about how she looks, but who makes dresses and ribbons and flowers merely to sell."

While the controversy is raging it is interesting to note that fashion experts are loud in their praise of the graceful new silhouette; that the manufacturers of hosiery are sending out glorified stocking to wear with this new mode; that the satin pump to match the gown is the favored shoe and that the heels are quite the highest we have seen in many a day.

THE JOY OF MOTHERHOOD

Mrs. Phillips Sends an Encouraging Letter to Expectant Mothers

West Philadelphia, Pa.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for five months before my baby was born and it has made me much better in health. I was always very ill when my other children were born, but with this one I had a much easier time. He is a big healthy boy now, three years old, and I believe it was Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that made me so well. It is certainly a good medicine for every woman. I cannot say too much in its favor, and you may publish my testimonial."—Mrs. W. PHILLIPS, 5420 Kingsessing Avenue, West Phila., Pa.

The reason that thousands of women from all parts of the country write such letters is that this famous old root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, has brought health and happiness into their lives, once burdened with pain and illness.

For special advice in regard to such ailments write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of its many years experience is at your service.

CROSS, FEVERISH CHILD IS BILIOUS OR CONSTIPATED

LOOK, MOTHER! IF TONGUE IS COATED GIVE "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS."

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs," that this is their ideal laxative because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative,' and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs' handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

PROSPECTS FOR

get a contract all ready for signing, and then would we get the $50,000 we would be safe in proceeding with the work under the contract already recommended."

Go Ahead, Anyway.

Ald McIntyre did not care, he said, who got the contract so long as it was let on a lump sum basis. He urged proceeding with the work under such a contract, and should there not be enough funds to finish the bridge on the plans in their entirety or as amended, then eliminate some other trimmings to keep within the money votd. As a last recourse work could be stopped when the money appropriated had been exhausted and the Council go to the peole once more.

It appears there is some doubt as to just what depth a contractor would have to go for at least one pier, and conditions might arise which would incur extra expense, collectable even under a lump sum contract.

Ald. Hamilton: "If changes during building are contemplated, then we had bettter accept the cost-plus proposition.

Conroy's Tenders.

Ed. Conroy's tenders were here again dug up and discussed. Taking his detailed estimates as a basis for figuring, it was concluded that his proposition for a lump sum contract would be as follows: Wide bridge, with deductions, $271,806.05. Narrow bridge, with deductions, $251,000.

Council has $260,000 voted, which with $50,000 from the Government would give them $310,000 to work on. Allowing $10,000 for land damages and engineering, their position in the event of accepting one of Conroy's tenders on a lump sum basis would be as follows:

Cost, wide bridge	$311,806.05
Cash assured	310,000.00
	$1,806.05
Cash assured	$310,000.00
Cost narrow bridge	291,000.00
Credit	$19,000.00

Who's Who?

The public should realize that all the Council constitutes the Board of Works, and every member except Ald. Murray was present last night.

LESSONS IN RIGHT LIVING

By Dr. W. A. BRADY

In the finest weather we can conceive, in the ideal, temperate autumn season here in the healthiest climate in the world, the recent influenza epidemic prevailed. Unfortunately this puts a quietus on the antiquated notion that the grip is somehow associated with damp, chilly, stormy, cold, dry, windy or some other brand of abnormal weather. There was enough rain to keep down dust; there was no snow or slush to cause wet feet; there were no sudden changes of weather. Howinsamhill the grip came about under such conditions the old yarb doctors have not explained.

We know that overheated air is excessively dried out. At 65 degrees Fahrenheit, the winter air still contains a fair amount of moisture, but at 70 degrees Fahrenheit the same air is excessively dry, and at 74 degrees it rivals the air of Sahara. And we know that this desert air in which so many of us spend the greater part of the winter is the cause of the dryness, harshness, roughness, chapping and irritation and itching of the skin with which so many suffer in winter weather. To ascribe the trouble to the weather, however, is about as reasonable as it would be to ascribe diphtheria, pneumonia or typhoid fever to impure blood.

The best climate for one with pulmonary tuberculosis or chronic bronchitis or so-called chronic "catarrhal" trouble in the nose or throat is the arctic climate, for in the far north the respiratory diseases are extremely uncommon. It is rather difficult to account for the absence of pneumonia and of alleged "colds" generally reported by polar exploring parties, unless we assume that the members of such parties acquire a reasonable doubt that exposure predisposes to any respiratory disease.

Even those medical authorities who hold that exposure predisposes to respiratory disease are beginning to feel a trifle uneasy about it, for in the past few years they have devoted considerable energy to the vain attempt to prove by animal experimentation that exposure to wet and cold does invite respiratory disease. The experiments have proved a dismal failure thus far, but the authorities still cling to the good old delusion for all the comfort and satisfaction there is in it, because when you don't know precisely what is wrong with a patient you can call it a "slight cold," and as a general rule he is willing to accept that. Thus we find the catching cold phobia perpetuated in the medical literature of the day, for what a medical author doesn't know, but lifts from authors who have gone before, fills the greater part of his book.

Grandma At Her Old Trick.

"Our baby is five months old, partly breast fed, partly bottle fed. When she was four months old my mother-in-law began to feed her chocolate candies until I refused to allow it any longer. She declares she raised three of the healthiest boys and fed them candy from the third month. The baby now has patches of eczema behind both ears and beside the eyes. What is your opinion?

"MRS. W. G."

Three of grandma's boys may have survived in spite of her, but I'll wager she killed as many as she raised. They seldom count the failures when telling about how they raised their babies. You fail to mention what you feed the baby. The eczema may be due to an excess of sugar or starch in the food.

Bush League Surgery.

"What is the difference between minor and major surgery? I am informed that our doctor can do only minor surgery.

"K. H. M."

It is merely an arbitarary distinction between serious operations and less serious ones. "Eminent" or "well known" surgeons have a way of making every operation a major one, whereas the unpretentious country doctor makes light of the same work. The anaesthetic is immaterial. A general anaesthetic is often necessary for a minor operation and a major operation may be done under local anaesthesia.

SHOEMEN INVITE INVESTIGATION

READY TO EXPLAIN TO FARMERS WHY PRICES ARE HIGH

Following a meeting which had been convened by the Canadian Trade Commission for discussing the possibilities of export trade by the boot and shoe manufactures of Canada, at which exception was taken to criticism of prices and methods in the boot trade in Canada in the Farmers' Platform. a resolution was adopted by the executive to extend an invitation to a committee of the Canadian Council of Agriculture to investigate conditions in any of the Canadian shoe plants. Members also pledged themselves to give every assistance to that committee in their investigations, as they expressed the desire to have the facts in the boot trade made widely known.

NEW SERVICE TO NEW YORK

Visitors to New York City will be glad to know that the Grand Trunk Railway are inaugurating on May 4th, 1919, a through Sleeping Car Service from Toronto to New York, leaving Toronto 5.45 p.m. daily, and arriving in Gotham at the Pennsylvania Terminal. What Soldiers Say About the Y.M.C.A.

Lt.-Col. W. P. Purney, Dominion President, Great War Veterans' Association, Sydney, N.S. Jan. 23, 1919.

"There is no bone of contention between the G.W.V.A. and the Y.M.C.A. The Y.M.C.A. has done a work that no other institution could or would do. Speaking as president of the organization, and for our members, I wish the Y.M.C.A. God-speed in their splendid work."

Philip Gibbs, War Correspondent, London Chronicle.

"I want to pay a very big tribute, my warmest tribute to the work of the Y.M.C.A. Very quickly after each battle these men of the Y.M.C.A. brought out their tents and equipments, by means of which they could give hot cocoa, coffee and cigarettes to these men in the lines, and words cannot say what a cup of coffee meant to men plastered in white clay like those I have described. I remember seeing and marvelling at the rapidity with which the Y.M.C.A. got up their tents and equipment under Vimy Ridge, within a few hours of the capture of that place."

Major General Sir David Watson, Quebec, P.Q., Commanding Officer, 4th Canadian Division.

"The Y.M.C.A. over here is doing a most noble work, and I am proud of the work that is being carried out by the Canadian Y.M.C.A."

No. 456823, Pte. F. Frieman, 21st Battalion.

"On behalf of the boys who travelled from Halifax I really take pleasure in thanking you for the splendid work done by your representative on the train. Judging by unfavorable reports, I, while in England, had been prepared for a neglected welcome of returned soldiers. But I am glad to say they are more than well looked after on the road to their homes, and in Halifax."

T. A. Hector, Regina.

"I would like to take this opportunity before finally leaving the Military Service of thanking you and the Y.M.C.A organization, first for the many good things I enjoyed in France, and secondly for the cheerful, helpful work during the journey homeward. I voice the appreciation of many others."

Signaller L.D. Smith, Belmont, Manitoba, 43rd Battalion.

"Let no man now say anything against the Y.M.C.A. to me, or he will get what for if I catch him. It is in France we found the great need of the Y.M.C.A., and, believe me, it is a Godsend to the boys in the trenches."

Driver E. L. Milton, Vancouver, B.C., 45th Battery.

"The prices charged by the Y.M.C.A. canteens are rivalled by no other canteens, and more than that they sell Canadian goods—Canadian cigarettes, Canadian maple sugar, milk, fruit, and cereals. I cannot see anything wrong with the Y.M.C.A., and if the people at home knew its real value to the boys at the front they would give it all the support it needs."

Corporal G. Waterman, Vancouver, B.C.

"I think that this idea of a representative of the Y.M.C.A on the homecoming troop trains is an excellent one, and I hope that it will be continued until the last Canadian comes home."

Y.M.C.A. Budget for 1919

THE total budget of the National Council of the Canadian Y.M.C.A. this year calls for an expenditure of $2,869,669 The cost of the Y.M.C.A. work for the soldiers overseas, estimated at $1.350,000 for eight months ending August 31st, will, it is expected, be provided for by the balance of funds on hand overseas, by the liquidation of overseas assets and 1919 canteen earnings. CARROLL BROS. GIVEN WATCHES

DOWNEYVILLE FRIENDS HONOR TWO VETERANS BACK FROM OVERSEAS.

(Special Correspondence).

Downeyville, April 30.—On Wednesday night last, a very large crowd attended the presentation to Ptes. William and Lawrence Carroll. The following is the address which was read and presented to them.

Dear friends:

The flags of battle are furled, the bugle no longer sounds the call to arms; the dove of peace once more hovers over the earth; and the nations rejoice. What a contrast does not the world today present to the turmoil that existed during the recent past. The story of your lives for the past two years illustrates this contrast. The flag of your adopted country led you forth to the battle that raged across the ocean in the distant land of France, and many a time you answered the call of the bugle and the beat of the drum when your turn came to do your share in the difficult task of subduing the enemy. Your labors in the arduous role of soldiers are now ended and you are here this evening safe and sound in the midst of friends, who rejoice over your return. We congratulate you on your safe arrival in your native land, and we desire to convey to your parents the expression of our great pleasure over the fact that their deep anxiety about your safety is now happily ended.

We regret to learn that you are to leave in a few days for the United States. We had hoped that you would remain longer at home and thus afford us a better opportunity of preparing a more fitting reception for you. However, we trust that the heartiness of our welcome to you will make amends to all defects, and that you will return soon to share in the reception we are planning for all our soldier boys. Our best wishes go with you, and we pray that God will protect you as He did during the terrible ordeal of war.

Before you go, we ask your acceptance of these watches in token of the esteem in which you are held by your friends at Downeyville and as an expression of the appreciation we entertain of the valiant part you played in the great war that was fought for the ideals of civilization.

Signed on behalf of your friends.

Mr. Coughlin of Peterborough was a visitor to Downeyville cemetery on Monday setting up a monument.

Mr. Stanley Lucas who was home for Easter, returned to Toronto, where he will renew his former studies.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

ARE YOU A SPENDTHRIFT ?

You have an asset more valuable than money. If you spend your money there is a chance to make it up by earning more, but if you squander your reserve force of eyesight by the simple means of neglecting to give them proper attention when they fall from overwork or any cause, you can't get new eyes. Eyesight is priceless. Wouldn't it be wisdom to let Dr. Fowler examine your eyes and tell your their exact condition?

MANUFACTURERS NEED NOT WORRY OVER TARIFF ISSUE

Mr. Burnham Assures Ex-Ald. Worth That no Serious Changes Are at All Probable

The following correspondence has recently been passed between ex-Ald. Worth, one of the leading manufacturers of the city, and J. H. Burnham M.P., with regard to the tariff agitation now before Parliament.

The Bonner-Worth Co. Ltd.
Peterborough, April 28, 1919.
Mr. J. H. Burnham, Ottawa.

Dear Sir—At a meeting of the Canadian Woollen Manufacturers in Toronto last Tuesday there was a great deal of anxiety on account of the rumours we are hearing and also the agitation from the western farmers regarding the tariff.

I think I have seen in the press from time to time your attitude regarding the tariff that you are in favor of keeping it at a sensible level, but I thought I would just drop these few lines to you as this agitation has already effected us to the extent of making our directors decide not to go on with the plant for weaving cloth which we intended to start this year, and were ready to spend $200,000, and would have given employment to at least 100 people, and you know as well as I do that this employment is needed at the present time in Peterborough.

Yours very truly.
(Sgd.) E. WORTH

Mr. Burnham's Reply.
Ottawa, 29th April 1919.

Dear Mr. Worth, Your letter re extensions and the tariff is one of many that I have received. I do not think you need be alarmed. We do not propose and the Canadian people do not propose I am quite sure to hand this country over to foreign exploiters in order that they may wreck our magnificent industries, our home-market and the almost unequalled growth and development of Canadian efficiency and national strength. Prices here and across the line except in a few cases on both sides of it are practically the same, and no argument from facts can be made that will satisfy the Canadian people with any other system than such a one as we now have which develops and steadies home conditions and prevents the importation of free foreign or oriental labour and its products to the ruin of our own labor conditions. Canada can support a people in a high state of civilization and comfort even if it was the only country on earth, and hence if we are not able to develop our natural resources to that end it is our own fault. But it certainly cannot be done by handing our money over to foreigners for products which we are well able to make and raise ourselves.

We may be out of balance a bit, but apart from that the development of Canada like that of all judiciously protected countries has been very great. Where has there ever been such development as in the U. S. under protection? Great Britain is now strongly veering in that direction. You need not fear that manufacturing or agricultural interests will be made the victims of foreign dumping. Baits thrown out from time to time will fail. We cannot keep money in the country and pay it out at the same time. To put ourselves in the hands of foreign capitalists and money-changers would be suicide. I hope you will go on with your extensions.

Yours faithfully.
J. H. BURNHAM

DRINK HOT WATER IF YOU DESIRE A ROSY COMPLEXION

Says we can't help but look better and feel better after an inside bath.

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon rising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Men and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples, or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, billious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

SCHOOL BOARD

cation were going to purchase 16 acres of land upon which to build a school when four would be ample.

Trustee Patterson replied that the reason for taking over the entire parcel of land was to prevent shacks from being erected in the vicinity of the school which would mar its appearance.

The purchase of the entire section would not cost as much as would at first be assumed as the Board would undoubtedly pay a comparatively higher price for a few acres of land upon which to build the school and might better buy the entire holding outright and then sell it again under certain restrictions to parties who would not use their lots upon which to erect buildings which would be a discredit to the school.

Trustee Gordon replied that such valuable land would be beyond the purchasing powers of individuals who would erect shacks so that it was useless to go to such rounds to safeguard against such an unlikely contingency. He felt that the Board would be purchasing too much land and tying up the money of the people of the city needlessly. As far as selling the surplus property was concerned speculation in real estate carried on by a city had never proved very satisfactory.

Trustee Worth suggested that the city might use the big area which would not be annexed to the school property for a recreation ground of some kind.

Trustee Gordon laughed at this idea and expressed the opinion that with the Hunter street bridge on their hands and a sewage disposal plant to be built the city had spent all the money upon playgrounds which they were likely to spend for some time to come.

Inspector Mowat gave information regarding the crowded condition of the Schools of the city. Twenty township children who were paying tuition fees were turned away from the King Edward School recently on account of lack of accommodation and they had been using a room in St. James' Church in which to teach a class for some time.

Trustee Patterson stated that the site which had been selected was the only one which commended itself to the judgment of the Committee. They could not tear down an entire city block and there was no other course open to the Board but to erect the building upon the property which had been decided upon.

Trustee Gordon's Objection

Trustee G. N. Gordon based his objections upon these grounds. In the first place he felt that the land would cost the Board in the neighborhood of from $33,000 to $37,000 instead of $25,000 which was to be offered. While the amendment to the Schools Act gave the Board of Education the power to expropriate land for a school site it was questionable whether it authorized them to take over an entire farm of 16 acres. Four acres were all that would be considered absolutely necessary for the purposes of erecting and maintaining the school and the Board were going to purchase three times as much as was actually needed. This was using the public money needlessly and tying it up in a manner which would bring little if any returns for some time and would doubtless result in a loss, as the city never had been very successful as a real estate speculator.

School Will Cost $225,000

Mr. Gordon estimated that when the school was erected inclusive of all expense and the purchase of the land it would cost $225,000. The annual interest rate upon this vast sum would be, at 6per cent, $13,500 with an estimated sinking fund of $6,000 per year which would make an annual debenture expense to be met by the city for twenty years of $19,500. The assessment of the Protestant ratepayers of the city is approximately $14,000,000; a mill upon this would raise annually $14,000 so that the building of such an expensive school as is considered by the Committee of the Board of Education would mean that the tax rate would be increased by one and one half mills for this one school in which there would be for some time at least four vacant rooms with rest rooms and all kinds of fancy touches, including, if the plans exhibited last night are to be followed with a view to detail, a clock tower.

Trustee Gordon refused to vote for the adoption of the Committee's report upon these grounds which in substance are that the proposed new school will be too expensive if constructed upon the proposed scale and will be a heavy burden upon the city ratepayers and that the children from the eastern limit of the school district will be forced to go a mile and one-sixth to school. He thought that a less expensive school might be erected upon the proposed site and that an annex to the King Edward School might be practicable although he was not prepared to urge this course as he had not looked into the matter sufficiently.

The report of the Building Committee was adopted with Trustee Gordon going upon record as refusing to support it.

"DANDERINE" FOR FALLING HAIR

Stop dandruff and double beauty of your hair for few cents.

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a small bottle of "Danderine" at any drug store for a few cents, pour a little in your hand and rub it into the scalp. After several applications the hair stops coming out and you can't find any dandruff. Your hair appears soft, glossy and twice as thick and abundant. Try it!

SERGT. CARMODY GOES TO OTTAWA

EFFICIENT DOMINION POLICE OFFICERS IS IN LINE FOR PROMOTION

Sergt. William Carmody, of the Dominion Police detachment at Peterborough, left today for Ottawa. He was a most efficient officer and had served in the recent war where he received injuries from which he still suffers. His friends in the city were sorry to see him leave, but as the move may mean promotion in the service they felt that it was for the best and wished him all kinds of good luck.

MR. BURNHAM OFFERS TO RESIGN SEAT TO FURNISH A TEST CASE

Challenges Any Member of the Opposition to Contest West Peterborough With Him on the State Ownership Issue.

The following is a verbatim report of the speech made in Parliament by Mr. J. H. Burnham in the bill to nationalize the railroads of Canada:

It is really an extraordinary thing that the Opposition, whenever they debate the question of railways, should throw up an enormous cloud of dust and yet absolutely fail to proclaim their faith in the principle of public ownership. While it is quite possible that the Government may in matters of detail or even in the general management of the business fall more or less into error and be open to criticism, because that is the lot of all human beings, nevertheless by this very Act the Government are pledging themselves to the principle of public ownership and it is merely wasting the time of this House and of the people of the country to issue such vacant challenges as we have just heard.

Mr. Cahill: Sure it is. Nobody will take them up on your side.

Mr. Burnham: The Government stand or fall by the principle of public ownership. They have found that the paying of subsidies and the granting of lands and making financial arrangements with vast private corporations were running this country into bankruptcy; so this new policy has been adopted. The Opposition is not trying to find any way out of the difficulty at all, but is simply standing for private ownership. If the hon. member who has just sat down (Mr. Cahill) wishes to back up his challenge by going into some neutral constituency and fighting the election on the principle of public ownership, he will find many a man on this side of the House to take up his gage. But on the other side of the House, I believe there is not one man in favor of public ownership.

Mr. Cahill: What about you?

Mr. Burnham: I am ready to back up what I say. If any man wishes to contend West Peterborough on the question of public ownership, I will resign and go right at it. Let my hon. friend stand up and say whether he wants it done.

Mr. Cahill: If the Government will open the constituency, I will do it.

Mr. Burnham: Do I understand that he accepts the challenge?

Some hon. members: Resign.

Mr. Duff: I will fight you.

Mr. Burnham: What does the gentleman say who is waving his arm so wildly over there? What are the wild waves saying? There is no getting away from the fact that this Bill is a test of where we stand on public ownership. Whoever heard of such a thing as seriously suggesting, in discussing this clause, that the date should be changed from Thursday in April to the end of December, as if the affairs of these great corporations could be managed by such guess-work as that. Let hon. members of the Opposition proclaim one after another this afternoon that they are in favor of public ownership, and then there will be some sympathy for them not only in this country but on this side of the House. But there is not the slightest doubt whatever that they are against public ownership. They are here to express their opinions, and if they are not opposed to public ownership let them say so.

This House should manage the public business of the country, and if it is not capable of directing public corporations, it is not fit, directly or indirectly, to conduct the public business and therefore the whole system of democratic representation stands condemned by the men who rise and make such trivial complaints as we have listened to. They do not care how far-reaching or extravagant their statements may be, because they are determined to oppose public ownership and advocate private ownership since there is more in private ownership for their friends than there is in public ownership.

At the conclusion of Mr. Burnham's address, Hon. Mr. Meighen, the author of the Bill, sent to the desk of the member for West Peterborough a note saying: "You did splendidly."

Raised $324 For Labrador Mission

The Peterborough branch of the Grenfell Mission desire to thank sincerely those who contributed to the funds of the mission and to express gratitude to the Examiner and The Review for their hearty assistance in this work.

The total amount received by the treasurer and forwarded to Ottawa is $324.50. Of this amount, two donors gave sixty dollars each for the upkeep of a cot at Harrington Hospital. Fifteen dollars have also been contributed for "bricks" in the new Home for Homeless Children at St. Anthony. Twenty-five cents represents a brick, and any who would like to help in this work may give a larger or smaller amount to Miss Parker at the Y. W. C. A., who has kindly taken charge of this fund.

"BE CAREFUL"

When you ask for Dr. Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets, make sure you get Norvall's. There are tablets that look like Norvall's; they may even taste like Norvall's, but they will not give you the same results as Norvall's.

Dr. Norvall's Tablets will act as a mild laxative and general tonic; in fact, they will tone up the whole system, drive away that dull feeling and make you feel keen, bright and active. Take one tablet two or three times a day, and if they fail to do what is claimed for them, your dealer is authorized to refund your money.

THE GODS OF MARS

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

"Is there a [illegible] e who does not know th[illegible] John Carter—how he came [illegible] you from another world and rose from a prisoner among the green men, through torture and persecution, to a place high among the highest of Barsoom?

"Nor ever did you know John Carter to lie in his own behalf, nor to say aught that might harm the people of Barsoom, or to speak lightly of the strange religion which he respected without understanding.

"There be no man here, or elsewhere upon Barsoom today, who does not owe his life directly to a single act of mine, in which I sacrificed myself and the happiness of my princess that you might live.

"And so, men of Helium, I think that I have the right to demand that I be heard, that I be believed, and that you let me serve you and save you from the false hereafter of Dor and Issus, as I saved you from the real death the other day.

"It is to you of Helium that I speak now. When I am done let the men of Zodanga have their will with me. Zat Arras has taken my sword from me, so the men of Zodanga no longer fear me. Will you listen?"

"Speak, John Carter, prince of Helium," cried a noble from the audience, and the multitude echoed his permission, until the building rocked with the noise of their demonstration.

Zat Arras knew better than to interfere with such a sentiment as was expressed that day in the temple of Reward, and so for two hours I talked with the people of Helium.

But when I had finished Zat Arras rose and, turning to the judges, said in a low tone: "My nobles, you have heard John Carter's plea. Every opportunity has been given him to prove his innocence if he be not guilty, but instead he has but utilized the time in further blasphemy. What, gentlemen, is your verdict?"

"Death to the blasphemer!" cried one, springing to his feet, and in an instant the entire thirty-one judges were on their feet with upraised swords in token of the unanimity of their verdict.

If the people did not hear Zat Arras' charge they certainly did hear the verdict of the tribunal. A sullen murmur rose louder and louder above the packed colliseum, and then Kantos Kan, who had not left the platform since first he had taken his place near me, raised his hand for silence. When he could be heard he spoke to the people in a cool and level voice.

"You have heard the fate that the men of Zodanga would mete to Helium's noblest hero. It may be the duty of the men of Helium to accept the verdict as final. Let each man act according to his own heart. Here is the answer of Kantos Kan to Zat Arras and his judges."

And with that he unbuckled his scabbard and threw his sword at my feet.

In an instant soldiers and citizens, officers and nobles, were crowding past the soldiers of Zodanga and forcing their way to the throne of righteousness. A hundred men surged upon the platform, and a hundred blades rattled and clanked to the floor at my feet.

Zat Arras and his officers were furious, but they were helpless. One by one I raised the swords to my lips and buckled them again upon their owners.

"Come," said Kantos Kan, "we will escort John Carter and his party to his own palace."

They formed about us and started toward the stairs leading to the aisle of hope.

"Stop!" cried Zat Arras. "Soldiers of Helium, let no prisoner leave the throne of righteousness."

The soldiery from Zodanga were the only organized body of Heliumetic troops within the temple, so Zat Arras was confident that his orders would be obeyed, but I do not think that he looked for the opposition that was raised the moment the soldiers advanced toward the throne.

From every quarter of the coliseum swords flashed and men rushed threateningly upon the Zodangans. So one raised a cry: "Tardos Mors is dead! A thousand years to John Carter, jeddak of Helium."

"Death!" shouted one of the judges.

As I heard that and saw the ugly attitude of the men of Helium toward the soldiers of Zat Arras, I knew that only a miracle would avert a clash that would end in civil war.

"Hold!" I cried, leaping to the pedestal of truth once more. "Let no man move till I am done. A single sword thrust here today may plunge Helium into a bitter and bloody war, the results of which none can foresee. It will turn brother against brother and father against son.

"No man's life is worth that sacrifice. Rather would I submit to the biased judgment of Zat Arras than be the cause of civil strife in Helium.

"Let us each give in a point to the other, and let this entire matter rest until Tardos Mors returns, or Mors Kajak, his son. If neither be back at the end of a year a second trial may be held—the thing has a precedent."

Then, turning to Zat Arras, I said in a low voice: "Unless you be a bigger fool than I take you to be, you will grasp the chance I am offering you ere it is too late. Once that multitude of swords below is drawn against your soldiery no man upon Barsoom—not even Tardos Mors himself—can avert the consequences. What say you? Speak quickly."

"Stay your hands, men of Helium," he shouted, his voice trembling with rage. "The sentence of the court is passed, but the day of retribution has not been set. [illegible] Tars [illegible] the royal connections of the prince and his past services to Helium and Barsoom, grant a reprieve [illegible] until the return of Kajak or Tardos Mors to Helium [illegible] silently to your [illegible]."

No one moved; instead they [illegible] in tense silence with their eyes fastened upon me, as though waiting for a signal to attack.

CHAPTER XII.

News From Dejah Thoris.

"CLEAR the temple," commanded Zat Arras in a low tone to one of his officers.

Fearing the result of an attempt to carry out this order by force, I stepped to the edge of the platform and, pointing toward the entrance, bid them pass out. As one man they turned at my request and filed, silent and threatening, past the soldiers of Zat Arras, jed of Zodanga. Kantos Kan, with the others who had sworn allegiance to me, still stood upon the throne of righteousness with me.

"Come," said Kantos Kan to me; "we will escort you to your palace, my prince. Come, Carthoris. Come, Tars Tarkus."

And with a haughty sneer for Zat Arras upon his handsome lips he turned and strode to the throne steps and up the aisle of hope. We four, and the hundred loyal ones followed behind him. Nor was a hand raised to stay us, though glowering eyes followed our triumphal march through the temple.

In the avenue we found a [illegible] people. They opened a [illegible] many were the swords [illegible] flung at my feet [illegible] passed through the city of Helium toward my palace upon the outskirts.

Here my old slaves fell upon their knees and kissed my hands as I greeted them. They cared not where I had been. It was enough that I had returned to them.

"Ah, master," cried one, "if our divine princess were but here this would be a day indeed!"

Tears came to my eyes, so that I was forced to turn away that I might hide my emotions. Carthoris wept openly as the slaves pressed about him with expressions of affection and words of sorrow for our common loss.

It was now that Tars Tarkus for the first time learned that his daughter, Sola, had accompanied Dejah Thoris upon the last long pilgrimage. I had not had the heart to tell him what Kantos Kan had told me.

With the stoicism of the green Martian he showed no sign of suffering, yet I knew that his grief was as poignant as my own. In marked contrast to his kind he had, in well developed form, the kindlier human characteristics of love, friendship and charity.

It was a sad party that sat at the feast of welcome in the great dining hall of the palace of the Prince of Helium that day. We were over a hundred strong, not counting the members of my little court, for Dejah Thoris and I had maintained a household consistent with our royal rank.

The board, according to red Martian custom, was triangular, for there were three in our family. Carthoris and I presided in the center of our sides of the table. Midway of the third side Dejah Thoris' high backed carved chair stood vacant except for her gorgeous wedding trappings and jewels which were draped upon it.

Behind stood a slave as in the days when his mistress had occupied her place at the board ready to do her bidding. It was the way upon Barsoom, so I endured the anguish of it, though it wrung my heart to see that silent chair where should have been my laughing and vivacious princess keeping the great hall ringing with her merry gayety.

At my right sat Kantos Kan, while to the right of Dejah Thoris' empty place Tars Tarkas sat in a huge chair before a raised section of the board which years ago I had had constructed to meet the requirements of his mighty bulk.

The place of honor at a Martian board is always at the hostess' right, and this place was ever reserved by Dejah Thoris for the great Thark upon the occasions that he was in Helium.

"Hold! Let no man move till I am done."

Hor Vastus sat in the seat of honor upon Carthoris' side of the table. There was little general conversation. It was a quiet and saddened party.

The loss of Dejah Thoris was still fresh in the minds of all, and to this was added fear for the safety of Tardos Mors and Mors Kajak, as well as doubt and uncertainty as to the fate of Helium should it prove true that she were permanently deprived of her great jeddak.

Suddenly our attention was attracted by the sound of distant shouting as of many people raising their voices at once, but whether in anger or rejoicing we could not tell.

Nearer and nearer came the tumult. A slave rushed into the dining hall to cry that a great concourse of people was swarming through the palace gates. A second burst upon the heels of the first, alternately laughing and shrieking as a madman.

"Dejah Thoris is found!" he cried. "A messenger from Dejah Thoris!"

I waited to hear no more. The great windows of the dining hall overlooked the avenue leading to the many gates. They were upon the opposite side of the hall from me, with the table intervening. I did not waste time in circling it, but with a single leap I cleared table and diners and sprang upon the balcony beyond.

Thirty feet below lay the scarlet sward of the lawn, and beyond were many people crowding about a great thoat which bore a rider headed toward the palace.

I vaulted to the ground below and ran swiftly toward the advancing party. As I came near to them I saw that the figure on the thoat was Sola.

"Where is the Princess of Helium?" I cried.

The green girl slid from her mighty mount and ran toward me.

"Oh, my prince, my prince, she is gone forever! Even now she may be a captive upon the lesser moon.

"The Black Pirates of Barsoom have stolen her."

Once within the palace I drew Sola to the dining hall, and when she had greeted her father after the formal manner of the green men she told the story of the pilgrimage and capture of Dejah Thoris.

"Seven days ago, after her audience with Zat Arras, Dejah Thoris attempted to slip from the palace in the dead of night. Though I had not heard the outcome of her interview with Zat Arras, I knew that something had occurred then to cause her the keenest mental agony, and when I discovered her creeping from the palace I did not need to be told her destination.

THEATRICAL

EXTRA SPECIAL ATTRACTION AT THE GRAND THURSDAY, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

On account of previous bookings vaudeville and pictures will be presented on Thursday, Friday and Saturday instead of the first half of this week.

The great favorite, Norma Talmadge, will be seen in her biggest success, "Her Only Way," from the stage play of the same name. The star vaudeville bill will be headed by the famous Lind, in singing and dancing painting. "Lind" is one of the world's most wonderful female impersonators, whose really remarkable camouflage has entertained and mystified people in every section of the universe. Though "every inch a man," his form, attire, beauty, voice appearance and womanly eccentricities are unquestionalby feminine and most decidedly deceptive. "Lind" offers a most pretentious allclassical posing, terpischorean and vocal novelty which is billed under the title of "Singing and Dancing Paintings," consisting of a series of beautiful character pictures posed in a massive frame, following each pose a characteristic dance emblematical of the subject pictured is presented by this remarkable artist.

The work of this splendid artist is assuredly the last word in an act peculiar to the genius of its originator. Expert dancing and a singing voice requisite to the needs of the production are part of his equipment. It is an attraction that will unquestionably prove the big drawing card of the season.

Foster and Foster will be seen in a Skit entitled "The Volunteer Pianist." Of the many comedy acts to be seen here this season none will provoke more genuine laughter and please more highly than this offering of Ed. and Minnie Foster.

As an added attraction Raymond & Vincent, a delightfully entertaining couple, present a bill under the caption of "Names Don't Count," consisting of some exceedingly clever acting and good music. Both are splendid singers. Their parodies and original and amusing. Their feature number a travesty on family affairs, representing the first month, and two years after marriage, is a scream. It is cleverly acted and the best travesty seen in many a day.

Charlie Chaplin will be seen in "Oh, What a Night!" and a special screen Magazine. Altogether this is the best bill ever offered in Peterboro and at prices to suit everybody. 10c-15c Matinees, and 15c-25c evenings. Reserve your seats in advance.

NORMA TALMADGE
At the Grand in "Her Only Way," Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Matinee daily.

Round Robin.

Originally a round robin was a petition or protest signed in such a way that no name headed the list; that is, the signatures were usually placed in circular form. The device is French and the term a corruption of rond (round) and ruban (a ribbon). It was first adopted by the officers of government as a means of making known their grievances.

To Prevent Rugs Slipping.

There are many devices to prevent rugs from slipping on highly-polished floors. One of the best and also the cheapest is to cut pieces of rough sheathing paper the exact size of the rugs and lay it under them. They will not move them. Another way is to sew triangles of corrugated rubber sheeting to the corners of the rugs.

Wheat and Flour.

No wheat thousands of years old has ever been known to germinate, many yarns to the contrary notwithstanding. Baking tests have also been made by the department of agriculture, showing a distinct inferiority of the Alaska wheat flour as a bread producer.

Care of Steel.

Steel knives and other steel articles which are not in general use may be kept from rusting if they are dipped in a strong solution of soda, one part water to four of soda, then wiped dry with flannel and kept in a dry place.

Find the Right Handle.

Everything, as Epictetus once said, has two handles. Taking hold of it by one, we find it unbearable; taking hold by the other, we discover it to be easily and pleasantly borne.

Competitive Accomplishment.

"My daughter is taking fencing lessons, and you should see how she can feint." "That's nothing. You ought to see how mine can throw a fit."

Elephant Hunting.

In Ceylon elephants are hunted chiefly for sport, as they do not bear so much ivory as the elephants of Africa and elsewhere.

Putting It in Clothes.

"Har, har," said the facetious feller, as he slyly dropped a dime in his waistcoat pocket, "here is wher I invest a little money."

That's So.

The world owes you a living, but it takes work to identify yourself as the fellow it's coming to.—Boston Transcript.

Defeat.

What is defeat? Nothing but education; the first step to something better.—Wendell Phillips.

Making of Hand Grenades.

It has been found that one pound of ammonia will make 20 hand grenades

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

The woman who fails to say "because" has some other excuse.

A musician who can play all kinds of instruments beats the band.

Married men always have more buttons off their clothes than batchelors.

A woman raves over her new Easter hat and her husband raves over the bill for it.

If Eve hadn't been forbidden to eat that apple the chances are that it wouldn't have happened.

A man never loses money on fast horses. It's the slow ones that drive him to the free lunch counter.

Does a Farmer Need a Truck?

THE farmer with a Ford Truck practically lives next door to the market.

He has a choice of markets.

He becomes more independent.

He can market his goods when and where he pleases.

He sells his crop to the very best advantage.

And his hauling costs him less—in labor and money.

It is not only cheaper to haul with a Ford Truck than with a team and wagon, it is quicker, it is easier work.

Consider the time and labor the farmer can save with a Ford Truck. With a team the trip to town takes the better part of a day.

A Ford Truck makes the same trip in two or three hours.

When labor is so scarce, what farmer can afford to waste day after day of his valuable time?

Ford Trucks Complete with Body and Enclosed Cab

Ford One-Ton Trucks are now supplied, if desired, with standard truck bodies in two types, the Stake Body and the Express Body.

In both standard bodies the cabs may be supplied with or without doors, as desired.

See these complete Ford Trucks. Consider the matter from every angle: the cost of feeding horses against the cost of running a Ford Truck; the time you lose on the road; the money you lose by being so far from the best markets. There is only one conclusion you can come to. You will have a Ford Truck.

Fair Swimmer Of National Renown

New York, April 30.—A fair swimmer of sensational ability has just stepped into the limelight of fame. Miss Ethelda Bleibtrey, a 16 year old schoolgirl of New York.

Virtually unknown until a few weeks ago, and a green novice in May, 1918, his remarkable young maid is now a national champion, a world's recordist and the most brilliant prospect in the field of water sports for women.

She first attracted attention on April 5, when she hung up an official world's record of :38 4-5 for fifty yards back stroke swimming and swam 220 yards free style in :3.11, at the same meet. But it was her amazing work of last week which stamped her one of the greatest all round stars ever developed in any land.

On Monday, at home, she sprinted 100 yards in :01:00⅘; on Friday, in Pittsburgh, she swam virtually a dead heat with Miss Ruth Smith of Columbus when the latter won the national 150 yard back stroke championship in the world's record time of :2.17 2-5. On Saturday at Brighton beach, after spending a sleepless night in a day coach, for she could not secure Pullman accommodations on the train back to New York, she won the national 500 yard free style title swim in :7:40 1-5, which indicates she would probably have beaten the international pool standard of :7:31 2-5, had she not been worn out by the strenuous trip.

These wonderful performances, accomplished after a novitiate of less than one year, give an idea of what may be expected hereafter of the new champion, particularly in view of the training she has undergone.

She has been kept almost entirely at courses from 500 to 1,000 yards, in order to perfect her style, and she has not only developed an almost faultless six beat double trudgeon crawl, but she holds her form, even when tired, which will mean a big advantage in the longer championships of the approaching outdoor season.

Miss Bleibtrey represents in competition the New York Women's S. A.

NO MORE TITLES FOR CANADIANS

SPECIAL COMMITTEE SO RECOMMENDS BY VOTE OF 20 TO 3

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, April 30—The discontinuance of the conferring of knighthoods on the Canadians residing in Canada was decided upon as advisable, by the special committee of Commons dealing with the matter this morning. The committee also concurred in the recommendation decided on last night favoring abolition of hereditary titles which now exist in Canada. Committee rejected amendment by Mr. Cockshutt that while committee did not favor immediate discontinuance of titles, it recommended that some discrimination be exercised in granting such honors. Sir Herbert Ames, Dr. Michael Clark and the mover only favored this amendment. The main resolution carried 20 to 3.

NEW MEMBERS BEING ENROLLED

SECRETARY BRUMWELL OF HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY REPORTS PROGRESS

On Saturday evening at the Empress Hotel, a "Progress Meeting" of the canvassers of the membership campaign brought out the fact that almost without exception the members of 1918 are renewing their memberships this year.

In every district some new members were secured, indicating that more of the people of Peterboro are getting a broader vision and are acquiring at least some of the public spirit necessary to make the city what it should be. It may surprise some to know that in 1918 over one-seventh of the membership was composed of residents of districts entirely outside of the city and the only value or benefit these people got for their dollar was the selection from the option list while the city members, and non-members as well, were enjoying the improvements fostered by the society. The knowledge of this fact should arouse the citizens in their duty as well as to their opportunity to assist an enterprise which is being carried on by men who have only the city's welfare at heart, and are giving their time freely and liberally in an honest endeavour to make Peterboro a pleasant "home town," and an attraction to visitors whether they come in by train or boat on a gala day, or whether they are tourists making a hurried call, or our own personal friends staying in our homes for a day or a week. Civic improvement and this includes the using of waste ground for useful gardening purposes, is the chief object of the Horticultural Society, and the distribution of options, and the lawn and garden competitions, are just the means used in attaining this object, and at the same time the members are given more than value of the membership fee.

Endorse This Work.

Here are some of the convincing endorsements of this work:

The Ontario Government makes a grant each year in proportion to the membership.

The Trades and Labour Council have a representative on the Board of Directors.

The Great War Veterans have "Comrade" on the Board of Directors, and their official organ, "The Veteran," gives several pages each issue to the subject.

The local Board of Trade in these days of its reconstruction, desires the co-operation of the Horticultural Society in forming a Horticultural Section in its plan to boost and advertise Peterboro.

The Peterboro Floral Company and Messrs. Jordan Bros., at their George street stores, are distributing option sheets and selling membership tickets although to some it would appear that the Horticultural Society is a competitor in their business.

And, in addition the local papers have written strong editorials commending this work and have given square yards of printed space, without charge, because the Horticultural Society is a public service organization deserving of public attention.

As it will be quite impossible to call at every house, the citizens may secure option lists, with full particulars, at the above florists' stores, or at the office of Hill, Weddell & Co., 402 Water street.

All the 1919 members who have not sent in their option lists indicating their selections, are requested to forward them by Saturday, May 3rd, to the secretary, so that they can be included in the records at the meeting at the Council Chamber, next Saturday evening.

E. E. BRUMWELL,
Secretary-Treasurer

DEMAND 60 CENTS AN HOUR

Quebec, April 30.—The local Union of Canadian Bricklayers, Masons and Plasters notified all contractors, builders etc., that hereafter they will not work for less than 60 cents per hour, a raise of 10 cents per hour on the present salary schedule. This scale of pay, they say, is to be effective within a radius of thirty miles around the city of Quebec.

Winnipeg G.W.V.A. Assured Ottawa Will Deal With Hutterites.

Winnipeg, April 30.—On being given the assurance by the Government yesterday that the Dominion Government is coming to an important decision on the question of the Hutterites situation within the next few days the Winnipeg branch of the G. W. V. A. has consented to withhold immediate action on its ultimatum that "after seven days" it would call a meeting of citizens to appoint a strong delegation to go to Washington to secure correct information as to what "international complications" may be anticipated if the Dominion Government refuses to admit these people.

BODY FOUND IN CISTERN.

Whether Death Was Deliberate or Accidental Is Not Known.

Milverton, April 30.—This community has been shocked on hearing that the body of Miss Elmina Hartung, aged 32, daughter of Mr. Peter Hartung, a farmer in Mornington, who lives about two miles from here, had been found in the bottom of the cistern. The young lady had for a considerable time been suffering from a partial alienation of reason, and whether her death was due to a deliberate act or to accident is not known.

OBITUARY

THOMAS DOMAN.

A Peterborough County veteran of the Crimean war passed away yesterday in the person of Mr. Thomas Doman. Death took place at the home of his nephew, Mr. H. Wheeler, Norwood road.

Deceased was 84 years of age, and for the greater part of his life had resided in Lakefield, where he was well known and highly respected. He is survived by his wife, also a sister, Mrs. Jos. Cox, London, Ont.

The funeral will take place tomorrow from the residence of Mr. Wheeler to Little Lake Cemetery. Service at 2 o'clock. Members of the G. W. V. A. will act as bearers. For the past thirty years deceased had been a consistent member of Lakefield Presbyterian Church.

The late Mr. Doman was a veteran of the Crimean war and served in the regular British army ten years. He was born in Warminster, Wiltshire, England, and at the age of 17 went to Salisbury, where he joined the regulars. A short time afterward his regiment was sent to the Island of Malta. In November, 1854, they were sent to the Crimea, where they remained until the war ended. Mr. Doman arrived at the scene of action three days after the battle of Inkerman, and took part in the long siege of Sebastopol. In an engagement known as the battle of the Quarries, the enemy came out in thousands. It was one of the hottest encounters of the war. The British went in eight hundred strong, but at roll call next day only fifty answered. The last fortifications of the town were taken in September, 1855.

Mr. Doman also served in Ireland, India and at Halifax, N. S. On the occasion of the visit of the late King Edward VII. to Canada the late Mr. Doman acted as orderly.

NOTICE TO CARPENTERS

All Union Carpenters are urgently requested to attend special meeting Thursday, May 1st. Business concerning new bridge to be discussed.

Don't loaf in front of a bank just because it has money in it.

CUBIST PICTURE OF THE BRIDGE

PRESENT STRUCTURE NOT SO BAD AS OUR CONTEMPORY IMAGINES.

The pen picture of the present Hunter street bridge, which appeared in our contemporary yesterday, like all the master-pieces of the artists of the cubist school, is more remarkable for its ambiguity than for truthful representation.

One of the most prominent lawyers of the city stated this morning that there is every reason why the mandamus, which the residents of Ashburnham are credited with an intention of applying for, should be described in the cubist picture as pending, as the grounds advanced for the application are most flimsy, to put it mildly, the present bridge over the Otonabee at Hunter street having never been condemned nor is there any information of a reliable nature upon record which would show that the present structure, whatever other failings it may have, is unsafe for traffic.

The unfortunate Aldermen can therefore, be considered as spared from the terrible position which was depicted as their lot in the article referred to.

DEWART CHARGES SO MUCH BUNKUM

LICENSE INSPECTOR AYEARST IS EXONERATED BY SIR WM. MEREDITH.

Toronto, April 30.—Except for two indiscretions License Commissioner John A. Ayearst has proven a zealous and faithful public servant, said Sir William Meredith at the conclusion of the investigation into the Ontario License Board and the Homer case yesterday. He should have refused to have had anything further to do with Solomon and Hinch's money, the Commissioner said, after he had been offered part of it, and he should not have borrowed money from Solomon. Sir William said he thought it only fair to Mr Ayearst that the public should have the Commission's ruling on his case immediately.

In brief comments on other points, Sir William entirely discredited the evidence of Mr. Walter Duncan, declared himself to be "horrified" at the suggestion of Mr. Robert McKay, K.C., thrown out in argument that Mr. Ayearst had committed perjury.

FIREMEN SAVED MR. CRAIG'S STORE

GEORGE STREET FURNITURE DEALER'S ESTABLISHMENT HAD NARROW ESCAPE

Fire, which broke out in the work shop of J. D. Craig's furniture shop, at 441 George street at 3.20. yesterday afternoon, did considerable damage, though, as a result of the good work of the fire brigade the blaze was confined to the part of the building where the fire originated.

Mr. Craig after sweeping up the back shop, had collected the rubbish and put it in a Quebec heater and was then called into the store by a customer. While absent the rubbish in the stove was ignited from a few live embers amongst the ashes and the stove pipe being incapable of carrying off the gasses from the burning mass there was a slight explosion which blew the fire out of the base of the stove and caught several mattresses which burned fiercely.

The fire brigade played three streams of water upon the building and soon had the fire extinguished. There was no actual damage to stock above the shop, though smoke may have injured some of it to a certain extent.

PROF. KNIGHT TO RETIRE

Eminent Head of Physiology Department in Queen's for 27 Years.

Kingston, April 30.—It is understood that Dr. A. P. Knight, Professor of Physiology in Queen University, is shortly to retire. Dr. Knight will retain his position until a successor can be secured. He has been head of the physiology department for the past twenty-seven years, and is a recognized Canadian authority. He has done a great deal of experimental and research work for the Dominion Government, his last work being in connection with the lobster industry in the Maritime Provinces.

MURRAY STREET CHOIR

There will be a full rehearsal of the Murray Street choir tonight in preparation for the concert.

LARGE INCREASE IN ATTENDANCE

INTEREST GROWING IN EVANGELIST TORRIE'S MEETING AT PARK ST. CHURCH.

There was a very manifest increase in the attendance at Park Street Baptist church last night. The thrilling Billy Sunday hymns were sung with great enthusiasm.

Evangelist Torrie speaking on "Evangelism," said in part: "Evangelism to me is the old way, and the most effective way of bringing men and women to Jesus, Andrew after Peter, Philip after Nathanial, Jesus after Nicodenius and you after your neighbor, the heart contact, the personal touch, the individual relation. A bright Japanese student opened his Japanese bible to the first chapter of John and slowly and thoughtfully read the 29th verse, "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." Turning to his teacher, he asked are these words true and the teacher answers they are very true, and that student went out and brought 500 Japanese students to Christ. This is evangelism and the world is waiting today for the personal touch of the Christ.

Mrs. Torrie sang with much feeling "I Love Him."

At the close of the service many spoke of the very helpful and successful meeting and a large congregation is expected tonight. There are only three nights left of this week. Evangelist Torrie will close his mission Sunday.

The choir had a fine rehearsal at the close of the service and will render some special selections from the Billy Sunday book tonight and Mrs. Torrie will sing "Follow Me." Mr. Torrie will speak on the subject "How Men Can Get Right With God." The service will begin at 7.45 sharp with a song service.

WANT INSURANCE PLAN.

Veterans Also Recommend Amending Constitution.

Kingston, April 30. — The local branch of the Great War Veterans' Association is recommending to the Dominion convention that the Federal Government institute and carry on a scheme of life insurance for the veterans of the great war. It is further recommending that the words "non-partisan" be struck out of the constitution. This amendment to the constitution will, it is thought, tend to strengthen the association in its political policy in the future.

ASK SCOTT ACT REPEAL

Quebec, April 30—Petitions for the repeal of the Scott Act (total prohibition) in Quebec City are going around, and it appears that the number of people who have so far signed the petitions forecasts the almost sure killing of the prohibition measure in Quebec city, where beers and wines would then, in this contingency, be sold under license.

CARPENTERS HINT

He referred to his resolution in Council that only men resident in the city before April first be allowed work on the bridge, but this did not meet with approval. The men took the ground that union men are union men, resident in the city or not, and cannot be discriminated against.

To Carpenter McKeown, the Mayor replied that the bridge contract would stipulate that only union men would be employed.

Build At All Costs.

Carpenter Toome thought that if the bridge cost $700,000 Council would be justified in going ahead to relieve distress existing for lack of employment. He said there are too many obstructionists to the work and they should be dealt with aggressively. He had no doubt but what the people would vote the money to defray any costs in excess of the estimates; and could not see why the work should not be done by day labor, and save what he characterized as contractors graft.

His Worship explained that the city with no plant could not build as cheap as a reputable contractor with all the plant necessary. He also declared that a 2½c concession in wages to be not worth considering in the face of conditions.

Returning to the question of restricting employment of city residents alone Mr. Parliament said that he understood 125 carpenters would be needed. If that is correct the local union could not supply them all. Then our men now out of town should have the privilege of returning to work on the bridge.

The carpenters discussed the whole question with commendable knowledge and intelligence.

Federal and City Authorities in New York Hunting Down Anarchists to Whom no Leniency Will Be Shown—Bombs Sent to Prominent Officials.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, May 1.—With the discovery and frustration of a nation-wide bomb conspiracy here yesterday against the lives of many prominent men, every agency of the Federal and municipal government was at work today, not only in an attempt to trace the authors of the terrorist plot, but to guard against the "Reds'" boast of a country-wide surprise on May Day.

Persons in touch with Federal and municipal authorities predicted today that the haunts of the Reds in this city would be invaded and many radicals deportd. This opinion was expressed after a conference, which ended at midnight and was attended by Police Commissioner Enright, to whom one of the bombs was addressed, the district attorney, and the department of justice investigators. It is understood that these officials decided to put an end to leniency towards anarchists and others of their type in New York.

RETAIL MERCHANTS ARE FIRED WITH SPIRIT OF EMULATION

Start Campaign to Raise Funds For Board of Trade in Order to Equal the Record of the Manufacturers.

The example of the Manufacturers' Association in pledging [illegible] to the Sustaining Fund of the Board of Trade has stirred the spirit of rivalry among the retail merchants. A Sustaining Fund Corps has been organized under the generalship of Geo. N. Gordon, Chairman of the Fund Committee, with R. John Kidd as colonel commanding. The several captains met last evening at 6 o'clock in the Council Room of the Board to lay out their work and go after the trade.

Regular applications for membership in the Board are being sent daily to President Turner who is much pleased over this evidence of interest. More than a hundred applications have come in practically without invitation from the city's leading business and professional men.

President Turner when asked about the status of the Sustaining Fund, said, "I haven't the slightest doubt that the Board will get the whole-hearted support of every worth while man in Peterborough. We shall shortly reach a minimum of $10,000 for three years and our maximum will go beyond that for the very good reason that we've already begun to work and pull together. We know it means hard work and a strong pull but it's to make more business and industry for Peterborough and we're all game for the fight."

POLICE NAVY WILL PRESERVE PEACE

WILL TAKE CHARGE OF SEAS WHEN TREATY IS SIGNED.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, May 1.—A large naval international police force will be necessary under the League of Nations plan immediately after peace is declared, in the opinion of Josephesus Daniels, U. S. secretary of the navy, and one of the objects of his trip abroad is to discuss with the admiralties of Great Britain, France and Italy some details as to this force, particularly the types of vessels desirable.

Paris Workingmen Post Objections

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 1.—The union of syndicates of the Department of the Seine placarded Paris today with an expression of surprise that the government had forbidden street demonstrations on May Day and protesting against such a measure of distrust of the working class.

Italian Question Alone to Settle

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 1.—Various lesser details of the peace treaty were taken up today by the Council of Three, among them the question of the completed German cables. With the Kiao-Chau problem disposed of, the Adriatic question is the only highly important matter remaining unsettled.

PARIS PRESENTS A MOURNFUL AIR

NO CARS OR CARRIAGES MOVING AND NO NEWSPAPERS APPEAR.

Paris, May 1.—The weather this morning is unfavorable for the celebration of May Day. The rain and cold weather of the past few days continues, and the cold was rather uncomfortable. Paris presents a mournful and gloomy aspect this morning, there being no carriages, automobile 'busses nor taxicabs on the streets on account of the May Day strike. No newspapers appeared. The Metropolitan railway was shut down this morning in conformity with the decision to cut off electricity for two hours beginning at seven o'clock.

Government Army Surrounds Munich

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Copenhagen, May 1.—A ring of Government troops is closing around Munich, according to Berlin despatches. The villages of Schongau and Umfing have been captured from the Soviet forces without loss.

Advisory Council Backs Up Japan

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Tokio, May 1.—The Diplomatic Advisory Council voted today to adhere to Japan's attitude relative to the Chantung peninsula and to make no concessions or compromises at Paris, according to the newspapers here.

Providing good weather continues Manitoba's wheat crop for 1919 will be in the ground by May 10th.

MOULDERS AND LABORERS LOCKED OUT BY EMPLOYERS

JEWS KILLED IN POGROM AT PINSH

HORRIBLE CRUELTIES TO MEN AND WOMEN ARE REPORTED TODAY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, May 1.—Fifty-six Jews have been killed in a Pogrom at Pinsk, according to an announcement from central office of Zionist Association. Forty persons were imprisoned and brutally treated, it is said, and three women were flogged, one school mistress being rendered insane by torture. The synagogues at Pinsk are reported to be closed and Jews have been impressed that forced labor. Military leaders are said to have demanded one hundred thousand marks, threatening to shoot the Jewish leaders if that sum is not paid within 24 hours.

IRISH WORKERS OUT ON STRIKE

EVERYBODY IDLE EXCEPT IN NORTHERN PART OF ISLAND.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, May 1.—All Irish workers except those in the northern parts of the island have entirely ceased work today. Railroads, newspapers, factories, shops and other industries are closed down as a result of the order of the powerful Transport Workers' Union.

SIX THOUSAND ARE OUT IN TORONTO

METAL WORKERS AND PAINTERS HOLD OUT FOR BETTER TERMS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, May 1.—Labor's traditional strike day finds many Canadian cities suffering more or less from industrial disturbances. In Montreal while, no important strikes have been reported the police are preparing for trouble this afternoon between the returned soldiers and socialists, if the latter persist in carrying revolutionary banners or red flags. Toronto has six thousand metal trades workers and six hundred painters on strike with no prospect at present of a settlement.

A big labor demonstration with somewhat socialistic tendencies in Queen's Park was dampened by heavy showers but another meeting is called for the Arena tonight. Winnipeg building operations are almost completely tied up by strikes, although more serious difficulties with civic and public service employees in Winnipeg seem to have been tided over. In addition there are minor strikes of various workers in other cities but the prospects for settlement of many of them within a few days appear bright. A demonstration has been called here for the Arena tonight.

Daylight saving by-law, voted on at Swift Current, Sask, carried by a majority of 107 there being 123 votes for and only 26 against.

Men Refuse to Continue Agreement of Last Year Which Expired Yesterday but Demand 75c an Hour and 44 Hour Week—Labor Troubles General Throughout Canada.

Sixty molders and over one hundred laborers are out of work today in Peterborough on account of a disagreement with their employers in regard to the adoption of the new scale. Upong going to work this morning they found the doors of the foundries locked.

The foundries affected in this city are the William Hamilton Company, the Peter Hamilton Company, the Peterborough Lock Works, the G. Walter Green Company and the Adam Hall Stove Factory.

esterday the 1918 wage agreement between men and employers expired. Molders, according to this, were receiving sixty cents per hour. The mployers asked that they sign up again upon the same terms, and they refused, demanding seventy-five cents per hour, and the laborers, who have only recently been organized in Peterborough, asked for forty-five cents an hour. The molders and laborers also desired a forty-four-hour week. The employers stated that they could not see their way clear to agree to these terms and the men announced their willingness to go to work under protest until such time as the question should be settled by arbitration. This morning, upon going to their respective work shops they found they were the victims of a lockout.

Had they gone to work under protest, any agreement finally arrived at in regard to the situation generally would have compelled the employers to pay the new scale upon a retroactive basis dating from today, and it was to avoid such a possibility, the men allege, that the employers of the city decided to close down.

May Day strikes are in progress all over the country today. Cities and towns where labor is organized have been generally affected.

The C. G. E. molders are affiliated with a different organization and have not been affected by the situation here.

The Industrial Disputes Act states that it is illegal for men to strike without having given thirty days' notice, and the same applies o employers as regards a lockout.

POPULAR BANK OFFICIALS ARE TRANSFERRED TO TORONTO

Mr. C. H. Pennefather of the Union Bank Becomes Manager of Big City Branch—A. Forbes Knight Also Promoted.

Mr. C. H. Pennefather, manager of the Peterborough branch of the Union Bank for the past seven and a half years, has been appointed the assistant general manager of the main Toronto branch of the Union Bank, to succeed Mr. P. E. D. Strickland, who has been appointed manager of the main office of the corporation in Hamilton.

Mr. K. F. Gilmour, formerly assistant to the eastern superintendent, who has been manager at Hamilton for the past few months, has been appointed manager at Montreal to succeed Mr. J. B. Waddell, who is retiring from the bank's service after many years to become associated with Sir Mortimer Davis.

Mr Pennefather has been with the Union Bank for twelve years, and has been in Peterborough for seven and a half years, where he is well known in business circles.

Peterborough regrets losing Mr. Pennefather, who has always taken an active interest in many of the worthy movements here. He was prominent in patriotic endeavors during the war, and always took a great interest in the welfare of the Golf Club.

His many friends in Peterborough realize that the move to Toronto is an important promotion, and feel that he is most worthy of the confidence thus shown in him by the corporation he has served so faithfully for the past twelve years.

The main branch of the bank in Toronto is the most important office of the Union Bank in Canada, and Mr. Pennefather is to be congratulated upon his appointment as assistant manager.

He has not as yet received notice of the time set for his removal to the Queen City, but it is expected that it will be almost immediately.

A. Forbes Knight Promoted

Mr. A. Forbes Knight, for the past five years manager of the Peterborough branch of the Bank of Ottawa, has received notice of his appointment as manager of the branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia at the corner of Broadview and Gerard sts Toronto.

This is an important office and while the citizens of Peterborough will be very sorry to lose Mr. Knight they realize that the change takes the form of a promotion of which he is most deserving.

The amalgamation of the banks of Nova Scotia and Ottawa made necessary the closing of one office in Peterborough where there was a branch in connection with each of these corporations. Mr. Knight leaves for Toronto at the begining of the week.

NO COMPROMISE ON TARIFF

The following letter has been received by the Auburn Woollen Company from Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., today:

The Auburn Woollen Co.,
Peterborough:

Sir,—Please say to the very large number of signatories to the request to me to beware of compromising the National Policy, that with prices in Canada on a proper level with those elsewhere, no sensible man would want to compromise the National Policy. To make Canada at first a dumping ground for cheap labor and cheap labor's products and then a prostrate victim, it would be suicide which no one who sees our great and glorious country as it is and as it has become is likely to commit.

(Signed.) J. H. BURNHAM.

SIGNS OF BUSINESS REVIVAL

There is a cheering sign of a business revival in the plant of the Quaker Oats Company. For the first time in months the company is ready to buy oats and wheat from the farmers, the advertisement appearing for the first time yesterday. As usual the highest cash price will be paid.

A large number of the girls in the packing department who have been laid off for several weeks, were notified yesterday to return to work this morning to put up a large order that has just been received. There is some semblance of the old hum of activity at the mammoth plant today.

The people of Peterborough may rest assured that any stagnation of business of the Quaker Oats is only temporary. There is as large a demand for their products as ever. The foreign market is still calling for them, and the trouble is the question of transportation only. This is a matter that it is hoped will soon adjust itself. The Quaker Oats Company will keep their faith with the city in the matter of employing labor, and the indications all point to a season busier than any on the records.

NEW SCHOOL TO COST MORE THAN ANY ALREADY BUILT

Or Twice as Much as the King George and Queen Mary Combined, if Present Plans Are Carried Out—Some Convincing Figures Show Up Situation.

Trustee E. G. Patterson, chairman of the Building Committee of the Board of Education announced at a meeting of the School board the other night that the site chosen for the new school which is to be erected will cost at least $25,000. A member of the Board who did not see eye to eye with the Committee was responsible for the statement that in all probability the site would cost in the neighborhood of from $33,000 to $37,000. This member was a lawyer and in view of the fact that expropriation proceedings will in all likelihood be necessary before the land can be obtained his statement can be received with considerable confidence.

Mr. Gordon was the only member of the Board of Education who refused to support the report of the committee, recommending the purchase of this property and authorizing an offer for it of $25,000. He stated in voicing his objections that there was every reason for believeing that the school when built would cost inclusive of the purchase of the site $225,000. This would result in a raise in the rate for school purposes of one and one half mills.

Publication of this estimate of Mr. Gordon's which, as he stated himself, was only intended to be approximately correct, caused a considerable impression as his arguments were backed up with figures which could not be denied. In view of this a comparison of the cost of the sites and erection of the two most recently constructed schools will be of the greatest interest to the ratepayers of the city.

King George and Queen Mary schools are the two most modern buildings of their kind in Peterboro. Their construction was commenced in the same year, 1912.

The King George in Ashburnham cost approximately $52,000 for buildings, site and all expenses connected with its establishment. The site composed of six acres of dreary soil which Mr Gordon the other night described as a minature Camp Borden, cost $3,300.

The Queen Mary School cost $58,000 inclusive of everything. The site boasting four acres of land cost [illegible]. Both of these buildings are of the most modern type. The playgrounds of the one in Ashburnham with its six acres of land are so commodious that as one of the members of the Board said the other night there was danger of the children getting lost during recess.

Both these large, modern schools, the erection of which commenced in 1912—seven years ago, were constructed and established inclusive of the sites for $110,000. To build one school in 1919, according to the estimate of a well informed member of the Board of Education will cost $225,000, or exactly $115,000 more than the expense entailed by the erection of two splendid buildings in 1912.

According to the basis upon which the King George and Queen Mary Schools were erected in 1912, $225,000 would build four such schools and yet today it is to be assumed from the present outlook as justified by the report of the committee the other night and the conclusione drawn by a member of the Board that the sum of money with seven years ago would have established four educational institutions of modern appointments will only build one.

It might further be stated that the sites for the two buildings mentioned above were secured by annexing the property which lay in the adjoining townships, though at that time it would have been impossible to resort to expropriation proceedings with any hope of success as the Legislature had not then amended the School Sites Act so as to make it obligatory for the owner of property in a rural district adjoining the city to sell the same except in the case of its being required for a union school.

At the Board meeting the other night it was stated that in the proposed new school there would be at least four rooms vacant for some time but the general impression existed that these would soon be filled and the building taxed to capacity and one member gave voice to the comforting suggestion that Peterborough's growth in the near future would be so rapid that only a few more years would roll before another new school would be required to take care of the educational demands of the city.

It is proposed to secure 16 acres of land upon which to erect the new building at a cost, which is roughly estimated at from $25,000 to $37,000. Even the members of the Board of Education admit they have no intention of using the entire 16 acres for the purposes of the shool but they claim that they can dispose of the land again to good advantage and can buy the site more favorably by taking the entire section of land. Many of the city's most prominent citizens entertain the gravest doubts as to the capability of the trustees of the Board to handle real estate at a profit or even with an assurance of breaking even on the deal.

THE SCHOOL BOARD'S NEW VENTURE.

THE MEMBERS of the Board of Education, at least those on the committee appointed for the purpose, were anxious to secure a site for the proposed new school on land belonging to the Chamberlain estate beyond the city limits but abutting on the Monaghan road. The regulations, however, stood in the way, as, according to law, no land outside the city limits could be expropriated unless the urban school board agreed to erect a union school, and this the members of the committee were not disposed to do.

But legislative aid was invoked. In the closing hours of the legislature an amendment to the School Act was railroaded through removing this disability from the city trustees. For an exclusively city school a site outside the urban boundaries can now be expropriated. The Chamberlain estate managers held their property at what the committee regarded as an excessive figure, but now the managers must dispose of it at a price to be fixed by arbitration.

It is probable that when the amendment in question was passed not one legislator in ten understood its provisions. It is unthinkable that the rural members of the House would vote such power into the hands of the cities if they realized what was provided for in the matter before them. No man's farm lying on an urban boundary is any longer safe, provided a city school board fancies it for a site. The land involved in this case does not happen to be a farm, but if it were the results would be the same. The relations of city and county, strained as they are at present, are not likely to be relieved by such legislation.

The law provides for a four-acre site for a school which takes care of a certain number of pupils. But the local School Board has no use for a mere four-acre plot. They propose an innovation by launching out into the real estate business. Sixteen acres is what they propose to acquire under their new powers. The idea is to dispose of the surplus acreage—at fancy figures, no doubt—to citizens who will erect upon their possessions residences that will establish the desired social status of the community. Upon the whole, it is an idealistic scheme, the main objection to which is the cost, not to mention a suspicion as to legal irregularity.

Surely the legislative machinery of the Province was not manipulated to give the School Board here, or elsewhere, the power to possess themselves of the stock in trade required for a flier in real estate. Is there a business man on the Board of Education at the present time, taking economic conditions into account, would purchase for his own speculation sixteen acres of land either within or adjacent to the city? If not, why should he be a party to tying up thousands of dollars of the public funds in such a blind venture?

Minister of Education Cody is quoted as saying that he has no objection to Peterborough's educational pilots buying sixteen acres of land. That may be Dr. Cody's opinion, but it must be remembered that by profession he is a clergyman and not a lawyer. Let the Board of Education attempt anything of the kind, and the chances are that the lawsuit certain to result will put an entirely different interpetation upon the matter. If the Board can acquire sixteen, or even one acre more than the necessary site, then there is no legal barrier to their extending their possessions in any direction where they see desirable landed property. No man who gives the matter a thought will for a moment believe that the law has any such design.

The new school as proposed is to be a credit to the city beyond all question. Its promoters have the proper idea as to the importance of the city and of its educational reputation. A clock tower is one of the contemplated features. In short, the new school is to stand as a monument to the taste and public spirit of those who planned it.

But the taxpayers of the city are entitled to consideration. They are not supposed, nor are they inclined to anticipate, monumental necessities. There are on the School Board certain citizens who were active in their opposition to the construction of the Hunter street bridge according to the expensive specifications first prepared. They railed at the City Council for extravagance and clamored for economy. Why not be consistent? These particular members are supposed to be behind the injunction proceedings now threatened to restrain the aldermen from contracting what they regard as an unnecessary debt. But injunctions are capable of extensive application. Such legal proceedings are not limited to city councils, but can be invoked in the case of other bodies.

Trustee Gordon is the only member of the Board who registered dissent to the agricultural project of his associates. Mr. Gordon is the lone lawyer in the aggregation, and his legal opinion is entitled to consideration. Constituting as he does considerable of a host in his own person, Mr. Gordon's opposition to the innovation is not to be lightly regarded.

THE GREATEST PREACHER OF THEM ALL.

EX-PRESIDENT PARSONS of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association finds himself in a dispute with the clergy of the Methodist Church, of which denomination he is a distinguished member, and to whose revenue he contributes generously. Mr. Parsons challenges the right of preachers to speak on labor or other social questions or to espouse particularly the cause of the workingman, on the ground that such sermonizing tends to foment the differences between Capital and Labor.

In this connection it is customary for someone of the same opinion as Mr. Parsons to cite that time-worn and moss-encrusted proverb about the shoemaker sticking to his last or the blacksmith to his anvil. That is supposed to relegate the preacher to what his critics regard as his proper sphere.

But the good cobbler does not confine himself to one particular kind of shoes any more than does the blacksmith who is up to date deal in a single class of handiwork. The preacher who preaches on modern topics may still be regarded as at his last or his anvil. Why tie his hands; why limit his field?

Mr. Parsons will, we take it, be willing to admit that the Nazarene was the greatest Preacher of His day and that He has held that position of eminence down to the present. And did the Nazarene never take up the cause of the poor? Did He never assail those in authority at the time of His ministrations?

The scribes and Pharisees of our Saviour's day were the lawmakers of their times, the original politicians. There is on the sacred record a report of a public address by the Nazarene which holds first place still as a scathing denunciation of camouflaged evil. Probably if the pastor from whom Mr. Parsons receives his spiritual sustenance assailed with even less bitter invective a political party with whom the man in the pew is identified, Mr. Parsons would leave the church and make good his threat of stopping his contributions.

Preaching the Gospel is the pastor's first duty. But following that line as Mr. Parsons understands it has after a history of twenty centuries failed to banish poverty from the land, to do away with injustice, to secure for the weak protection from the strong, or to save the world from the horrors of war. Give the preacher a free hand. He regards the affairs of earth from a different angle than the laity view them. His judgment should be unbiased, his opinions free from the prejudices that warp the vision of so many ordinary mortals. The sins of omission and commission of the public men and private citizens of the day are surely rather more deserving of censure than the slips and side-steps of the hero of Bible story.

If there is any trouble likely to result from the modern day preaching to which Mr. Parson objects, it is not due so much to a mistaken principle as to the fact that some preachers who take up these topics lack practical information. They may have an academic intimacy with the matter in hand, but all knowledge is superficial except that which is acquired at first hand. Some Labor Day sermons, delivered with the highest purpose in view, have demonstratd the truth of this contention. Workingmen who hear them do not fail to detect the lack of a note of sympathy, and are driven from rather than attracted to the church. They know their own economic ills but reject he offered remedy.

But the Nazarene's knowledge was universal. He studied the social conditions of the times in high and low places alike. He spent His early years among the working people, and every drop of perspiration He shed at the carpenter's bench is a gem in the diadem of Labor.

HIAWATHA SETS THE PACE.

THE INDIANS of Hiawatha have set the white race a worthy example in the matter of rewarding their returned soldiers. They did not stop at a brass band welcome home, at a flow of oratory, or a banquet, although all of these featured in the reception. But, after a flow of oratory and the feasting, every returned veteran was presented with ten acres of land. And by the way, it was not land in the wilds of New Ontario, or beyond the bounds of civilization, but right in the community where these heroes of the war can spend the rest of their days amid old home associations.

DEWART AGAINST AYEARST.

PROVINCIAL LICENSE INSPECTOR Ayearst comes through the ordeal of a Royal Commission investigation with honor untainted. Hartley Dewart, deputy leader of the Provincial Opposition, charged from his place in the House that Mr. Ayearst had hired private detectives to run down violators of the Ontario Temperance Act and had exacted a percentage of their wages for his trouble in securing them the employment. No more serious charge could be made against a public man, but Sir William Meredith, who conducted the investigation, exonerates Mr. Ayearst completely. The only man smirched by the probe is the ambitious politician who attempted to blacken the reputation of a trusted and faithful public servant.

Is Mr. Dewart, too, to escape the consequences of his failure? As a member of the Legislature he is privileged to say what he likes without danger of being called to legal account. While such a system is tolerated the reputation of no public man is safe from attack. But the matter should not be allowed to drop here. Men have been read out of their party and expelled from the House for less. Let the legislator who brings such a charge and who fails to make out even the semblance of a case, in the name of common decency resign his seat, if his associates lack the nerve to jettison him.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

PERHAPS IT IS the weather that is responsible for these municipal and educational vagaries.

• • • • •

EVENTUALLY that sixteen acres of school land may be utilised as a state-owned market garden.

• • • • •

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP, we take it, does not provide for the acquisition of outlying farm lands by the urban municipalities.

• • • • •

THE ORGANIZED BAKERS will have the proverbial stone instead of bread for the strikebreaker who interferes in the event of trouble.

• • • • •

THE FARMERS of Ontario may yet find it necessary to sit up nights armed with shot guns to guard their land from predatory school boards in the cities.

• • • • •

THE LOCAL Board of Education is a fair sample of occupational representation which makes their recent flight into the realms of speculation all the harder to understand.

• • • • •

IF THE BRIDGE as proposed was twice too wide, as some of the members of the Board of Education claimed, then it must be asserted as a measure of reprisal that the contemplated school site is exactly four times larger than the law calls for.

WHO ARE THE HUTTERITES?

In the present agitation raised over the Hutterites by the G. W. V. A. in the west it will be interesting to know that the Brethren of the Hutterischa Society, as they call themselves, are not Mennonites. They are a kindred sect which, like the Mennonites, had its origin in the Anabaptist movement in the sixteenth century. Its birthplace was Moravia, in Austria, and, through persecution the society migrated to Wallachia, which is now incorporated in the Kingdom of Roumania. With persecution following them the Hutterites moved and settled near Odessa, in South Russia, along with the Mennonites. When the Russian government removed the immunity from military service which had been granted the sect, the Hutterites, in the latter part of the nineteenth century, moved to the United States and settled in South Dakota.

It was from South Dakota that the Hutterites made their recent immigration to Canada. This, however, was not the first occasion in which the colony has visited the west. Two colonies moved to Manitoba in 1897.

An order-in-Council was passed giving them the assurance of privileges similar to those accorded the Mennonites, in 1873, with unconditional exemption from military service. But the colonies only remained in Manitoba a few years. They returned to South Dakota in the later immigration to Canada. In recent time, the Hutterites secured no assurance of immunity from military service as given to the Mennonites of 1873.

In the consideration of the Hutterite problem the fact should not be lost sight of that, however willing apart from their objection to military service, they may appear to be to make themselves amenable to the laws of the country, they are guided solely by the volume which contains the rules, regulations, and doctrines of their faith. This book is printed in German and is entitled "Rechenschaft Unsrer Religion Lehrer, und Glaubens von den Burdern die Mann die Hutterischen Nennt."

To the extent the Hutterites attracted attention in the States last year owing their avowed hostility to all war activities including the subscribing to Liberty bonds on contributing to any war aids, even the Red Cross, the executive committee of the State Council of Defence acting under the advice of its attorney, A. K. Gardner of Huron, South Dakota, instituted an informal investigation and called before it a number of the officers who were questioned on the organization and government of the Hutterite societies. In the course of the examination of one of the witnesses testified as follows in connection with the volume mentioned:

Q. In other words you are willing to follow the law of the land and the government as long as you think it doesn't in any way interfere with what is laid down in the book?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And if you make up your mind that the law of the land is contrary to anything there is in this book you recognize your authority as superior to the authority of any government you are living under?

A. If anything comes up that is against our Church we talk this over and look into the matter close, and if we find that it is against our church we positively can't do it. We've got to go by the church. We obey the government as far as we can go, but our main thing is the testament we go by in our church.

Q. Under your rules and regulations you are not at liberty to contribute in any way towards the defence of the country in any war.

A. No, Sir.

Another witness stated, in answer to a question, that if any member should obey the law of the United States that conflicted with any of the rules of the book he would be expelled from the Society.

There is much in all this to set every patriotic Canadian thinking as to this foreign element now in our midst to whom its testament is first and the law second.

TO-DAY'S STORY

British sailors engaged in anti-submarine warfare were puzzled for months by the strange actions of great flocks of white sea gulls coursing in definite and queer paths over the water a few feet above the surface. Every day the men on the destroyers saw these flocks of gulls and finally the commanding officer of one of the British patrols had an inspiration.

He steamed close to the head of the flock, cut across its path and loosed a half dozen depth bombs timed to explode at different depths. There was a wild frothing of the waves, and a few minutes later oil bubbles and finally wreckage and corpses from a U-boat came to the surface.

The secret was out. The sea gulls after two years of experience had learned that the long, dark shadow in the green depths meant food, that they had only to follow it and sooner or later human bodies would fall to their carrion appetites. So frequent were the sinkings of steamers the loss of lives and the scattering of ships' larder over the waves that it is not at all wonderful that birds of the peculiar shrewdness that characterizes the carrion species should have learned to associate the idea of food with the U-boat's appearance.

Everything about the U-Boat spelled carrion, for large numbers of the submersibles themselves were destroyed by Allied depth bombs and the German corpses left to float to the surface and be devoured by the hungry birds. The sea gulls of course, easily perceived the submarines, no matter what their depth exactly as British naval airmen could, detect them by virtue of the special clearness which the water assumes when seen from an elevation, directly above the submerged object.

The depth bomb, which the seaplane fighters and the Allied destroyers dropped served to furnish the gulls with a still larger source of food, namely, stunned fish. In waters close to the British Isles, however the fishermen, venturing out in steam trawlers, gave the birds battle for the fish.

WIT AND WISDOM

Broken Speech.

"Father," said the sharp small boy, "I saw a deaf and dumb beggar in the street this morning and he had an impediment in his speech."

"A deaf and dumb man with an impediment in his speech!" exclaimed father. "Don't talk nonsense, Lancelot."

"But he had, father," insisted the boy; "one of his middle fingers was missing."

SPORT FOR THE ANGLER

To the excellence of the fishing to be enjoyed in Algonquin Park there is undisputed testimony. Fish caught in the waters of the Park have won each year many of the national competitions open to the anglers of the continent. The brook trout of Algonquin Park are of the genuine square tailed, red spotted or speckled variety. Black bass are plentiful in the Rock Lake district and are of the small mouthed variety. Salmon trout are found in all the waters of the park. Splendid camp sites, unlimited canoe routes and hotels if you want them. Easy to access, only 200 miles north of Toronto and 170 miles west of Ottawa. Illustrated descriptive literature giving full particulars for the asking. Apply to Grand Trunk Agent or C. E. WOMEN OF WASHINGTON

HOW THE WEALTHY ARRAY THEMSELVES FOR THE DIFFERENT SOCIETY FUNCTIONS.

While awaiting the return of the President and Mrs. Wilson and the anticipated call of a new congress promising much social as well as political interest, diplomatic and presidential circles are contributing their full quota to the gayeties of the now fairly recognized spring season.

Dinner parties of 100 covers such as Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beale McLean are giving on Tuesday at their home on McPherson Square in honor of the British Ambassador and Lady Reading are rare, but dinners of fifty and sixty covers at the Country club or the Chevy Chase club are of almost nightly occurrence, and with the coming of a new congress the most popular dinners out may have a choice of hosts and hostesses equal to the gayest of midwinter seasons.

With the disappearance of uniforms of many nations, especially of the charming horizon blue of France, women's suits are taking on a whole series of new colors, many of them suggesting the military hues to which we have been accustomed for several years past.

There are several new versions of our own khaki finding great favor with smartly dressed women who for a year or so for patriotic reasons refrained from using this color.

Mrs. Philander C. Knox, just back from a prolonged stay at Palm Beach, is wearing a homespun suit in a dull pink that is in the same correctly tailored style Mrs. Knox always affects on the street. The skirt is to the ankles and very narrow; the jacket, snappy little affair between box and Eton model, comes just below the waistline.

With this Mrs. Knox is wearing a round but not high turban of milk white straw with its narrow coronet encircled in dwarf roses just the shade of the suit.

Mrs. Victor Cushman, the former Miss Louise Foraker of Ohio, is handsome and smart as ever in a homespun suit of voile with the prevailing plain and narrow skirt and a jacket of an up to date Norfolk model. With this she wears a high crowned mushroom sailor of dark brown straw with scarf to the crown and on cool days a neckpiece of sable.

Mrs. Roscoe C. Bulmer is also looking smart in a two piece voile suit in one of the new shades with her hat a round sailor of the same tone.

The twenty-eighth annual congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution, which has just passed into history was pre-eminently a business congress, just as its businesslike president-general promised to give the society when elected.

It was, however, marked by the presence of many well known and well gowned Daughters, who realize the importance of good dressing and good government within or without a patriotic society which numbers among its members the descendants of the patriots who made this continent safe for democracy 138 years ago.

To preserve the democracy and maintain the dignity of the Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution has been the successful achievement of Mrs. George Thacher Guernsey of Independence, Kas.

It is perfectly safe to assume, however, that Mrs. Guernsey does not employ a home dressmaker, for the gown in which she opened the session and wore for most of the daytime sessions bore every mark of the Rue de la Paix or Avenue de l' Opera.

This was rich taffeta of a taupe shade so dark as to be easily mistaken for black across the auditorium of Continental hall, but by reason of its color much more becoming as well as more stylish when worn with a medium size transparent hat of slightly mushroom brim with French blue rosettes of ostrich at the base of the crown. There was also a broad belt of dark blue moire ribbon, with short sash at the left side, while the superlative charm of the gown was the close undraped front and sides, covered in eyelet embroidery from belt to hem. The bodice was the closely draped model of the present day, with square cut neck and sleeves ending midway between elbow and wrist. Turned back cuffs and a collar just outlining the square neck were of embroidered organdie in delicate pattern, with narrow lace edge.

Mrs. Matthew T. Scott, one of the former presidents of the society whose method of conducting the war relief service of the D. A. R. has won her recognition at home and abroad, is another splendid example of the well gowned conservative American matron. Mrs. Scott made her report of her committee in a suit of black cloth of the most severe cut, with plain skirt and half length closely buttoned coat and a smart little toque of black straw and fancy black plumage.

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, who maintained the standard of dress of former years as state regent of Pennsylvania wore for the working sessions of the congress a gown of black charmeuse embroidered heavily in horizon blue. The gown was a semi-tailored model with the embroidery in geometrical design on the edge of the skirt also covering the long square back of the jacket. Mrs. Cook topped this with a small modish turban of black straw with aigrettes of burnt goose.

Mrs. Henry B. Joy, of Detroit, wore a modish wool and georgette gown in one of the new tan shades modeled on the soldier khaki. Except for the sleeves which are long and close and of georgette the gown is plain enough for an orthodox Friends' meeting. The girdle of the material is, however, allowed to fall in a tab-like sash at the left side with self-colored embroidery decorating each end. The top is also cut with square neck and worn in the new collarless fashion. Mrs. Joy's hat is a black straw turban, with its rather deep coronet covered in close plumage of the popular and generally becoming horizon blue.

Mrs. Joseph Leiter, who has been placed in mourning by the death of her father, the late Col. John R. Williams, is looking extremely well in a close fitting suit of lusterless black cloth topped by a silk hat in the modified continental shape with a close flat rosette as its only trimming.

Other well known women of smart society placed in mourning and maintaining distinction by reason of the simplicity and quiet elegance of their black clothes include Mrs. Henry Clay, who recently lost her brother, Mrs. Coleman of California and Mrs. C. C. Calhoun, whose mother, Mrs. Breaux of New Orleans, passed away at Mrs. Calhoun's New Hampshire avenue residence a few weeks ago.

WHAT IS WORN

Short, loose blouses reaching about four inches below the waist line.

Corsets which give the slim waistless line to the figure.

Dresses which in no way define the waist.

Embroidery in lovely mingled coloring on dresses, blouses, coats and cloaks.

Chiffon taffetas: a pleasing change from so much satin.

In some circles evening dresses elaborate as to skirt and train and surprisingly curtailed as to bodice.

How to Capture Beaver.

As compared with the otter or mink the beaver is a very slow swimmer. His front legs hang by his side, and he uses only his webbed hind feet for purposes of swimming. It is easy to capture one in a canoe if you can find him in shallow water. He is a most determined fighter, but clumsy and easy to handle. If he could get hold of you with his teeth he would almost take a leg off, so you need to watch him sharply. The way to seize him is by the tail.

Airplanes Will Help Surveyors.

In the arid wastes of Australia, where travel is exceedingly difficult and painful, and in like regions in the deserts of Africa, airplanes will make it easy to survey more square miles in a month than could be seen by means of any land vehicles in a year. It will be possible to get a true bird's-eye-view of every part of the earth's surface. No dangers involved in such work are likely to daunt men who have faced and survived the perils of aerial fighting.

Eat to Break Up Cold.

When a cold first starts physicians usually advise a light laxative diet, consisting chiefly of hot lemonade or orangeade, broths or gruels, with crisp toast, baked potatoes, mild stewed fruits and vegetables. After this for a few days, until the cold seems to be broken, it is well to eat an ordinary diet, with plenty of fruits and vegetables. To aid the body in recovering eat meals which give more fuel value than usual.

Words That Are Most Used.

It is declared by a philologist that nine words do one-fourth of our verbal work. The nine most useful words are: And, be, have, it, of, the, to, will, you. The 34 more that, with these nine, do half our literary work, are: About, all, as, at, but, can, come, day, dear, for, get, go, hear, her, if, in, me, much, not, on, one, say, she, so, that, there, they, this, though, time, we, with, write, your.

CARE OF THE HAIR

Alcohol, Orris Powder and Quick Water Shampoo.

Treatments That May Obviate the Annoying Inability to Obtain a Well-Coifed Head.

There are times when a woman feels that she just can't go another day without shampooing her hair, yet she simply hasn't the time or the inclination to go through the usual process. It may be, too, that she is unexpectedly called upon to attend a function at which a well coifed head is an absolute necessity, and she knows that her hair simply will not go up properly without a cleansing process of some sort.

Also, if the hair is to be dressed immediately after the shampoo the rigorous soap shampoo can hardly be indulged in, for scarcely a woman but voices the complaint, "Oh, I've washed my hair and I can't do anything with it!" The question is, then, to hurriedly cleanse and fluff the hair with the least inconvenience. There are three ways, notes an authority, in which this can be done.

The alcohol method is excellent. First brush the scalp and hair thoroughly with a clean brush. Get all the dust and dandruff possible out of the hair, and then rub the scalp with alcohol and wipe the thick strands of the hair with a clean cloth. This will at the same time remove dirt and oil. If the hair is put on curlers immediately after this treatment a good curl will result in a short time. Wet the hair well with alcohol for curling; it dries much faster than would water. Some women use a delicate toilet water for preparing the hair for curlers.

The second is the orris powder method. Sift it well through the scalp and hair and let it remain for 15 minutes or longer, so that it will absorb the oil. Then brush it out and the dust will come with it. The powder will fluff the hair as well as cleanse it. Do not wet the hair for curling or it will become sticky.

The third method is the quick water shampoo. It is the removal of the soap which takes so much pains and time. For an emergency you will find that dousing the head in hot water and then in cold, the latter to close the pores, rubbing it a little and entirely omitting soap, will put the hair in condition for dressing. Hair thus dipped in clear water will dry much more quickly than when given the regulation soap shampoo. Of course, this eliminates some of the oil and adds a gloss to the hair.

HANGINGS KEEP HOUSE WARM

Heavy Curtains an Effective Assistance in Cold Weather—Moist Air Easier Than Dry to Heat.

Several things besides coal will help to keep the house comfortable. Windows not needed for ventilation purposes should be stuffed all around with cotton or old newspapers. Storm doors and windows will aid materially in keeping out cold; so will heavy hangings that may be drawn across bay window spaces and other drafty places.

In all English country houses these heavy curtains are a feature of winter furnishings; they are pushed back during the day and drawn cosily at night when the family gathers about the sitting room fire.

One gas jet, burning steadily, will raise the temperature of a room five degrees—and five degrees count when your thermometer registers below 60. Spraying the rooms often with water in an atomiser helps, too, for moist air is easier to heat than dry air.

How De Valera Escaped From the English Prison Sounds Like a Dime Novel

WHILE the newspapers of the United Kingdom are still speculating over the mysterious escape from Lincoln Prison in England of Edward De Valera, the Sinn Fein leader, the manner in which he effected his break from captivity on February 3, was told by Sean O'Celligh, the Sinn Feiner.

At the first meeting of the republican members of the Irish Parliament, held on January 7, a committee was appointed to take charge of the question of the release of the incarcerated comrades, and the first result of that committee's activity was the escape of De Valera.

"The committee selected a number of men for the job who had been tried by fire, and who would not be too timid in case there was gunplay. The first task was to survey the prison and discover the possibilities of a forceful coup. Just outside the back gate of the prison was a small patch of ground on which the prisoners were allowed to exercise under guard.

"This place was surrounded by a series of barbed wire entanglements. Several armed wardens watched the prisoners, and at sunset a force of militia was thrown about the prison. Because of this militia guard, it was decided to be unwise to try to rush the place for fear of loss of life, and the probable death of De Valera.

"The next move was to communicate with De Valera, which was very difficult. However, one Sinn Feiner started working on a garden plot, of which there were several near the prison. He attracted De Valera's attention one day by singing Sinn Fein songs in Gaelic, in which he told the leader that an attempt would be made to rescue him. The warden's suspicions were not aroused because it was not uncommon for Irish workmen to be about the prison.

"This man appeared again several days later, and again sang a ballad in which he told De Valera that the rear exit of the prison was the most feasible for the attempt, and asked De Valera to secure an impression of the key to the gate.

"The impression of the key was secured. This impression was wrapped in paper with a stone and thrown to the singer in the garden plot.

"The sentries about the rear of the prison were a grave menace to the plans, and the committee tried to find girls in the neighborhood who could be employed to influence them. This attempt was given up, however, and, finally, a telegram was sent to Dublin for two handsome young women, both highly cultured university graduates, who arrayed themselves as shop girls and crossed the channel.

"The girls deliberately set out to flirt with the soldiers, and soon came to know most of the guards. De Valera was informed by code in a letter that February 3 was set for his escape and the procedure to be followed was outlined as much as possible. This little code had been arranged for just such an emergency before De Valera was imprisoned.

"On the eve of February 3, four motor cars packed with Irishmen were sent wandering about the country near Lincoln to serve as decoys for the police. At four o'clock the prisoners were brought in from their period of exercise. They then had a three-hour period for wandering about the prison before they were locked up for the night.

"In the dusk, shortly after four o'clock, the girls appeared and enticed the guards from the rear of the prison as far as possible. Then two Sinn Feiners quickly cut a path through the barbed wire.

"At 5 o'clock De Valera with McGarry and Millroy sauntered to the back gate. Their friends outside crept up and opened the gate with the false key, while the sentries continued their flirtation with the girls. An automobile was waiting and De Valera was whisked away to London, while the police chased the decoy motors.

"Where is De Valera now? I cannot state, but he will be here on time when he is wanted."

Cleaning an Umbrella.

To clean an umbrella place a tablespoonful of sugar in a basin, pour over it half a pint of boiling water and stir till dissolved. Then open the umbrella and, starting from the ferrule, sponge each gore down to the point. Leave the umbrella open till dry.

Were Artists in Brick-Making.

Babylon, at the height of her greatness, had nothing to learn from the most modern maker of bricks in the matter of the durability of her product; whilst the modern maker of bricks has still much to learn from Babylon in the matter of those wonderful colored glazes by which the Babylonish brickmaker added to the gorgeousness of the city of Sargon and Nebuchadnezzar.

Introduced Chrysanthemums.

It was in the autumn of 1808 that the first bunch of chrysanthemums was seen in Paris, brought by a Frenchman from far-off Japan. His first care was to present them to the Empress Josephine, who was delighted with the flowers and introduced their cultivation in French gardens.—Christian Science Monitor.

Not Like a Circus.

Herbie volunteered to take his aunts out walking. They went to the big museum, and one aunt asked, "I wonder if they charge admission." Herbie reassured them: "Oh, no, aunty, you don't have to pay here, this is a museum, all the animals are dead."

Packing a Trunk.

When packing an old trunk or box, list each article, package or roll on a sheet of paper and fasten to the top of the box or trunk, or use a memorandum book for all, designating each receptacle. Then when wanting an article to use refer to the list, thereby saving time and trouble.

Work While at Work.

It's a good thing not to take your hobbies to the office. It's also a good thing to dispense with easy chairs and other luxuries in your place of business. Take the rest cure at home. The office is a place of toil. It should be comfortable, but its appointments should be suggestive of work and efficiency rather than leisure. Instead of making a man feel like taking a nap the office environment should be an urge to his best efforts.

MILLBROOK

(Special Correspondence)

Millbrook, April 30.—Mr. Norman Dunford, of Oshawa, was home over Sunday.

Mr. E. C. Richards was a visitor to Peterboro on Wednesday.

Mr. W. Porteous was a visitor to Peterboro last week.

Miss Hazel Jones has returned to her school at Washago.

Miss Olive Brock spent the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs Walter Brock.

Pte. Geo. C. R. McQuade, of West Huntingdon, was a guest of his aunt Mrs. H. Kennedy, on Monday.

Mr. Wes. Larmer has purchased Mr. George Fallis' farm. Mr. Fallis has purchased Mr. Lavergne Fallis' farm.

Mr. Basil Fitzgerald, manager of the Standard Bank, Brooklin, is ill with an attack of pleurisy.

Mr. Charles Needler, of Toronto, is visiting his family in town. He intends repairing the dam at the low mill before returning to the city.

Mr. Arthur Donaldson was a visitor to Toronto the past week, a guest of his brother, Mr. Hilliard Donaldson.

Col. J. A. V. Preston, of Orangeville, was a guest of Mrs. J. Deyell on Friday.

Miss Blanche Stevenson was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Given over the week-end.

Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Higgs and the Misses Mary and Helen Higgs were visitors to Peterboro on Tuesday.

Mr. Kenneth McBean has passed his first year exams in science at Queen's University, Kingston.

Mrs. Bruce Parker and son, Master Willie, were guests of her sister, Mrs John W. Gillis, at Fenelon Falls, last week.

Mrs. James Francey was a guest of Peterboro friends on Monday.

Miss Ruby Husk was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. William Patton of Blackstock, last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Williamson and daughter, Miss Norma, are guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Lock.

Mr. Albert Lee, of Oshawa, visited his parents, Dr. and Mrs. W. D. Lee, over Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Sayles and Mr. Cecil Larmer motored to Peterboro Saturday.

Cadet Inspection.

The annual cadet inspection will take place in Millbrook on Tuesday, May 13, at 10 a.m. General Victor Williams will accompany Col. Gillespie. This will be General Williams' first vist here since his return from overseas, where he was considered one of the most daring and gallant officers in the great war. He was severely wounded and taken prisoner, and was in a German prison camp for two and a half years. It will be remembered by most of our readers that he laid the corner stone of the Millbrook armouries. Be sure to attend this inspection.

Women's Auxiliary.

The April meeting of St. Thomas branch of the Woman's Auxiliary was held on Tuesday afternoon, the 22nd, at the home of Mrs. Howden. The usual devotional and business part of the meeting was proceeded with. At the close of the meeting the president, Mrs. Allen, gave a very interesting account of a lecture given by Miss Isabel McCall in Montreal. Miss McCall drove a motor ambulance in Serbia during the war and had most thrilling experiences. Next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Needler.

Ptes. Bert Nelson and Fred. Lowery are home from overseas. The former saw much fighting and was slightly wounded twice. Both are looking well and are glad to be home again.

Pte. Hunter Home.

Pte. Hunter enlisted in the 45th Battalion of Brandon, Man., on March 1, 1915, went overseas (sailing on the Lapland), March 7, 1916, went to France in May, same year, transferred to 1st C. M. R. Was wounded at the Somme in September, 1916. After a time in hospital he rejoined his battalion, and was wounded in the hip at Petty Vimy in April, 1918. He was in hospitals and convalescent hospitals until April 15th last, when he sailed on the Araguaya for home, arriving in Millbrook on Saturday night. He had a good voyage. We are pleased to join in extending a hearty welcome to him.

Called to Madoc.

Rev. William H. Higgs has received a unanmous invitation from the official board of Madoc Methodist church to become pastor of that charge next conference year. He has accepted it, subjet to the will of conference. Mr. Higgs has been minister on Millbrook Methodist circuit for the past four years and during that time has fulfilled his duties as pastor most creditably. His services have been earnest and helpful. He and his estimable family have made many warm friends in Millbrook and Cavan, who will regret to learn that they are about to leave here, but will wish them every success at Madoc or wherever conference moves them. They will be a splendid addition to any community that is fortunate enough to have them in their midst.

WHISKEY BLANC IS NOW TABOOED

NO "HARD STUFF" TO BE SOLD IN QUEBEC BEGINNING TODAY.

Montreal, May 1.—Today will be an eventful day in Quebec. It is the incoming of the "dry" era and May Day. Not a "bone dry" time, but a period when all hard stuff will be taboo. For when the bars losed last night and the liquor shops shut their doors the real open sale of liquors in the Province ceased. Beers and light wines will still be on sale in accordance with the referendum decision of April 10th, but "whisky blanc"— the Frenchman's delight— and whiskeys of the ordinary type will be no more.

There has been a land office business here for the last three months in "drinkables." Every street almost had its great cotton signs warning the people of the "dry" time coming. They say cellars are well provided against the drought. Be that as it may the fact remains that the Gouin liquor law will make it pretty difficult for some to get their regular supplies in the future.

One of the big changes in Montreal will be the passing of the liquor shops. Montreal had them by the hundreds. Shops where groceries were sold over the same counter as liquors. The new law, of course, ends all that.

What is to become of the supplies? The window gazers will fail even to see the stuff they like behind the plate glass as of yore. It will be consigned to the cellar. Woe betide the man who tries to sell it. There were rumors that the hard stuff was going down the sewer. That produced a terrible heart-burning in some quarters; it was too cold to go in swimming yet.

In sentencing a Ruthenian to 23 months in jail for theft, Judge Elwood, at Prince Albert, Sask., made a scathing condemnation of the prevalence of serious crimes among foreigners in that province.

FARM IMPLEMENTS IN CANADA COST LESS THAN IN THE U. S.

Secretary Roland of Canadian Reconstruction Association Produces Figures to Prove This Assertion.

Winnipeg, May 1.—Charles F. Roland, secretary of the Canadian Reconstruction Association, commenting on the McMaster tariff resolution submitted to the Federal Parliament, said:

"Should the matter of revision downward of duties on agricultural implements be considered and decided upon it would be a serious detriment to the development of what promises to be one of the most important industries of Western Canada.

"A considerable proportion of the machinery required to equip a well-established agricultural implement plant in Canada has to be imported, and the net duty on it is now 35 per cent. Canadian manufacturers are compelled to import a considerable amount of their raw material from the United States, as Canadian industries in numerous lines are not yet sufficiently developed to meet the demand and some materials cannot be produced in Canada. This entails an expenditure in freight of from 30 to 40 per cent. more than paid by the American manufacturer who is close to the source of supply. For instance, take a 14-inch standard foot-lift gang plow—the freight difference on the raw material imported amounts to approximately fifty cents and the duty to $6.96. On account of the freight rates to the west being excessive the additonal freight rate of $1.15 must necessarily be added to land the finished product in Winnipeg, making the total of these extra charges $8.61. This adds approximately 10 per cent. to the jobber's price. This is the starting handicap Canadian manufacturers have in freight and duty in comparison with agricultural implement manufacturers in the United States."

Continuing, he said, "The manufacturer in the United States is able to reduce his overhead costs to the smallest minimum sum because he has a home market approximately twelve times as great as the market in Canada, and he can produce in proportionately that greater volume.

"In considering fairly the position of the Canadian manufacturers of agricultural implements who give employment to over ten thousand men and women, one must remember that there are many articles necessary to import which do not enter directly into the manufacture of implements—such as coal, coke, fuel oil, fire clay and bricks, tool steels, emery grindstones, etc. On all these the Canadian implement manufacturer pays duty, yet the American manufacturer finds them at his own door. Notwithstanding all these natural advantages the Unitd States agricultural implements are sold in the United States at the same price as Canadian-made implements in Western Canada."

The following comparisons of prices here and in the United States were given by Mr. Roland:

On 14-in. gang plow	$147	$140 00
3-furrow tractor plow	252	260.00
Double disc drill	215	223.00
3¼x3 wagon	165	160.00
3¾x3 wagon	175	163.50
10-ft. rake	60	65.00
7ft binder B.C & P.T.	260	145 00
5-ft. mower ....,	90	96.00
16 x 16 disc harrow with 4 H.C. & P.T.	80	85.00

ROUMANIA'S CAPITAL.

Bukharest Is a Great Artistic and Educational Center.

Describing Bukharest, the capital of Roumania, a statement issued by the National Geographic society says:

"The Roumanians have spared no effort or thought toward making Bukharest, their capital city, a real capital and not just one of the larger Balkan towns, cut to the severe design of the modern commercial city that is found throughout the west. The whole history of the Roumanians since the casting off of the Turkish yoke has been one of conservative progress leavened with enterprise, of thrift lightened by keen appreciation of the embellishments and pleasures of life. And in Bukharest one finds more artistic, literary and scientific life than in any other part of the peninsula.

"Bukharest is an attractive city of 300,000. It is laid out with many broad boulevards and avenues, as becomes a capital, and has, as Paris, Berlin and Washington, famous drives and parks within its area, an 'avenue of parades' and zoological and botanical gardens. The city is built in a hollow between the hills upon both sides of the Dambovita river, which is crossed by twelve ornate bridges. There are some truly magnificent buildings upon its broad thoroughfares, among the most prominent of which are the royal palace, the university, the national theater and the palace of justice. Bukharest has some squalid sections, with narrow, crooked streets, but these are reminiscences of the Turkish regime and are fast disappearing. While Bukharest does a considerable commercial business, it is of no importance industrially.

"Bukharest, like our own capital, has been developed primarily as a capital. The Roumanians have chosen Paris and Vienna as their models and have produced a judicious blending of the two upon the much smaller Balkan scale. Bukharest has plenty of good music, and its people, who gather in the concert halls or enjoy the free military concerts in the evening along some promenade, are appreciative and critical listeners. The national theater brings varied offerings, and that the best. Then the entertainments of the little capital are discreet imitations of social Paris, with a touch of mild Viennese friendliness. Furthermore, Bukharest, as also becomes a European capital, is a great educational center. Its schools, academies, colleges and university are models for Balkan countries."

GUNPOWDER.

Some In Which the Perforated Grains Are Three Inches Long.

The bigger the gun the bigger the grain of powder. For the rifles the men carry the grains are half as big as a pinhead. For the largest guns they are three inches long and three-quarters of an inch thick. Every grain is perforated lengthwise. Small grains have a single hole, while the largest sizes have seven.

These holes regulate in a wonderful way the rapidity with which the powder will burn. If you light a scrap of paper all round the edge it will burn toward the center and the burning surface will steadily decrease. If, however, you made a hole in the center of the paper and start the conflagration there the flame will steadily grow, and the most rapid burning will take place just before the fire has reached the outer edge. This is the exact principle which governs the arrangement of the perforations in big gunpowder. The burning starts along the surface exposed by the perforations and spreads always faster as the hole is enlarged, burning fastest at the instant it is consumed.

It is not intended that the charge in big guns shall exhaust its force instantly, says William Atherton Dupuy, writing on "Powder For the World's Guns." The beginning of the explosion starts the projectile on its way. The explosion continues, and as the projectile gains speed the force behind it continues to push. The powder is burning fastest and pushing hardest at the instant the projectile reaches the mouth of the gun. At that instant also it burns out and exhausts itself. Its work is done.—Pearson's Weekly.

HALIFAX AND BOSTON

TWO HISTORIC CITIES CLOSELY CONNECTED.

Loyal and Intellectual Element From Massachusetts Driven by Persecution and Hate to Take Refuge In Capital of Nova Scotia—A Few Glimpses of the Distant Past.

IT must interest Canadians to know that down in Boston, the centre of culture in the United States, they regard the city of Halifax, in Canada, as a sort of foster son. It is true that the closest kinds of historic ties bind together the Anglo-Saxon inhabitants of the two cities. It was in the time of the Massachusetts governor, William Shirley, without question the strongest personality among English-born governors of Massachusetts that ever guided the early destinies of the Bay State, that the town of Halifax came to be. The ambition of Shirley to destroy completely the still active power of France on the American Continent had been raised to a high pitch by the almost incredible success of his New England volunteer troops in the capture of the French stronghold in Cape Breton, the great fortress of Louisburg, and there can be not the least shadow of doubt that immediately after that famous exploit he urged with vigor the establishment on the wonderful Nova Scotia harbor known as Chebucto Bay of a town so largely colonized and strongly fortified that in the event of any further trouble from the French on the eastern Atlantic seaboard Britain would have a sufficient base of operations for whatever military enterprise she might need to set on foot. It has always been a tradition in Nova Scotia that the suggestion for founding Halifax came from Massachusetts, and with little question the plan was talked over time and time again between Shirley and his councillors in their formal deliberations in the Boston State House. The printed correspondence of Shirley that appeared under the editorship of Dr. Charles Henry Lincoln, in 1912, does not distinctly reveal the fact of the Boston origin of the scheme, but it does show the persistent activity of Shirley in all matters relating to the destruction of French power in eastern America, not the least urgent of which was the employment of every necessary means to establish British authority firmly in the Nova Scotia peninsula and the islands adjoining thereto.

By 1747 the British ministry was evidently firmly convinced that a town must be founded on the peninsula and a civil government established there to take the place of the military government that had for well on to forty years exercised control over the province from the ancient town and fort of Annapolis Royal, and Shirley was asked to outline a plan of government. In response the Massachusetts governor and commander-in-chief of British troops in America proposed a charter government, but for some reason his plan was not accepted. Early in 1749, however, the scheme for a settlement at Chebucto was matured, and as leader of the enterprise Col. Edward Cornwallis, uncle of Charles Cornwallis, so well known in the American Revolution, was fixed upon. In pursuance of the ministry's plan in March, 1749, the Lords of Trade published in the London Gazette an advertisement calling for volunteers for the new colony.

To the Government's proclamation so large a number of people responded, not only soldiers and sailors retired from active service, who were especially considered in the scheme, but mechanics of various sorts and farmers, that early in the following May, a fleet, consisting of thirteen transports and a sloop of war, carrying in all 2,576 persons, set sail for Chebucto. Of the intending settlers, two were majors in the army, one a foot major and commissary, six were captains, nineteen lieutenants, and three ensigns. Of retired naval officers there was a considerable number, chiefly, however, of low rank, while surgeons, surgeons' mates, governor's clerks, a brewer, an attorney, a clergyman, a schoolmaster, and several "gentlemen" are found on the ship's lists. In the subsequent history of the settlement astonishingly few of these British colonists became at all prominent; they were a mixed lot, and taken altogether were poor material on which to build an orderly and prosperous colony. A few of them who were men of good family in England and Ireland, did attain positions of high respectability and influence, the chief of these being Richard Bulkeley, Alexander Callender, John Collier, John Creighton, Robert Ewer, John Galland, Archibald Hinchelwood, William Nesbitt, and Lewis Piers. In the wake of the British came a large number of continentals — Germans and French Swiss,—but these for the most part in a short time left Halifax for the town of Lunenburg, farther west on the Nova Scotia shore.

Of such an enterprise as the founding of Halifax, the possibility, of which, as has been said, had undoubtedly commonly been discussed in Boston, it could not be expected that enterprising Boston merchants and other young men eager for new opportunities for mercantile and military advancement would be mere passive spectators. In fact, until the time just before the Cornwallis Company came, when, by one of the strangest acts of statesmanship ever perpetrated by Britain before the Revolution in reference to this continent, Louisburg, won at such remarkable odds, was restored to France, a rather large group of Bostonians were trading or occupying military or civil offices at the captured French town and fort, and the moment Cornwallis arrived, these New Englanders, obliged by the recent treaty with France to evacuate Louisburg, betook themselves promptly to Halifax. There they were soon joined by a group of families from the New England capital that could not have numbered less than a thousand souls, and that in a comparatively short time because of their general intelligence, and superior breeding, as well as steady enterprise and thrift, came to exert a largely controlling influence in government, commercial relations, and social life. In July, 1752, the governor had a census of the town taken, which remains to us in full, the names of settlers and the numbers of their families or households being scrupulously given.

When the judiciary of the new settlement and the province at large came to be established, the lawyer called to assume the important task and to become Nova Scotia's first chief justice was a conspicuous young Boston man. This was no other than the second son of Governor Belcher himself, who in the meantime, however, had been transferred to the governorship of New Jersey, Jonathan Belcher, the younger, whose mother was Mary Partridge of New Hampshire, was born in Boston July 23, 1710, and graduated at Harvard in 1728. After graduating he was sent by his father to study law at the Middle Temple in London, and when, in 1754 he was called to be the head of the Nova Scotia judiciary he was apparently practicing in Ireland. What local influence led the Halifax authorities to call him to the exalted position he for twenty-two years thereafter filled we have never learned, but when the invitation was given him he accepted it and from Ireland he sailed for Boston as soon as he could. On Monday Oct. 1, having arrived at Halifax from Boston, he was sworn a member of the council, and a week later he took the oath of office as chief justice.

In the course of Jonathan Belcher's chief justiceship of Nova Scotia occurred that tragical event, the expulsion of the Acadians from the province and the distribution of these unhappy people throughout the New England and other colonies. Five years after the expulsion, from seven to ten thousand persons, representatives of the solid old families of Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island, came into Nova Scotia and settled the interior parts of the province, though few of these settled in Halifax. But the great sweep of Boston influence into Halifax came with the advent of the Tories with Gen. Howe in 1776. In the course of the Revolution from thirty to thirty-five thousand Loyalists took refuge in this little Province by the Sea, and the first considerable movement of these victims of political fury and hate was the compulsory exile of themselves to Halifax of virtually the whole of the aristocracy of Boston with Gen. Howe in the month of March, 1776. The whole effective besieging force that withdrew with Howe, Lossing says, including seamen, was about eleven thousand, and the number of Massachusetts refugees about eleven hundred, through Walter Barrell, inspector-general of Boston customs, gives the number as 927. In Barrell's list we find the Massachusetts lieutenant-governor, Thomas Oliver, and his servants, six persons in all, eleven members of the council and a clerk of the courts, they and their households numbering seventy-three, a group of custom house officials numbering no less than thirty-seven, they and their families aggregating 132, and 22 other men, chiefly ranked as gentlemen, with their families, all them comprising the greater number of the Bostonians who were regarded as the most prominent persons in official and social life in the town.

Timber Survey Urged.

At the conference of the Canadian Forestry Association held in Montreal, it was decided to ask the Dominion Government to use the aerial resources at its disposal for the protection and observation of the forests of the country. It was also resolved that the association urge upon the proper governmental authorities to provide adequate financial assistance, and clothe the Commission of Conservation with the necessary authority to make an accurate survey of all standing timber in Canada, showing the various kinds of lumber and its quality, location and accessibility, together with available means of transporting it to the nearest market; also a report of all cut-over lands which are suitable only for forest growth, with the extent and location. This information, it was declared, would be of the utmost value, not only to lumber operators, but to the Dominion and Provincial Governments, enabling them to develop to the full extent a permanent forest policy which would have the effect of conserving the great natural resources contained in Canada's forests.

Brig.-Gen. J. B. White, D. S. O., gave a review of the work of the Canadian Forestry Corps in France, and expressed the hope that Canada would now go into the work of tree planting and reafforestation in earnest. As to the utilization of timber, Gen. White said the Germans had made full use of the wood in the lands they had occupied. All through the occupied territory of Northern France they had installed sawmills, and in one forest alone 11 mills had been established, which had cut up the forests and sent 30,000,000 feet of timber to Germany.

To Produce Soda Ash.

It is stated that the production of soda ash may be commenced in the next few weeks at the Amherstburg plant of the Brunner, Mond, Canada Limited, which has been under construction since March, 1917. While this plant was not completed soon enough to aid in the production of explosives for war purposes, the company hopes, subject to unforeseen difficulties, to proceed with little delay on commercial production of this important commodity.

It is expected that the output at Amherstburg will be sufficient to provide for the entire Canadian requirements for this product, which was formerly secured principally from Great Britain, and which was obtained from the United States during the latter stages of the war, in so far as the United States would release the commodity for export.

THEY ACTED in TIME

During 1917, twenty men, all hale and hearty insured their lives in the Sun Life of Canada. All paid the first premium, none lived to pay the second.

They paid a total of $5078.26 and their beneficiaries received $74,242.60.

The records for 1918, owing to the ravages of the "Flu," will show the above record repeated many times, and all such acted in time.

What are YOU going to do about it? Act in time or be forever TOO LATE.

THE SESSIONAL INDEMNITY

(Ottawa Citizen.)

The House of Commons should take its courage in both hands this session to put itself on a more respectable financial basis. The present sessional indemnity of $2,500 for a member of parliament is neither neither adequate nor democratic. The expense of attending the session at Ottawa is espeially heavy on the members who try to carry out their parliamentary duties most conscientiously. They sacrifice their own private business interests to give the necessary time to public service. In numerous instances, members have to pay the whole of $2,500 a year to someone else to carry on, as well as may be their private business for them during their absence; in the case of members who have no other source of income but by their own industry. It means considerable financial sacrifice to become a member of parliament.

Democracy in Canada should make it possible for men (women too.) without independent income to undertake the responsibilities of representing a constituency in parliament. The sessional indemnity could well be raised to $4,000 a year, without causing any member to become unduly plutocratic with it. The expenses of a member are not confined to living several months in the year away from home, and sacrificing private business resources; but the demand on his private purse for election expenses, for keeping in touch with political thought through periodicals, literature, travelling, attending conventions, conferences, public meetings and acting as host on necessary occasions would seem to be continuous and costly.

However modestly a member of parliament may live, he must move about among all sorts and conditions of men, or lose touch with the very public opinion which he is supposed to reflect in parliament. It should be possible for Labor representatives to go to Parliament, and feel as economically independent while there as the wealthiest Conservative representative. At present, while the sessional indemnity is equivalent to little more than $1,000 would have been before the war, it is inadequate for men without private means.

Parliament might pass measures to provide for the publicity of election campaign funds, and for the curtailment of election expenses, at the same time as it decided to increase the sessional indemnity. Democratic public opinion, looking ahead to the further independence of parliament, would show itself alert to the need for more economic independence by endorsing the increase.

Pointers For The Banquet Tonight

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review.)

The case is reported in some of the newspapers of a returned soldier, who, having been called upon for a speech declared that it was good to be home and that he had nothing more to say.

The remarkable thing about the case is, not that the returned soldier had nothing more to say, but that, having nothing to say, he sat down. Much of the horror associated with listening to speeches is due to the fact that the would-be orators, having nothing to say, insist upon talking instead of sitting down. After they get going, they seem to find it impossible to get a suitable place to stop. This is natural enough. Having nothing to say they never know when they are finished.

But why inflict speeches on returned soldiers or insist on their making speeches, when the making of a speech is the very last thing a returned soldier wants to do? It is a queer custom of our civilization, this thing of hurling speeches at the heads of unfortunate people, who have done nothing to deserve such treatment. Returned soldiers should be spared the misery. Haven't they suffered enough already?

WOULD PUNISH ALIENS.

Brandon, May 1.—That all aliens who have been naturalized without complying with the law should be punished, and that all others who have been accessory to such unjust naturalization be punished, is a recommendation by the Great War Veterans sent to the Acting Premier.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

BADLY MATED

A good man and poor eyes seem to make an ill-assorted pair. It is too bad for a man of ability to allow his usefulness and earning power to become undesirable because of failing eyesight. It is a simple matter for Dr. Fowler, with his modern appliances, to tell exactly what is wrong with the eyes, and his celebrated "PEBLO" Glasses of the correct power will make the eyesight again normal.

NORWOOD PLANS TO CELEBRATE

I. O. D. E. AND BAND WILL FITTINGLY OBSERVE VICTORIA DAY

Norwood, April 30.—Preparations are underway for a big celebration in this village on May 24th. The celebration will be under the auspices of the I.O.D.E. and band who will endeavor to make it an event worth while.

Sunday last was observed as choir Sunday in the Methodist church here. Rev. G. H. Copeland, of Toronto, and formerly of Norwood, presided at both services. He gave two very able and eloquent discourses, which were very much appreciated by the large audience.

Pte. Gordon Puffer, son of Mr. and Mrs Puffer, of this village, returned home from overseas last ewk.

Sargeant Cecil Watson, another of our Norwood boys, returned home from overseas on Saturday last. He is the second son of Mr. and Mrs. T. Watson, Spring street.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil P. Jakins and child, of Lindsay, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Nixon the past week.

Mrs. John M. Thomson and little daughter, Ruth, of Hastings, spent a few days at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Robb, "Uplands."

Mrs. Peer arrived home on Tuesday last after a two months' visit in Hamilton and Toronto.

Mr. Everett Finlay, who has spent the past few months at Cleveland, Ohio, returned home last week.

Mr. George Heagle, of Calgary, is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Marks.

Mrs James McNicholl, who spent the winter at McTear, Ont., returned home last week.

Miss H. L. MacLachlan, of Toronto, spent her Easter vacation at her home here.

The April meeting of the I.O.D.E. will be held at Mrs. B. N. Squire on Wednesday, April 30th, at 3 o'clock.

Mrs Garlick received a letter from her mother, Mrs. Brimfield, stating that she arrived safely in England on April 7th.

Mr. Hartley Ivey, of Clarina, who has recently returned from overseas, has accepted a position as teller in the Union Bank at Canfield, Ont.

Mr. Lloyd Duffield was in Kingston for a few days.

The young men of Norwood held an informal dance in the town hall last Wednesday evening.

Miss Amy Morrison, who has been visiting her cousin, Miss Bessie McNaughton, for the past week, returned to her home in Peterboro.

Miss Annie Dryden and Mr. Chas. Gardner, of Peterboro, visited friends in the village on Thursday last.

Lieut. Stacey Bush is visiting in Kingston.

Miss Elsie Laing spent Sunday in Peterboro.

Mr Johnston and Mr. Dwyan, of Peterboro, spent Sunday in Norwood.

Mr. Ab. Wellman, of Peterboro, spent Sunday with his brother, Mr. Wellman, of Alma street.

Rev. G. Copeland and Mrs. Copeland, of Toronto, have returned after a pleasant visit with friends here.

HUTTERITES ARE BARRED

Order in Council Shuts Out This Class of Aliens.

Ottawa, May 1.—The demand of the western members for the immediate exclusion of all Mennonites and Hutterites from Canada as voiced in the debate on the immigration bill in the house of commons, has already borne fruit. It is understood that an order-in-Council under the war measures act was signed last night closing all ports of entry to Mennonites and Hutterites.

It is said that a large number of enemy aliens have been naturalized in Manitoba who have not been in the country for the necessary length of time. False statements have been made in order to procure naturalization.

EDWARD EARL HAS GAINED 30 POUNDS

GETS COMPLETE RELIEF FROM SUFFERING OF FIVE YEARS STANDING.

"When I tell you I have gotten complete relief from five years of suffering and have actually gained thirty pounds besides, you can see why I think so much of Tanlac," said Edward Earl, of 17 McGregor Ave., West Toronto, Ontario, recently.

"My stomach was so badly out of order," he continued, "that I couldn't digest a thing, and my food would lie in my stomach like lead. I would bloat up terribly with gas and had pains all through my sides and around my heart. I had dizzy spells that almost made me blind; my sleep was poor; I felt tired and sluggish and really dreaded for meal time to come.

"Although I tried all kinds of medicines I kept getting worse and never found a bit of relief till I started takinf Tanlac. My stomach trouble has entirely disappeared, with all the gas, pain and nervousness, and am feeling well and strong in every way. My appetite is fine; I sleep like a log and all my weak dizzy feelings are gone."

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

TRYING TO WORK ON SYMPATHIES

OF AMERICAN ARMY OF OCCUPATION, IS THE AIM OF THE GERMANS

Pittsburg, May 1.—The German people are conducting a subtle and deliberate campaign to weaken the morals of the American army of occupation and to arouse in the hearts of Yankees a feeling of pity for the conquered, according to Lieut.-Col. H. G. Schleiter, who has just returned after 18 months service overseas with the Medical Corps of the United States army.

He feels that the campaign is directed by a higher power than the will of the masses for the nature of the advances are such that they cannot be explained as coming from a desire for pure friendship. No methods are too trivial, Colonel Schleiter said, and this fact, coupled with the aloofness with which foreigners were treated in Germany before the war, caused American authorities to suspect that the actions of the Huns were to be taken with a grain of salt.

The men were at first permitted to fraternize freely with the inhabitants but later rigid restrictions were placed both upon the men and civilians with the result that the effectiveness of the German plan was greatly reduced.

Col. Schleiter declared that the general health of the American army was exceptionally good, the percentage of sick very seldom going above normal. The damp climate of France, however, was a handicap to the doughboys who were not used to living in a country where it rained nearly every day in the year. This condition naturally caused a lot of sickness which otherwise would have been avoided.

According to Colonel Schleiter many American officers who were attached to the British army went with the idea that they were not going to like their English comrades, but they came away with a great admiration for the fighting qualities of both officers and men. He also remarked of the extraordinary friendship which sprang up between the American soldier and men from Australia and New Zealand.

The German civilian population, he said, does not appear underfed, although it is suffering from a lack of fats and will pay almost any price for a cake of soap. The people seem to have lost all pride in their army and things military, and shop windows in the occupied cites are filled with iron crosses and all kinds of formerly highly-prized military decorations which never fail to attract ready purchasers among Americans.

Shoe-shining parlors, an institution hitherto unknown on the Continent, have sprung up in all the cities, and large signs printed in English, invite the newcomers to 'Come in and get a shine," while in some inconspicuous corner is lettered in German "Germans' shoes also shined."

CAPITAL AND LABOR BOTH MENACED BY BOLSHEVISM

Two Classes Must Combine to Ward Off the Common Danger, Says Prominent Employer.

(By John Shepard, jr., President, The Shepard Stores, Boston and Providence.)

Let us all try to think clearly. It is to be regretted we do not become conversant with each other's views. We only read that which pleases us, and we walk away when we hear some one talking against our pet theories. We should read and listen and thus be broadened.

I think it was Secretary of Labor Wilson, who recently said somethink to the effect that no country owes every man a living that every country owes every man the right and the means to earn a living.

The question of a just compensation for labor should be worked out carefully. It is a problem that will be ever with us, and can be solved from time to time without bitterness, if there is intelligent effort.

President Lincoln said that through this free Government which we have enjoyed, there is an open field for industry and enterprise and intelligence that all may have an equal chance in the race of life with all its human aspirations.

Most people like work, and yet to certain minds to speak of work is like waving a red flag at a bull. They rant immediately about the terrible conditions of life, under payment, etc., etc.

These people are not talking about work at all, because work is not an evil. If, when they say work, they mean slavery under bad conditions, then I agree with them, but the spirit of the times is not one of slavery, or of bad surroundings.

Any kind of work is a pleasure midst the right surroundings. No man who has not earned his own living can, or should, secure the same enjoyment from living.

As we progress, labor is made pleasanter, and becomes a happier task, with more reasonable hours, healthy surroundings, and a reasonable tired feeling at the end of a day's work makes one feel the day is well ended.

Work can and should be, a delight to all of us.

Don't try to fill some other man's shoes unless you are equal to the task. Someone must be president of a railroad. Some must collect the fares. Others must keep the roadbed in order. Let each one do that for which he is best fitted at the time, always looking forward, however, to a higher position which comes with increased knowledge.

Union labor has doubtless come to stay, but it must act fairly. It has its weak points. It holds back somewhat the more capable, but in doing this it makes the weaker stronger, and is in this way, perhaps, a benefit to the majority.

That some of its leaders are anarchistic tends toward weakness. I have met such leaders, and they breed antagonism, and have helped keep capital and labor apart.

Some employers are nonarchistic. I must acknowledge to having learned this way myself, but such ideas are out of date, and hold back the benefits that would come from mutual understanding where there really is an honest difference of opinion but needs of each for the other are so interwoven as to make it imperative to meet with a full desire for mutual helpfulness.

ONE DAY IN THE POLICE COURT

Various Cases Disposed of by the Magistrate From Common Drunks to Neighbors' Brawls.

Howard McMasters, of Norwood, and Pearl Teal, of Peterborough, appeared in Police Court this morning charged with having been drunk in a public place.

Both pleaded guilty and were fined $10 and $4.10 costs apiece, a dollar being added to the costs in the man's case to cover the expenses of the hack which was required to bring the pair to the police station.

Inspector Joseph Stewart asked for a remand in the case of Johnston, who was arrested yesterday while on his way to this city from Norwood with nine suit cases full of bottles of whiskey.

Johnston pleaded not guilty and the remand was granted, Saturday being set as the time for the resumption of the case.

James Darwin, the driver of the truck which smashed into Coughlin's buggy at the corner of Simcoe and Water streets on Monday morning, appeared before the magistrate this morning charged with reckless driving.

Mr. C. R. Widdifield, his counsel, stated that his client pleaded guilty, but drew attention to the extenuating circumstances which he claimed existed in this case.

Monday was a wet day and Darwin had lowered the side curtains of the automobile, and as a result did not see as well as usual. Mr. Widdifield admitted that in all probability his client did not keep as close to the curb as he should have, but that his employers were satisfied to pay for the damage to Coughlin's outfit and the felt that His Worship might exercise leniency.

Magistrate Dumble did not size up the situation that way at all. He expressed the opinion that Darwin should not have had the curtains down if it obscured his view of the street and that he was endangering the lives of pedestrians and especially children. His Worship announced his intention of upholding the traffic by-law and imposed a fine of $10 with $3.10 costs, giving Darwin five days in which to pay it.

A man was charged in Police Court this morning with having abused a woman who was his neighbor on Parnell street, making use of insulting language and having attempted to assault her by throwing a bottle at her.

Joseph Wearing, in the absence of Mr Hatton, acted as Crown Prosecutor. The only witness heard in the case was the woman who brought the action.

She claimed that the man who resides in the house adjoining her had been annoying her for the past five years in a petty manner.

Lately he had taken to throwing garbage onto her property which is divided from his by a driveway only. Bottles, old dishes and rubbish of all kinds had been thrown onto her lawn and she had thrown them back onto the land of her alleged persecutor.

An argument had ensued and the man called the woman some names of a terrible nature, according to her testimony. He then threw a bottle at her and she retreated into her house and he had continued to abuse her from his verandah. Her daughters were also ready to give testimony in connection with the case, but His Worship did not call upon them, deciding that the case should be allowed to stand over for two weeks, as he could not see that it came within the scope of his court. He felt that there was redress for the woman if her statements were substantiated in a higher court before a jury and advised that she enter action there. Had the man uttered his threats and insults within the hearing of the general public Magistrate Dumble stated that he could have dealt with him. As it was he dismissed the case and advised the woman to take it to a higher court.

Mr. Birnie, who defended the man stated that he was prepared to deny all the statements of the woman, but the magistrate was firm in his decision that the case should be heard before a jury, and Mr. Wearing, the prosecutor, was satisfied.

GREECE TAKES ISLANDS.

Dodecanesus Group Laid Claim To By Italy.

Athens, May 1.—A proclamation has been issued in the Dodecanesus Islands by which it is declared that the islands have become united with Greece. Italy has laid claim to those islands, basing her sovereignty upon rights secured following the Turco-Italian war in 1911-12.

At St. Louis more than 6,000,000 pelts, valued at approximately $10,000,000, will be auctioned at the International Fur Exchange in the next two weeks.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed with Sulphur It Brings Back Its Beautiful Lustre at Once

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

LIBERALS IN CAUCUS

Sub-committee to Bring in Report re Convention.

Ottawa, May 1.—The Liberals held a caucus and it was subsequently stated that the sessional progress and arrangements in connection with the national convention to be held during the first week of August, were the matters under discussion.

A sub-committee was named to bring in a report containing suggestions as to the convention, and it is likely that a further statement concerning the confention will be given out on Monday next.

FOUND BOMBS IN NEW YORK'S MAIL

WORK OF I. W. W. IS REVENGE FOR DEPORTATION OF ALIENS.

New York, May 1.—Sixteen of the most diabolical infernal machines ever encountered by experts in crime were found literally by chance, late yesterday in the General Postoffice in this city. Apparently they were addressed. Fortunately, however, none of the victims has been injured thus far. How many others have been mailed no one can tell.

To Revenge I. W. W.

From all the information available tonight it was apparent the makers of the bombs hoped to exterminate every one who has been prominently involved in the prosecution or deportation of members of the I. W. W.

Not only were officers of the Immigration Bureau marked for destruction, but also the authors of the bill which would have stopped immigration for a year. This measure would have made it difficult for Russian radicals to gain access to this country.

Agents of the Department of Justice and they believed the mailing of the bombs was timed to cause a reign of terror on May Day, observed throughout the world not only by peaceful Labor organizations, but the most pronounced radicals.

Demonstration on May Day.

It was recalled that radicals in this country had threatened a demonstration on May Day in behalf of Thomas J. Mooney, under sentence of life imprisonment in California for murder in connection with the preparedness-day bomb outrages. Labor generally has advocated action of some kind in his behalf, but has frowned on radical ideas.

The deductions of the Government agent were based not only on the list of those who have received the bombs addressed to them, but the names on the wrappers of the infernal machines seized in the postoffice here.

MAYOR MACBRIDE HONORED

Council Praises Him and Raises Honorarium $300.

Brantford, May 1.—Mayor MacBride, who is serving his second year in the chair, was surprised and honored by the City Council at a late hour Monday evening when after every member of the Council present personally testified to his efficiency and self-sacrifice, the Council advanced his honorarium from $1,400 to $1,700. The action was based on the increasing duties and responsibility of the head of the city, and the belief that it was now necessary that an occupant of the Mayor's chair give the greater part of his time to his civic duties.

and the valley Dor. We came upon her but a short distance from the palace. With her was faithful Woola, the hound, but none other.

"When we overtook her she feigned anger and ordered us back to the palace, but for once we disobeyed her, and when she found that we would not let her go upon the last long pilgrimage alone she wept and embraced us, and together we went out into the night toward the south.

"The following day we came upon a herd of small thoats, and thereafter we were mounted and made good time. We traveled very fast and very far due south until the morning of the fifth day we sighted a great fleet of battleships sailing north.

"They saw us before we could seek shelter, and soon we were surrounded by a horde of black men. The princess' guard fought nobly to the end, but they were soon overcome and slain.

"When she realized that she was in the clutches of the Black Pirates she attempted to take her own life, but one of the blacks tore her dagger from her, and then they bound us both so that we could not use our hands.

"The fleet continued north after capturing us. There were about twenty large battleships in all, besides a number of small cruisers.

"That evening one of the smaller cruisers, that had been far in advance of the fleet, returned with a prisoner, a young red woman, whom they had picked up in a range of hills under the very noses, they said, of a fleet of three red Martian battleships.

"From scraps of conversation which we overheard it was evident that the Black Pirates were searching for a party of fugitives that had escaped them several days prior.

"That they considered the capture of the young woman important was evident from the long interview the commander of the fleet held with her when she was brought to him. Later she was bound and placed in the compartment with Dejah Thoris and myself.

"The new captive was a very beautiful girl. She told Dejah Thoris that many years ago she had taken the voluntary pilgrimage from the court of her father, the jeddak of Ptarth. She was Thuvia, the princess of Ptarth.

"And then she asked Dejah Thoris whom she might be, and when she heard she fell upon her knees and kissed Dejah Thoris' fettered hands and told her that just recently she had been with John Carter, prince of Helium, and Carthoris, her son.

"Dejah Thoris could not believe her at first, but finally, when the girl had narrated all the strange adventures that had befallen her since she had met John Carter and told her of the things John Carter and Carthoris had narrated of their adventures in the valley Dor, Dejah Thoris knew that it could be none other than the Prince of Helium, 'for whom,' she said, 'upon all Barsoom, other than John Carter could have done the deeds you tell of.'

"And when Thuvia told Dejah Thoris of her love for John Carter and his loyalty and devotion to the princess of his choice Dejah Thoris broke down and wept, cursing Zat Arras and the cruel fate that had driven her from Helium but a few brief days before the return of her beloved lord.

"'I do not blame you for loving him, Thuvia,' she said. 'And that your affection for him is pure and sincere I can well believe from the candor of your avowal of it to me.'

"The fleet continued north nearly to Helium, but last night they evidently realized that John Carter had indeed escaped them, and so they turned toward the south once more. Shortly thereafter a guard entered our compartment and dragged me to the deck.

"'There is no place in the land of the Black Pirates for a green one,' he said, and with that he gave me a terrific shove that carried me toppling from the deck of the battleship. Evidently this seemed to him the easiest way of ridding the vessel of my presence and killing me at the same time.

"But a kind fate intervened, and by a miracle I escaped with but slight bruises. The ship was moving slowly at the time, and as I lunged overboard into the darkness beneath I shuddered at the awful plunge I thought awaited me, for all day the fleet had sailed thousands of feet above the ground, but to my utter surprise I struck upon a soft mass of vegetation not twenty feet from the deck of the ship.

"In fact, the keel of the vessel must have been grazing the surface of the ground at the time.

"I lay all night where I had fallen, and the next morning brought an explanation of the fortunate coincidence that had saved me from a terrible death. As the sun rose I saw a vast panorama of sea bottom and distant hills lying far below me.

"I was upon the highest peak of a lofty range. The fleet in the darkness of the preceding night had barely grazed the crest of the hills, and in the brief span that they hovered close to the surface the black guard had pitched me, as he supposed, to my death.

"A few miles west of me was a great waterway. When I reached it I found that it belonged to Helium.

"Here a boat was procured for me. The rest you know."

For many minutes none spoke.

Dejah Thoris in the clutches of the Black Pirates! I shuddered at the thought, but of a sudden the old fire of an unconquerable self confidence surged through me.

I sprang to my feet and with back thrown shoulders and upraised sword took a solemn vow to reach, rescue and revenge my princess.

A hundred swords leaped from a hundred scabbards, and a hundred fighting men sprang to the table top and pledged me their lives and fortunes to the expedition. Already my plans were formulated.

I thanked each loyal friend and, leaving Carthoris to entertain them, withdrew to my own audience chamber with Kantos Kan, Tars Tarkas, Xodar and Hor Vastus.

Here we discussed the details of our expedition until long after dark. Xodar was positive that Issus would choose both Dejah Thoris and Thuvia to serve her for a year.

"For that length of time at least they will be comparatively safe," he said, "and we will at least know where to look for them."

It was estimated that it would require [illegible] months to complete our preparations in view of the fact that the utmost secrecy must be maintained to keep the project from the ears of Zat Arras.

Kantos Kan was confident now that the man's ambitions were fully aroused and that nothing short of the title jeddak of Helium would satisfy him.

"I doubt," he said, "if he would ever welcome Dejah Thoris' return, for it would mean another nearer the throne than he. With you and Carthoris out of the way there would be little to prevent him from assuming the title of jeddak, and you may rest assured that so long as he is supreme here there is no safety for either of you."

"There is a way," cried Hor Vastus, "to thwart him effectually and forever."

"What?" I asked.

He smiled.

"I shall whisper it here, but some day I shall stand upon the dome of the temple of Reward and shout it to cheering multitudes below."

"What do you mean?" asked Kantos Kan.

"John Carter, jeddak of Helium," said Hor Vastus in a low voice.

The eyes of my companions lighted, and grim smiles of pleasure and anticipation overspread their faces as each eye turned toward me questioningly.

But I shook my head.

"No, my friends," I said, smiling. "I thank you, but it cannot be—not yet at least. When we know that Tardos Mors and Mors Kajak are gone to return no more, if I be here then, I shall join you all to see that the people of Helium are permitted to choose fairly their next jeddak.

"Whom they choose may count upon the loyalty of my sword, nor shall I seek the honor for myself. Until then Tardos Mors is jeddak of Helium and Zat Arras is his representative."

"As you will, John Carter," said Hor Vastus. "But—what was that?" he whispered, pointing toward the windows overlooking the gardens.

The words were scarce out of his mouth ere he had sprung to the balcony without.

"There he goes!" he cried. "The guards! Below there! The guards!"

CHAPTER XIII.

Death of the Holy Thern.

WE were close behind him, and all saw the figure of a man run quickly across a little piece of sward and disappear in the shrubbery beyond.

"He was on the balcony when I first saw him!" cried Hor Vastus. "Quick! Let us follow him!"

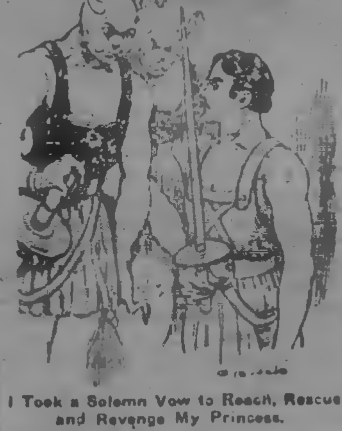
Together we ran to the gardens, but even though we scoured the grounds with the entire guard for hours no trace could we find of the night marauder.

"What do you make of it, Kantos Kan?" asked Tars Tarkas.

"A spy sent by Zat Arras," he replied. "It was ever his way."

"He will have something interesting to report to his master, then," laughed Hor Vastus.

"I hope he heard only our reference to a new jeddak," I said. "If he ever heard our plans to rescue Dejah Thoris



I Took a Solemn Vow to Reach, Rescue and Revenge My Princess.

it will mean civil war, for he will attempt to thwart us, and in that I will not be thwarted. There would I turn against Tardos Mors himself were it necessary.

"If it throws all Helium into a bloody conflict I shall go on with these plans to save my princess. Nothing shall stay me now short of death, and should I die, my friends, will you take oath to prosecute the search for her and bring her back in safety to her grandfather's court?"

Upon the hilt of his sword each of them swore to do as I had asked.

It was agreed that the battleships that were to be remodeled should be ordered to Hastor, another Heliumetic city, far to the southwest. Kantos Kan thought that the docks there, in addition to their regular work, would accommodate at least six battleships at a time.

As he was commander in chief of the navy, it would be a simple matter for him to order the vessels there as they could be handled and thereafter keep the remodeled fleet in remote parts of the empire until we should be ready to assemble it for the dash upon Omean.

It was late that night before our conference broke up, but each man there had his particular duties outlined, and the details of the entire plan had been mapped out.

Kantos Kan was to attend to the remodeling of the ships. Tars Tarkas was to get into communication with Thark and learn the sentiments of his people toward his return from Dor.

If favorable, he was to repair immediately to Thark and devote his time to the assembling of a great horde of green warriors whom it was our plan to send in transports directly to the valley Dor and the temple of Issus while the fleet entered Omean and destroyed the vessels of the Black Pirates.

Upon Hor Vastus devolved the delicate mission of organizing a secret force of fighting men sworn to follow John Carter wherever he might lead.

As we estimated that it would require over a million men to man the thousand great battleships we intended to use on Omean and the transports for the green men as well as the ships that were to convey the transports it was no trifling job that Hor Vastus had before him.

After they had left I bid Carthoris good night, for I was very tired, and, going to my own apartments, bathed and lay down upon my sleeping silks and furs for the first good night's sleep I had had an opportunity to look forward to since I had returned to Barsoom.

• • • • • • •

Six months later Kantos Kan, Tars Tarkas, Hor Vastus, Carthoris and myself met quietly in a room in my palace, and I questioned them regarding the preparations for the rescue of Dejah Thoris.

THEATRICAL

THE GREAT LIND!

What is he? Man or woman. At the Grand Tonight, Friday and Saturday.

EXTRA SPECIAL ATTRRCTION AT THE GRAND THURSDAY, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

On account of previous bookings vaudeville and pictures will be presented on Thursday, Friday and Saturday instead of the first half of this week.

The great favorite, Norma Talmadge, will be seen in her biggest success, "Her Only Way," from the stage play of the same name. The star vaudeville bill will be headed by the famous Lind, in singing and dancing painting. "Lind" is one of the world's most wonderful female impersonator, whose really remarkable camouflage has entertained and mystified people in every section of the universe. Though "every inch a man," his form, attire, beauty, voice appearance and womanly eccentricities are unquestionably feminine and most decidedly pretentious.

"Lind" offers a most pretentious callclassical [illegible] terpischorean and vocal novelty which is billed under the title of "Singing and Dancing Paintings," consisting of a series of beautiful character pictures posed in a massive frame following each pose A characteristic dance emblematical of the subject pictured is presented by the remarkable artist.

The work of this splendid artist is assuredly the last word in an act peculiar to the genius of its originator. Expert dancing and a singing voice requisite to the needs of the production are part of his equipment. It is an attraction that will unquestionably prove the big drawing card of the season.

Foster and Foster will be seen in a skit entitled "The Volunteer Pianist." Of the many comedy acts to be seen here this season none will provoke more genuine laughter and please more highly than this offering of Ed. and Minnie Foster.

As an added attraction Raymond & Vincent, a delightfully entertaining couple, present a bill under the caption of "Names Don't Count," consisting of some exceedingly clever acting and good music. Both are splendid singers. Their parodies are original and amusing. Their feature number a travesty on family affairs, representing the first month and two years after marriage, is a scream. It is cleverly acted and the best travesty seen in many a day.

Charlie Chaplin will be seen in "Oh, What a Night!" and a special [illegible] Magazine. Altogether this is the best bill ever offered in Peterboro and at prices to suit everybody. 10c 15c Matinees and 15c-25c evenings. Reserve your seats in advance.

GREAT FEMALE IMPERSONATOR

"LIND" WEARS PARISIAN GOWNS THAT ARE MARVELS OF CREATION.

Lind, who is advertised as the headline attraction at the Grand Opera House today, Friday and Saturday, presents a posing act which is almost sure to deceive the audience at each performance. The presentation is a novelty in this country and has aroused great interest wherever it has been shown.

Lind appears as a female impersonator, and in his art is said to be second to none. He shows three changes of gowns each day, and does not wear the same gown twice in a town. Ladies of fashion and modistes will probably be interested in these latest Parisian creations.

Lind is of Swedish birth but was educated in France and speaks with a rather pronounced French accent. He has presented his act in nearly every country in the world. His American contract will be completed in June, and after that he is billed to open at the Victoria Palace Theatre, London, England.

Off the stage Lind's waist measure is thirty-eight inches, but when he dons his feminine attire his waist measures only twenty-two inches. So good are his impersonations that he was asked to pose for several Nell Brinkley pictures, which he did.

Mr. Lind declares that he likes Canada very much indeed and hopes to return after the completion of his European contract.

REVIVAL IN SPORT THIS YEAR FROM BASEBALL TO MARBLES

Preparations Are Being Made For Big Season in Every Branch of Athletic Activity.

Chicago, May 1· The revival of interest that the coming of peace will brin gto sport will obtain in every branch, writes an eastern sports observer.

Horse racing, always a major sport, promises to enjoy one of the best seasons it has seen in a decade. On eastern tracks, where racing maintained its great popularity in spite of the war and did its bit in the way of generous contributions to war charities of every sort, the 1919 season is expected to boom.

The Jockey club, which supervises racing in the metropolitan district, is going ahead with plans for one of the busiest seasons in its history. At a recent meeting Maj. August Belmont, recently returned from France, was re-elected chairman. Other officials, whose war time services kept racing on its feet, were returned to office, and while Maj. Belmont and some of his associates have made no definite prediction regarding the outlook this year, they are known to be agreed that in so far as the popularity of the racing game may be forecast there is not a cloud on the horizon.

Eastern Classics Renewed.

The eastern classics will all be run this year, only with added interest and inducement in the way of larger purses. Racing men who were called by the war from their associations with the turf game were few, but all are expected to return.

Racing at tracks throughout the country in Maryland, Kentucky and Louisiana, in Cuba, and at Tia Juana where James W. Coffroth and his associates are planning a revival of racing, now that it is permissible to cross the border line—is expected to boom.

Harness racing on the tracks of the Grand circuit also will come back with a bank. The railbirds who follow the harness events are confident that their favorite sport will thrive as never before.

Auto Racing Coming Back.

Auto racing, too, is coming back with a period of spasmodic activity extending over the last three years. The big 500 mile classic at Indianapolis, long recognized as the blue ribbon event on the auto racing season, is to be revived. Carl Fisher, Harry Stutz and their associates at Indianapolis plan the comeback of the Hoosier event on a broader sale than ever before. Sheepshead Bay will be reopened, too, and the various fixtures that featured auto racing of other years in different parts of the country will all be revived. Officials of the A. A. A. are unanimous in predicting a successful season.

Officials of the New York Yacht club and other yachting organizations are planning an active season. But pending the formation of definite plans for yachting events announcements are being withheld.

Sir Thomas Lipton's challenge for the renewal of the series for the America's cup threw an unexpected stimulant into the midst of plans for the revival of yachting, and though the challenge will not be accepted by the New York Yacht club before the summer of 1920 it is bound to have its effect in speeding up the comeback of the sport.

Polo to Have Comeback.

Polo also will be revived during the year, though on what scale has not been determined. Harry Payne Whitney and other easterners whose efforts in past years were directly responsible for the success and the countrywide attention claimed by polo are admittedly considerin gits revival in the spring, and it is expected to received an unusual amount of attention in army circles.

Billiards, bowling, basket ball, indoor baseball, association football and many lesser sports will all be brought forth, dusted off and given a new start. Championship matches in balkline billiard circles are now in the making. Willie Hoppe, who has been consistently inactive for several years, may be forced to come out in defence of the title.

The future ahead of football, particularly in college circles, is surcharged with optimism. The grid game will be brought back in all its glory next fall, according to the predictions of its optimistic followers. In the east the Big Three—Yale, Harvard and Princeton—will pull away from the "informal" game and the old time classics will be revived.

TO DEPORT ALIENS.

Australian To Start Action Against Internes.

Melbourne, May 1.—The Commonwealth of Australia plans to deport interned aliens beginning late this month. The internes, who are for the most part Germans previously resident in Australia, the crews of captured ships and prisoners transferred to the Commonwealth from the East, will have the right of appearing before special magistrates and showing why they do not wish to be returned to Germany.

English Lavender and Mint.

The great secret of English lavender and mint lies in the soil—a light, friable, chalky soil, not often found in a climate congenial to both plants, yet essential to a perfect result. Each, in fact, may be grown with a certain measure of success on hill, in marshland, or meadow, for both are hardy, and, when well rooted, are nearly impervious to drought and frost.

The Sunflower.

In olden times the name for the sunflower was solsequie the sun-follower. The ancient sunflower, or sun-follower, was the marigold; the plants of the present day are of American origin. It sometimes attains a height of [illegible] feet. It was introduced into Europe in the middle of the sixteenth century.

It Can't Be Done.

A French professor avers the greatest wealth of thought comes to the human brain between two and four o'clock in the morning. Has the learned professor ever been able to hit on one that come anyways near fooling his wife during the wee small hours? Neither [illegible] Galt.

Pictures of Christ.

All pictures of Christ now in existence represent the artists' imaginative conceptions, based more or less on Biblical and other descriptions of his personal appearance. Those of Leonardo da Vinci and Raphael [illegible] the earliest acceptable ones.

Called for Rest.

My brother was telling his little daughter a story and at the same time was trying to get her to sleep, which was a hard thing to do. He was telling the story of Rip Van Winkle. He was saying, "And he walked and walked and walked—" "O, don't walk so much," chimed in the little girl.—Chicago Tribune.

Snake's Skin as Barometer.

The skin of the black diamond rattlesnake is utilized as a barometer in Florida. When preserved like rawhide and hung up the skin will emit beads of moisture at the first indication of a storm. These indications occasionally occur several hours before the arrival of the atmospheric disturbance.

Why Business Fails.

Dr. Malcolm Keir of the University of Pennsylvania attributes the 15,000 to 20,000 business failures which occur annually to one or more of the following causes: Inexperience, unwise use of capital, employment of relatives, poor location and accounting, extension of credit and dishonesty.

Give the Best That's in You.

The man who persistently and determinedly fills his position in the best possible way will eventually succeed from a monetary standpoint, not to mention the good he is doing by setting such an example, and his infinite gain in character and self-respect.

As the Gang Saw Them.

Three little boys were calling each other by the names of "Red," "Squinch" and "Bones." When asked why they did so, Squinch spoke for them. "It's our names what matches our looks best to the gang."

Only One Kind of Right Action.

Rightness expresses of actions what straightness does of lines; and there can no more be two kinds of right action than there can be two kinds of straight lines.—Herbert Spencer.

"Fireproof" Orientals.

Orientals seem to be immune to the fierce heat of the fireroom in ocean steamers, and can endure for a great length of time temperature that would speedily prostrate white men.

Great is Power of Love.

If you would gain mankind, the best way is to appear to love them; and the best way of appearing to love them is to love them in reality.—J. Bentham.

Responsibility.

If we are not responsible for the thoughts that pass our doors, we are at least responsible for those we admit and entertain.—Charles B. Newcomb.

Prince Joachim Learns About the Unpopularity Of Royalty in Bavaria

THIS is the story of the arrest of Prince Joachim at a hotel in Munich, Bavaria, as related by a man familiar with the circumstances:

The prince was discovered at a writing table, with the princess seated in an armchair nearby, reading a novel.

"I presume you are Herr Joachim of Hohenzollern?" said the spokesman of the party sent to arrest him in connection with the alleged royalist plot.

The prince eyed the soldiers a little contemptuously, and then said:

"I suppose that is my name in new Germany. What do you want?"

"We have come," replied the leader of the soldiers, "to arrest you for complicity in the reactionary plot."

"That's a lie," retorted the prince, while the princess burst into tears.

"Don't ill-treat my husband," she pleaded. Whereupon the sergeant leader of the revolutionary soldiers replied quietly:

PRINCE JOACHIM.

"Madame, we do not do things the way they were done when your father-in-law ruled Germany."

The princess, a pretty woman, dried her tears when she learned that the soldiers were not going to take her husband away. The prince were merely required to give his word as a gentleman to consider himself under restraint.

He was required to repeat after the sergeant the following pledge:

"I, Joachim Hohenzollern, consider myself under arrest, and give my word of honor not [illegible] from my bedroom [illegible]."

Even this nocturnal arrest [illegible] angered the prince. He could not sleep that night, and went out into the hotel corridor to discuss with soldiers the political situation. Then toward dawn, he telephoned to the Prussian Legation to protest [illegible] official there is said to have replied sharply that the Bavarian Minister was asleep and could not be disturbed.

"Ah," retorted the prince, "what a different tone you would have adopted six months ago."

The prince and princess were expelled from Bavaria later in the day.

Handy Plant in Desert.

In the desert of Sonora, Mexico, there is a plant, the guarequi, which husbands its water supply. The guarequi is a relative of the squash and pumpkin, and inhabits a locality in which practically all the rain falls within a period of six weeks. The base of the stem is swollen to form a hard, woody structure, which in time attains the size of a large squash. It is really nothing more than a vegetable reservoir designed to hoard up the scanty moisture and dole out the precious fluid in time of need.

Stockholm an Icehouse.

Stockholm is built upon islands, and the same means "an island in sound." For several months in the year it is closed by ice.

Mildew Stains.

To remove mildew stains, rub with lemon juice and salt. The same treatment will remove peach and all friut stains.

OBITUARY

THOMAS DOMAN.

THE LATE J. W. LEONARD

J. W. Leonard, head of the Toronto Terminal Company and an old employe of the C. P. R., who died recently at his home in Brampton, was at one time a resident of Peterboro where he was well known. The late Mr. Leonard was one of the many natives of this district who have gone out into the world and prospered.

Mr. Leonard had been ill for over a year with stomach trouble and had recently returned to his home in Brampton, from Battle Creek, Mich., where he had undergone an operation. He had also undergone treatment at the John Hopkins Hospital. About two years ago he moved to Brampton where he had made many friends. Mrs. Leonard and one son, Clarence, of Brampton, survive him and Mrs. Joseph Fair, of Listowel, is a sister. The funeral takes place today by special train to North Toronto Station, thence to Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

Mr. Leonard was born at Epsom, Ont., in 1858, and entered the service of of the Midland Railway at fourteen and became a telegrapher. He was stationed at Franklin, where he married Miss McQuire, whose brother was station agent there. He afterwards came to Lindsay, and was for a time operator at Victoria Junction, north of the town, and later assistant manager. The late Col. Deacon was paymaster on the road which was built by the late James Ross. The late Mr. Leonard afterward joined the Credit Valley Railroad and during its construction was stationed at Streetsville. From 1884-90 he was superintendent of the C.P.R. and general superintendent of the Ontario-Quebec Division, 1893-1901; then of the Western division until 1903, and assistant general manager of the eastern lines till 1908, and general manager 1908-1911, since which time he was assistant to the vice president.

In 1915, he became head of the Toronto Terminals Company, under which the new Union Station was built.

Mr. Leonard was regarded as one of the best railway men in Canada.

ENGLAND EXTENDS TRADE PREFERENCE TO CANADA

Other British Colonies are Formed—Chancellor of Exchequer Makes Important Statement in Parliament

London, May 1.—Austen Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, made a statement on the government's budget. a feature of which was the introduction in the budget of imperial colonial preference. The principal colonial products affected by its introduction will be tea, cocoa and rum, but there are other products like cotton, sugar, tobacco and wine in which there will be great opportunities for development of trade. It is considered that never was there a time when the imperial development was so important.

The preference on alcohol is one-third, while the preference on tea, nearly 92 per cent. of which is grown within the empire will be equivalent to reducing the duty and involve a loss of 2,200,000 pounds of revenue. It is expected the preference will greatly increase the consumption of tea. Fifty per cent. of the cocoa is produced within the empire and at a preference of seven shillings per hundred weight. the loss in revenue will be 200,000 pounds.

The increased duties on beer and spirits are domestic, and not customs duties.

Preference on Tobacco.

The preference on manufactured tobacco will be one shilling four pence per pound, which is considered a substantial concession and should increase production in India and the colonies. The estimated revenue from tobacco is 47,000,000 pounds. but only two per cent. of it comes from empire sources.

The estimated sugar revenue is 39,000,000 pounds. Seven per cent. of it comes from the empire. The preference will be worth four shillings per hundred weight, meaning a loss of 500,000 pounds sterling in revenue.

The preference on wine duties is levied at two rates, one shilling three pence and three shillings, according to the strength of the wine. Preference is given by a reduction of six pence in the lower class and a shilling on the higher class. This will prove of importance to South Africa and Australia. The chancellor said he was unwilling to raise the duties on account of the interest of Great Britain's allies, France and Portugal.

The chancellor added that spirits presented the hardest problem. Excise taxes produced a large revenue and preference could not be the form of reducing this revenue, and to give preference by reduction would necessitate a corresponding reduction in excise rates. Therefore preference was given by increasing duty on foreign spirits two shillings sixpence per gallon.

Island Veterans For Prohibition

RETURNED SOLDIERS OF MANITOULIN FORM ORGANIZATION AT LITTLE CURRENT.

Little Current, Manitoulin, May 1—Apparently the Manitoulin Veterans are not going to be left behind in the work of reconstruction now going on in the world. They have formed a strong local organization and have come forward with an active militant agendum. An organization meeting was held in the Mansion House, attended by about fifteen of the "Original Firsts," and steps were taken to get in touch with the central organization of Ontario. Provisional officers were appointed. President, Clarence Cook; First Vice-President, Peter McLean; Second Vice-President, H. N. Armstrong; Secretary-Treasurer, W. A. Sims. Large numbers of the local and Island boys came into the branch, and it is thought this will be the strongest unit on the North Shore outside of Sudbury and the Sault. Clubrooms are being fitted up on Water street under the direction of the Women's Comfort Committee, and the association expects to have the best rooms in the district.

It was decided to send a delegation of four members of the Gore Bay convention at the end of the week, and also to appoint representatives to meet the Windsor gathering at the end of May.

Suggestions were brought forward and adopted for a stand at the conventions on several vital topics.

Prohibition—The association are behind the movement, and hope to see Dominion-wide prohibition.

Income tax—It was decided to make a strong protest against the taxing of returned soldiers with incomes to less than $2,000. The Veterans wish to point out that capitalists and others of great wealth have put their money into Dominion tax-free bonds. When the boys come home they will find that those who stayed at home have scurried for cover. and that they who bore the brunt of the battle will be expected to pay for the war also.

Gratuity—It was also decided to ask the Government for a straight gratuity of $2,000 instead of the elusive land settlement scheme that so many of them cannot adopt.

STEEL BRIDGE FOR NIAGARA

BIGGER CONTRACT THAN THAT OF THE HUNTER STREET STRUCTURE.

Bridgeburg, May 1.—It is rumored here that the steel contracts have been let for the proposed Canadian-Niagara Bridge Company's bridge over the Niagara River near here, between western New York State and Canada. The announcement has not yet been confirmed by officials of the Canadian Pacific, the Toronto, Hamilton & Buffalo. or the New York Central Railway, but is accepted in railway circles here as being most likely. owing to activity in connection with the entire bridge project of the last few weeks.

The establishment here of a new bank, which largely deals with the Canadian Pacific and the Michigan Central, the latter road having running rights over the C. P. R., the fact that much land has been optioned recently on Grand Island. N. Y., in the centre of the Niagara across from Bridgeburg. and other steps taken. leads local citizens to believe that in the CanadianNiagara bridge will soon be under way.

Engineers estimate it will take five years to complete the structure.

PETERBORO INSURANCE RATES ARE RAISED FORTY PER CENT BY UNDERWRITERS ASS'N

Fire Department Equipment Found Below Standard for a City of This Size by Official of Association Who Made Inspection Last February —Important Additions and Extensions Are Called for Before Rate Can Be Reduced—Business Men Only Affected by Penalty of 15 Cents on Every Hundred Dollars.

The Underwriters' Association has decided to increase the insurance rate on mercantile stock and holdings in Peterborough by 15 cents on every $100, this action being taken as a result of the official inspection made of the fire-fighting facilities here on February 18th last by Inspector Norman R. Wilson, representing the association. Mr. Wilson reported deficiencies in the equipment here, and the penalty referred to was imposed following the usual procedure in such cases. If Peterborough's City Council has been economical in its administration of the fire department, the business men in the city have money taken from one drawer of the safe, even if the funds in another are left untouched.

Inspector Wilson in his report makes it clear that the trouble does not lie with the Fire Chief and his staff. The equipment alone is deficient and this bears out what has so often been urged upon the aldermen by Chief Grange. The number of men on the brigade, to begin with, was below the normal. At the time of the inspection there were only 17 firemen, whereas the number insisted upon by the underwriters for a city the size of Peterborough is 22. Conditions at the fireball are not up to the mark, either. For one thing, there is only one sliding pole provided when three are necessary in order to enable the men to make a prompt response to a fire alarm during the hours of the night.

Inspector Wilson also reports that one firehall for Peterborough is totally inadequate. There should, he contends, be three more, one in the south, one in the north end of the city, and another in Ashburnham.

The installation of the double platoon system does not figure in this increase in rates. It was not in force at the time of the inspection, and since that innovation was introduced the number of firemen has been increased in conformity with requirements. All will agree with the finding of the inspector, which contains no criticism of the personnel of the department. The local brigade was never so efficient as it is today. Chief Grange has the confidence of the public and of his assistants. He is thoroughly competent for his position, and the discipline at the firehall is exemplary. The Chief has recommended improvements that the City Council have so far failed to introduce. In a word, Chief Grange and Inspector Wilson are in practical accord.

The Inspector's Report.

The report of Inspector Wilson, which is in the possession of The Review, is an exhaustive document printed with sensational sugestiveness upon pink paper, like the basebal lertra of modern times. It gives detailed information as to the city, the water supply, and the fire-fighting apparatus, with all of which the average citizen is already familiar and which it is not necessary to reproduce here. The summary, however, sets forth al lthe essential conditions. This is as follows:

Steam Fire Engine

The engine was taken on the 19th of February to the dock on the east side of George Street between Townsend and Rink streets. Fire lighted at 9.18 a m. Steam gauge moved 9.23. Pumping started 9.32 with 60 lbs. steam. Owing to there being a considerable abount of ice on the dock the engine began to slide and was stopped at 9.35 in order to make it secure. Pumping started again at 9.45 with 135 lbs. steam, with two lines of 250 feet each and 1¼ inch nozzles. Nozzle pressures were 55 and 50 lbs., giving an approximate discharge of 428 gallons per minute. The steam pressure rapidly dropped to 90lbs. at 9.50'40lbs. at 9.55 and 20 lbs. at 9.57, when it was found that the boiler tubes were leaking badly and the test was stopped.

TWO HUNDRED CULPRITS IN CLEVELAND POLICE COURT

Arrests Made in Labor Riots Yesterday in Which Street Fights Were Common—One Man Dead and Police Officer and Italian Reported Dying

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Cleveland, O., May 2.—Two hundred prisoners, one of the largest crowds ever brought before the police court here, were arraigned this morning as a result of yesterday's May Day disorders. C. E. Ruthenberg, former candidate for mayor on the socialist ticket, was among those detained. The rioting precipitated by the socialist parade yesterday afternoon, resulting in the death of an unidentified man and injury to more than sixty others, two perhaps fatally, was followed by street fighting in many parts of the city last night. Included among the injured were sixteen policemen. Lieut. N. J. Meeker, whose skull was fractured in a night disturbance, and an Italian were said by hospital physicians to be dying. A socialist meeting hall was the scene of much disorder last night following the wrecking of socialist headquarters during the afternoon

TORONTO BAKERS TALKING STRIKE

BUT EMPLOYERS SEEM DISPOSED TO MEET DEMANDS FOR INCREASE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, May 2.—An addition to Toronto's industrial troubles is today threatened by the bakers of the city, who say they will strike Sunday night and make a breadless Monday if the employers do not agree to pay $28 for a 50-hour week. The Canada Bread Co., however, has already made a settlement, and it is expected that other firms will follow suit. The metal trade workers, of whom there are now 4,000 on strike, will have a conference with employers tomorrow, and it is thought that the employers will grant the shorter work day and discuss increases in pay.

WILL NOT SINK HUN WARSHIPS

THAT HAS FINALLY BEEN DECIDED BY THE PEACE DELEGATES

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 2.—The naval terms to be embodied in the peace treaty with Germany finally have been completed. They do not provide for the sinking of the larger German warships. The disposition of these vessels is left to be decided upon later by the Allied and Asociated Powerse.

CHARLES COOPER HANGED TODAY

NORTH BAY MAN KILLED AND ROBBED AN AGED RECRUIT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

North Bay, May 2.—Charles Cooper, aged 36, was hanged here this morning for the murder of Theodore Taylor, an aged recluse of Tomstown, who was found beaten to death on May 26 last. Two youths, Lyman Morrison and Joseph Fuller, are serving ten and fourteen years respectively at Kingston. These three robbed the man and inflicted injuries which caused his death.

RODE ON SIDEWALK

And Two Bicyclists Paid the Usual Penalty

Messrs Fred Scriber and Arthur Corbin appeared before the police magistrate this morning charged with riding a bicyble upon the sidewalks in Brownton.

They paid the usual fine of $2.00 and $3.10 costs apiece and were warned to keep off the sidewalks in future or they would be dealt with more severely.

Miss Pankhurst Remained in Jai.

ATTEMPTED TO FORCE WAY INTO BRITISH HOUSE OF COMMONS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, May 2.—Sylvia Pankhurst and Amelia Mahoney, who were arrested yesterday when they attempted to force an entrance into the House of Commons in the May Day demonstration, in police court today were ordered to give bonds for their good behavior. Neither would give the necessary bond and they remain under detention.

Every order secured under Canadian credits in Europe must be open to a bid from every Canadian manufcturer in the line who desires it. That is a fixed rule made by the Canadian Trade Commission.

MOLDERS OFFERED FAIR CONDITIONS

READY TO WORK UNDER PROTEST AND WAIVE RETROACTIVE CLAUSE

In connection with the labor dispute between the molders, laborers and employers of the city, the men state that they were ready to work under protest until such time as an agreement had been reached in regard to the new scale to be adopted, and were willing to waive the retroactive privilege should such be accorded them in the final decision. This meant that should they be granted a higher scale of wages they would be satisfied to have the change date from the time the decision was arrived at and not from May 1.

Their employers, according to the statement of the men, stated that unless they signed up again upon the same terms as those which were in effect last year they need not come back to work.

Upon asking if this statement meant a lockout, the employers stated that the men could consider it as indicative of a lockout or not, just as they chose. The men did not return to work next morning as they refused to renew last year's agreement, and accepted the intimation of their employerts that unless they did so ther was no use of them returning to the shops. When the laborers quit, the molders, enable to get on without them, were forced into idleness even if they had had no dispute with their employers.

Makes New Offer To School Board

A meeting of the building committee of the Board of Education will be held this evening to consider an offer of the Chamberlain estate to sell six acres of land to the Board upon which to erect a new school.

Six acres of ground composed the site upon which the King George School in Ashburnham was erected and there have been no complaints regarding a lack of space for playgrounds at that institution. Four acres are generally considered as all the ground that is absolutely necessary, and in offering six to the Board of Education the Chamberlain estate probaly feel that their proposition is very reasonable as far as area is concerned. Besides the law calls for a six-acre playground for twenty-room school.

Only bona fide Canadian firms will be permitted to compete on foreign orders obtained under Canadian credits. "Mushroom" firms have been ruled out by the Canadian Trade Commission.

DEADLY BOMBS NOT SENT CONFERENCE

CABLEGRAMS FROM AMERICA, HOWEVER, PUT PEACE DELEGATES ON GUARD

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, May 2.—Federal and police officials were expected to make a round up of "Reds" here today in connection with the investigation into the nation wide May Day conspiracy to kill prominent men with bombs addressed to them through the mails. Twenty-five of these machines are known to have been dispatched. It was reported here today that cablegrams had been sent to members of the peace delegation in Paris warning them against opening the packages. However, it was declared that nothing had been learned by the invesigators to indicate that any deadly contrivances had been sent abroad.

FIRE OUTSIDE CITY LIMITS

RESIDENCE OF E. BUOTT, NORTH MONAGHAN WAS BURNED TO GROUND

A house occupied by E. Buott, Landsdowne street, North Monaghan opposite St. Peter's cemetery, was completely destroyed by fire, which broke out this morning about ten o'clock.

The fire department were called and in spite of the building being outside of the city limits they quickly responded to the call, having received permission from city authorities to do so.

In spite of the efforts of the firemen to save the dwelling it was burnt to the ground. It was owned by Mrs. Bell and was valued at $1,500. The down stairs furniture was saved, but attempts to get the upstairs furnishings failed and they were all lost. They were valued at $150. Forty-five gallons of chemical were used on the building in the absence of a sufficient supply of water.

Women throughout the Dominion are endorsing the C. T. C.'s efforts to restore the balance of trade especially with the United States, by a voluntary undertaking to buy Canadian made goods wherever possible.

OUR ORIGINAL FIRSTS IN SAME CATEGORY AS "CONTEMPTIBLES"

Declares Col. Mills—Peterborough City Banquets and Entertains Veterans of World War —Patriotic Ladies Wait on Boys Who Fought For Them Overseas.

Some five hundred soldiers returned from overseas sat down in the Armouries last evening to a banquet given by Peterborough city in appreciation of the splendid manner in which these gallant members of Canada's citizen army have upheld the honor of Peterborough in the most stupendous war the world has ever seen.

The huge building was draped with flags, the white table cloths crossed with red bands of linen the waitresses' white caps were faced with miniature Union Jacks with which also the paper napkins were decorated, and the occasion as a whole becomingly reflected Canada's military spirit. One thing lacking, however, was the presence throughout the whole proceedings of the G.W.V.A. band, which left just as the banquet proper commenced. They had prepared a program for this event, on their own initiative. Ald. Turner says which they expected to render while eating was in progress and between the after-dinner speeches. On learning that this was not expected of them annoyance was expressed, and they left for Lakefield to play at the organization there of a G. W. V. A. local, not waiting to enjoy the good things prepared by Caterer Hooper. Ald. Turner says the idea was to treat the band's members as guests and not to expect them to entertain. They did play two or three pieces while the guests were assembling. The Conservatory orchestra rendered choice selections during the evening.

The tables were served by the ladies of Peterborough's Patriotic Societies with the same commendable efficiency as marked their fighting of the good fight at home in support of the boys engaged in a life and death struggle in the theatres of war abroad.

Ald. J. J. Turner chairman of the city's Reception Committee, had been delegated to prepare the banquet and its accessaries, and must be credited with having risen to the occasion in a very acceptable manner. Mrs. Jos. Mills was responsible for arranging the co-operation of the ladies, of whom there was quite a small army on hand, and who, as a final program number, gave the boys a dance in the band room.

Some of the veterans were in uniform and others in civies.

Representative Civilians.

Among the representative citizens present were Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie, M.P.P.; Mayor Duncan (who presided). Judge Huycke, Canon Davidson (late major-chaplain 93rd Battalion). Aldermen Phelan, Edgar, Garside Taylor, Morrison, Gainey, Hamilton, J. J. Turner, City Clerk Armstrong, Roland Denne (chairman Board of Education). Rev. J. A. Mackenzie, of Knox church.

Lieut.-Col. Mills was spokesman for the "original firsts," and Lieut.-Col. Johnston for the 93rd Battalion.

The Menus.

The menu consisted of roast beef, potatoes and salad, confections, ice cream, coffee and 2½ per cent. bottled ale. Cigars and cigarettes were also circulated.

Musical Numbers.

Mr. Douglas Carlisle gave two vocal numbers in splendid voice, the orchestra several excellent selections and "Rule Britannia" was sung by the whole company with an enthusiasm that made the rafters ring.

Letters of Regret.

Ald. J. J. Turner read letters of regret at inability to attend from General Williams, Bishop O'Brien, J. H. Burnham, M.P.

The King.

Mayor Duncan, in proposing the toast to the King, said: "We are gathered together at a period, the most momentous and critical in the history of this country. The Empire has passed through a most tragic period. We have taken part loyally in its tragedies and played an important part in its victories. The best manhood of our Dominion has been creating for Canada imperishable glory on the battlefields of Europe, and the dust and ashes of 60,000 of our sons will mingle for the centuries to come with all that is mortal of millions of other races and religious. through the part we decided to take in this struggle for the liberty of the world." His Worship then went on to say that he was sorry that it had been impossible for the city officials to meet all returning soldiers at the station, as with but one recent exception, they had returned two or three at a time and frequently unexpectedly. "Tonight, however, we members of the Council, as a body representing every man, woman and child in Peterborough, bid you welcome home again. I believe that less of this city's boys have returned home in a seriously crippled condition than in the case in many other municipalities, and for this we are grateful. We appreciate the trials and sufferings you boys have gone through, and in doing your heroic part in creating for Canada a glorious name in the world which will never be forgotten. And we thank you heartily for raising the standard of the nation to an elevation of which we may well be proud.

The Army and Navy.

Judge Huycke, in proposing this toast, found it beyond his power to express in words the full measure of credit due the army and navy of the Empire. "We see before us tonight,"

BLAME PARIS POLICE FOR ALL TROUBLES MAY DAY

Socialists Claim That Day Was Magnificent Demonstration of Power and Discipline of Labor—Soldiers not Offensive as Guardians

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 2.—Socialists and leaders of labor unions are extremely indignant over yesterday's incidents. The great labor federation has issued a protest, and a committee will meet tonight to consider what steps will be taken as a result of the disorders. The managing committee of the socialist party and the socialist group of the Chamber of Deputies will also meet. Deputy Marcel Cachin, writing in the Homanit, claims the day was a magnificent demonstration of the power and discipline of the laboring classes and was marred only by the brutality of the ferocious police. He emphasizes the fact that the soldiers used no violence and that there was no trouble where they were on duty. The responsibility for the disorders was entirely due to the provocation by the police, who were acting on orders from Premier Clemenceau.

A large trade on our Atlantic coast is stagnant, and 1,000 people are idle. There is a glut stock of $300,000 worth of sardines and canneries will not re-open until this is sold. The amount, the Canadian Trade Commission points out, is almost the exact value of imports of foreign sardines into Canada last year.

WHERE PATRONAGE REFORM FAILS.

THE OPERATION of the new civil service regulations, or the abolition of patronage, as it is otherwise called, is demonstrated in the case of the laborers on the Trent Canal, who for some reason which it is hard to divine were not at work yesterday.

The men themselves, most of whom are returned soldiers, hardly know where they are at. Before this spasm for reform seized the Union Government these men were appointed by local officials of the canal. Now the Minister of Railways and Canals has assumed the control of even this branch of the public service, and issues instructions from the departmental office. Who should know better what men are the most entitled to work on the canal, the men at Ottawa or the officials in Peterborough? The so-called abolition of patronage is nothing more nor less than a change of base, a shifting of the perquisites. What is really amounts to is a division of the plums between the two elements of the present government. No politician imagines for a moment that the alleged reform would live out the night once there was a reversion to the old straight party system.

The returned soldiers who have been serving the Government in a humble capacity on the canal may not understand their present status, but of one fact they are in no doubt. They have been working for 29 cents an hour, or 16 cents less than the outside laborers in the employ of private concerns. There may be honor in a Government job, however lowly, but this distinction cannot be exchanged for bread and meat. If the men are actually on strike, if they refuse to accept such terms, then they are certain to enlist the sympathy of the community.

ONE SOLUTION OF TARIFF PROBLEM.

TWICE THE BORDEN Government arranged for the formation of a Royal Tariff Commission, and twice a hostile Senate, acting under orders from the then leader of the Opposition, killed the bill. The Government now has a majority in the Upper Chamber, and it is possible that this solution of the tariff problem will yet be resorted to. It is the one possibility to reconcile the present wide differences over this issue. The proposed Tariff Commission would in this field possess practically the same powers as the Dominion Railway Board, which controls the transportation situation and which in some respects possesses greater authority than Parliament itself. The findings of the Board are final, no appeal being allowed, unless any decision handed down is at variance with an existing statute.

At present there is no recognized mediator between the dealer or the producer and the ultimate consumer, so far as tariff disputes may arise. The patrons of the Canadian railways have a champion of their interests in the Railway Board, which sets the freight and passenger rates on the different lines, and the system has proved entirely satisfactory. Suppose, for example, that a binder listed at $150 in Chicago was held at $200 by an implement dealer in Toronto, or that there was the same difference in the price of a binder made in Canada and the same class of implement of American manufacture. Such a case could be investigated by the proposed Tariff Commission, and if it was found that there was no justification for the spread between the two prices, the Canadian manufacturer or dealer could be brought to terms without expense to the purchaser. There is legal redress for almost every class of citizen with a grievance except for those who may suffer from such a case as that quoted. The Exchequer Court, the province of which is to deal with the tariff, is not available to the average consumer, the question of expense alone being sufficient to bar the way.

The tariff in its operations is of as much moment to the public as the question of transportation is, and it would now be dealt with on the same basis but for the obstruction placed in the way by a partisan senate. The avowed purpose of the British to grant the Dominions preferences in trade has gone a long way to straighten out the present tangle in Canada over the question of a fiscal policy by taking the wind completely out of the sails of the free trade agitators.

PARLIAMENT AND CLOSURE.

THE LIBERALS in Parliament fought the Railway Nationalization Bill from start to finish, until under the closure rule the fruitless debate came to an abrupt conclusion. Through it all they protested that they were not opposed to the principle of public ownership, but if they are not then they certainly took a novel method of giving expression to their allegiance. The record stands out to condemn them. The Grand Trunk Pacific and the Canadian Northern Railways were built under the Liberal regime practically at the public expense, which involved extravagant outlay. If the Liberals had been wedded to the state ownership faith they had an excellent opportunity in both these cases to prove their sincerity. The Transcontinental line was constructed entirely with public money, but not with the ultimate purpose of being operated by the State. The road was to be leased to a private company at a nominal rental, and it was only the enormous waste in the matter of construction that prevented the implementing of that agreement. Three times the Liberals had an opportunity to operate transportation lines, and three times they passed up their chances. In fighting public ownership as they did all through the recent debate they were at least consistent with their record.

To assert that debate was stifled on this subject by the application of closure is simply another Liberal catch-penny phrase. Without that rule the dreary exchange of words could have been prolonged indefinitely and the time of Parliament frittered away. The filibustering Liberals could have tied up the public business for weeks. As it was, twenty minutes was allowed every man who wished to speak on the subject. Even the average member of Parliament, if he has really anything to say, can say considerable in that space of time. Two hundred members, using twenty minutes each, would consume four thousand precious minutes, the equivalent of sixty-six hours, or over eight working days of eight hours each.

But the debate on the address was dragged along for weeks, and during that debate the railway problem of Canada was pretty thoroughly discussed. The discussion on the bill itself was simply flailing out old straw. There was nothing left for the country ~~but to~~ take over the bankrupt roads just as the man who holds a mortgage on private property has no alternative but foreclosure when there is a default in payment.

PRESIDENT WILSON EXPLAINS.

PRESIDENT WILSON has made a public statement in which he gives his reasons for opposing the claim of Italy to the possession of the city of Fiume. He says that he could not consistently violate or surrender any of the fourteen points in his proposition for peace, and that he would have done so if he had supported the position of Italy.

Mr. Wilson has evidently abandoned the second of his articles, the one setting forth his academic theory with regard to the freedom of the seas, for it is safe to assume that the other powers would not consent to anything of the kind.

Self-determination as the right of every nation is another favorite principle of the American President. He insisted from the beginning that there should be no government without the consent of the governed, and that the people of any conquered territory should be allowed the right to select their own sovereignty.

Why is not Mr. Wilson willing to concede as much in the case of Fiume? That city was conquered by the Italians in fair combat with the Austrians, and its fall marked an epoch in the progress toward final Allied victory. The majority of the population of Fiume is made up of Italians. It is not hard to forecast the result of an appeal to the people as to their choice of alliance.

If Fiume was not specifically mentioned in the Treaty of London, it was at least acquired in warfare conducted according to the international code. Japan drove the Germans out of what was once Chinese territory, and now Japan claims the right of the victor to the spoils of war. At the present it looks as if the Japanese demand is to be granted. The cases of Kiao-Chau and Fiume are parallel. If Japan is to be favored in this matter, Italy is justified in persevering in her present purpose. There should be no discrimination among the Allied Powers.

It is proposed, by Mr. Wilson originally, we believe, to make Fiume a free port, a city without a national allegiance, its affairs to be managed by the newly constituted authority of the League of Nations. The covenant of the League provides that its council or executive shall not interfer in purely domestic matters. How is this provision to be preserved in its integrity if Fiume is to be governed by the League? And here again Mr. Wilson's contention for the right of self-determination, for government by consent of the governed, is fairly challenged.

TAKE FRANCHISE FROM DEFAULTERS

THIS POLICY HAS BEEN DECIDED UPON BY THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

Ottawa, May 2.—Whatever happens to the Franchise Act is seems certain that defaulters will be deprived of their right to exercise the suffrage. Hon. Arthur Meighen made this plain when he said. "In answer in a question" he matter of the introduction of a bill for the disfranchisement of defaulters is under immediate consideration and a definite statement will be made to the house either on Monday or Friday.

As most of the Government members have already expressed themselves in favor of such action this proposal will meet with almost unanimous support from the right of the Speaker.

There is much speculation as to the new Franchise Act and there have been rumors of a certain amount of Cabinet disagreement. There have even been stories afloat that Hon. Frank B. Cavell was threatening to resign because of the drastic nature of the bill.

Await Sir Robert.

Such stories are officially denied. There is no possibility of the act coming before the House until after the budget and it is understood that it will be left over until after the return of Sir Robert Borden.

There is little likelihood of an immediate election and the act might even go over until next session. In the meantime the bill has never been before th Cabinet or the subcommittee appointed to discuss the subject.

There is a strong feeling among Unionist members that alien enemies should be disfranchised for a period of years. The Opposition without doubt proposes to put up a vigorous fight for suffrage for all who were disfranchised last election.

Delicate Problem.

Whether the new law would go as far as the War Times Election Act remains to be seen. If it did there would be some Liberal Unionists who might break with the Government. Mr. Carvell is a member of the old Laurier Opposition opposed to the War Times Election Act, so that it is a good guess he might retire fro mthe Government as such an issue. There is no doubt that it is a delicate problem for the Government, and is more likely to disrupt union than the budget. However, it is all guess work as to the future, and one guess is as good as another. The whole question is still in the melting pot.

NEW SERVICE TO NEW YORK.

Visitors to New York City will be glad to know that the Grand Trunk Railway are inaugurating on May 4th, 1919, a through Sleeping Car Service from Toronto to New York, leaving Toronto 5.45 p.m. daily, and arriving in Gotham at the Pennsylvania Terminal. This will be a great convenience to visitors to New York as the Pennsylvania Station is centrally situated and is in easy reach of the latest hotels and the shopping and theatre districts. Ask Grand Trunk Agents for further particulars.

Appliances in Use

Waterworks, owned by the city. Source of supply, the Otonabee River System, direct pressure. Water power with steam auxiliary; five pumps; total capacity 16,500,000 Imperial gallons per minute. Fire engine water 278 hydrants owned by the city, and about 30 others privately owned. Steam fire engine of 833 Imperial gallons per minte. Fire engine water supply from hydrants, river and creek. First class hose, 6,500. 12 play pipes. Three hose waggons, two carrying 1,500 feet, and one 500 feet of hose. Motor combination chemical and hose wagon, carrying 45 gallon chemical tank and 1700 feet of 2½ inch hose, operated by 105 h.p. gasoline engine. Ladder truck, longest ladder carried 54 feet. Ten chemical fire extinguishers (2 of 5 gallons, 4 of 4 gallons, and 4 of 3 gallons each. 6 salvage covers. Winter sleighs for hose and ladder truck and runners for all horse appliances. Two seater motor car for chief. Brick fire station with Standard hose drying tower. Brigade of 17 fully paid men. A man, who does not sleep in the fire hall, goes there immediately following every alarm and remains there till the return of the men and appliances. Six horses owned by the city, for fire purposes only. Fire alarm telegraph system, having 67 non-interfering street boxes, 5 of which are successive, all operating gongs in fire hall, pump house, in the dwelling of 2 firemen, and the general alarm bell. General telephone service, two systems, Bell and Canadian Machine Telephone Co., 2,763 subscribers on former and 300 on latter. Police force of thirteen men, eight of whom are on night patrol but without any system of check. A night watchman, paid by the merchants also patrols the business section.

Remarks on Improvements

Considerable improvement has been made in the additions to the large sized mains for distributing the water to the various parts of the city especially in extending an 8 inch from the Auburn Mills dam east to the Douro road and along the Douro road to the corner of Dufferin street connecting with the general distribution system in the Ashburnham district. This gives a second adequate supply for that district, in addition to which it forms the second crossing over the river. A 10 inch main has also been laid in continuation to the 18 inch on Smith, Donegal and McDonnel streets, to connect with the 14 inch at the corner of McDonnel and Park Streets. The effect of these extensions has been to materially increase the pressures and the volume obtainable in the heart of the city and also in Ashburnham.

Running Pressures

As will be seen by a preceding paragraph the approximate discharge obtained from the 12 streams shows a very marked improvement over that obtained at the previous inspection, the amonut discharged being at the rate of 3,038,400 gallons per 24 hours, or 16 per cent short of the amount required for 12 standard streams, as against 2,374,560 gallons or 31 per cent short of the amount required for 12 standard streams at the previous inspection. It should be noted that several of the nozzles been used the approximate and I have no doubt that had larger nozzles been used the approximate discharge would have been quite equal to the amount required.

Motor combination chemical and hose wagon—One of these, made by the American La France Fire Engine Co., has been added to the equipment.

First class hose—The amount in service has been increased by 1,100 feet.

Remark on deficiencies

Bylaw—Allows roofs of shingles in mortar. Shingles, however laid, are not permitted by the standard.

Storage of oils, etc., is not regulated by by-law. The Standard limits are 5 barrels of coal oil, etc., and 5 gallons of crude oil, benzine, gasoline, etc., and a by-law should be adopted. This deficiency has been pointed out in several previous reports, but no action has been taken so far by the city.

Storage of powder—Is limited to 28 lbs., instead of 25 lbs., as required by the standard.

Automatic water pressure recording gauge—One should be placed in the pumphouse.

Relief valves on pumps said to be set at 130 lbs. but not definitely known. They should be properly tested and set.

Suction pipes—The second suction pipe, to the tail race is not fitted with a foot valve. One should be installed without delay.

Hydrants—On George street, in the business section, the hydrants are placed in accordance with the standard regulations, but on Brock, Hunter, Simcoe and Charlotte streets the spacing is very wide, as it is also in a number of places immediately surronding the business section. Additional hydrants should be placed on each of the above streets, about 250 feet on either side of George street one should be placed at the northeast corner of George and King streets, and one at the northwest corner of Water and Charlotte streets for the protection of the Empress Hotel and other valuable property in that district.

Playpipes—The number in service has been reduced to 12. There should be at least 18.

Fire Hall—There is at present only 1 slide pole which is not enough.—2 others should be provided.

Salvage equipment—For a city of this size there should be a fully equipped salvage wagon, with a suf-

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Take a glass of Salts if your Back Hurts or Bladder Troubles you

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well known authority. Meat forms a uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become over-worked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in the urine, so it no longer causes irritation thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia, water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

HOW A YOUNG GIRL SUFFERED

And Was Restored to Health By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Told By Her Mother.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough for what it has done for my daughter. She was 15 years of age, very sickly and pale and she had to stay home from school most of the time. She suffered agonies from backache and dizziness and was without appetite. For three months she was under the doctor's care and got no better, always complaining about her back and side aching so I didn't know what to do. I read in the papers about your wonderful medicine so I made up my mind to try it. She has taken five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and doesn't complain any more with her back and side aching. She has gained in weight and feels much better. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all mothers and daughters."—Mrs. M. FINORE, 516 Marcy Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

NEARLY MILLION ILLITERATES IN THE FIRST AMERICAN ARMY

We think we are an educated nation. We are wont to boast of our superior school system. Just ponder these statements made by Rheta Childe Dorr in the current (May) issue of the Pictorial Review says J. V. A. Weaver in the Chicago News.

In the first draft of our national army there were 700,000 illiterates. Of these, approximately 175,000 were native born whites.

There are 3,762,003 native born persons in the country who can neither read nor write.

In addition to these native born illiterates there are approximately 11,300,000 foreign born.

This is a shame and a disgrace. Every state has its share of these forlorn creatures. Of course the south has the largest proportion — in Georgia, alone there are 388,842 of native born. These southern figures must be considered in the light of the fact that the negro population is very large.

It is not fair to blame the south too much. The south is just beginning to get on her feet financially. It takes more than fifty years for a nation to recover from devastation such as the civil war brought. North Carolina, for example, has a per capita wealth of only $726.35, as compared with Nevada with $4,135.35 per capita. The southern states simply haven't the money for more education.

And so it is a job for the federal government. Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia provides for the appropriation of $100,000,000 annually to be matched by the several states, dollar for dollar, for the stamping out of illiteracy and alienism — in short to federalize education.

This bill apparently has not as yet been passed. But it, or something like it, must be put over. Federalization of education must come, and come now, during our reconstruction. Every thinking man and woman ought to get after this problem and get after it hard.

I would like to say a few words which this illiteracy question brings to my mind. There has been a great deal of fatuous discussion of Joseph Conrad's mistreatment of the language, especially as indicated in "The Arrow of Gold."

One pedantic booby wrote to the esteemed "Little o' Type," quoting one of Conrad's sentences, where the tenses (to be sure) were very much hashed. B. L. T. very properly remarked that a mere question of grammatical obliquity could not interfere with his enjoyment of the works of a writer who sasylw hmnbIHMHMH a writer who always wrote corking yarns (or words to that effect.) Good for Mr. Taylor!

But that is not, after all, the point. The point is that Conrad in a "first note," pretends that the ensuing story is a narrative extracted by him from several piles of manuscript written by the man who is the main character of "The Arrow of Gold." He, therefore, makes the telling of the story itself, in the language of "Monsieur George" himself, one of the methods of characterizing that gentleman. For that reason every error in the body of the story is a characteristic and characterizing error of Monsieur George's. I suppose that if one of these fault finders were to write a novel prefaced by the statement, "This is the life story of a street car conductor, written by the conductor himself," he would make his bell yanker express himself in purest English undefiled. Or perhaps our critic would charge upon one of Lardner's sketches armed with a "Wooley's Handbook of Composition."

I have no patience with these punctillous ignoramuses. Any one who understands what he reads knows that Conrad uses a conversational style most of the time. He often sacrifices grammar to "punch"—but you will find these errors to be deliberate, and not careless, and always quotations of the words of others.

Apparently there are degrees and degrees of illiteracy.

MAY DAY STRIKE ON TRENT CANAL

RETURNED SOLDIERS HAVE BEEN PAID 29 CENTS AN HOUR.

There are labor troubles today with the laborers engaged upon the Trent Canal. The men are not working and complain that up to the present they have been receiving what they describe as the munificient wage of $2.60 for a nine-hour day, which means that they are receiving about 29 cents an hour while the laborers employed by the city and contractors have been getting forty cents an hour and the new scale, which goes into effect today, allows the mforty-five cents an hour.

A statement of the complaints of the men engaged upon the canal most of whom are returned soldiers, was wired to the Government last night by an official of one of the interested organizations in the city upon request to the minister.

It has been alleged by the men that they are employed under the supervision of the Civil Service Commission as temporary helpers, many being engaged in connection with concrete work. In order to keep them from becoming permanent civil servants they have been laid off for one day in the month. This is the claim that is advanced by some of the men but it lacks official sanction.

LITTLE DANGER OF UNION SPLIT

WESTERN FREE TRADES ARE LIKELY TO STICK TO THE GOVERNMENT.

Otawa, May 2—The attitude of the Opposition since the Easter recess towards the Government's policies on the railway and immigration problems has greatly diminished the possibility of an early reconstruction of Liberals. The antagonism of the Opposition leaders to public ownership was very evident, while on the immigration bill the only speaker from the left was S. W. Jacobs, Jacques Cartier, who opposed the Government's measure as unnecessary and urged that alien enemies should not be debarred.

Western Liberals are frank in admitting that they have been given fresh evidence of the gulf that separates them from the present Opposition leaders, and say that under its existing auspices and control Liberalism in Parliament cannot expect to recruit real radicals to its ranks.

Throw Lot With Government.

It is pointed out in this connection that the platform of the Western Council of Agriculture contained a Government ownership of railways plank, and it is asked how the western farmers, favoring State ownership, can ally themselves with a party apparently overwhelmingly for private enterprise and in addition, semmingly antagonistic to the scheme designed to give the west more railways.

The opinion is now pretty general that chances of a unionist cleavage over the budget are extremely remote. While it is taken for granted that the tariff proposals to be submitted may not go as far as some of the free trade wings of the party desire, it is believed that it will nevertheless adopt the position that a half a loaf is better than no bread, and take its chances with the Government rather than with the Opposition for future concessions.

BIG DISPLAY IN Simcoe Street WINDOW | Cabinets Demonstrated and on Sale on the Top Floor

Turnbull's Kitchen Cabinet Club

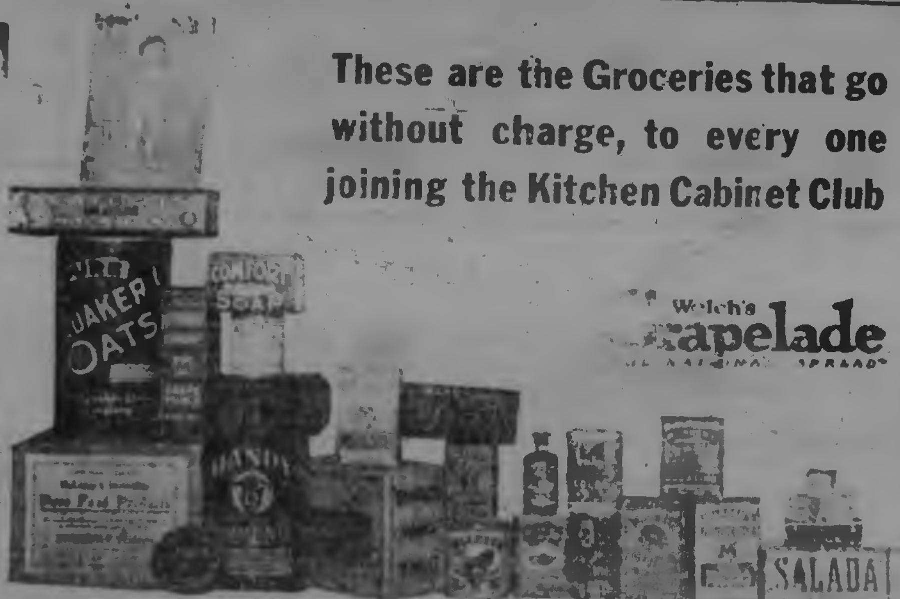
Starts To-morrow, Saturday

The Membership is Limited To 50 | It closes as soon as Cabinets are sold

Can 50 Kitchen Cabinets be Sold in Peterboro in Ten Days? Experts think they can, and that Turnbull's is the Store to sell them

We are glad to be able to announce the inauguration of a KITCHEN CABINET CLUB in Peterborough, and consider ourselves fortunate that we have been placed in a position to offer the public what is to-day a household necessity, on the same plan and under the same conditions that have been most successful in the large cities, and heretofre have only been available there.

The Kitchen Cabinet needs no introduction at our hands. It is a modern innovation, and an up-to-date labor-saving device in the home, that is rapidly becoming a necessity in every well-ordered household.



These are the Groceries that go without charge, to every one joining the Kitchen Cabinet Club

The Cabinets that will be offered during this Special Club Campaign are the last word in Kitchen Cabinet construction, and are complete right down to the last detail with every known and tried-out labor-saving device. If you do not own one of these Cabinets if you do not know a home where one is installed you cannot realize just how convenient they are — just how many steps they will save the busy housewife in a day's work.

These Cabinets are masterpieces, and for the Club Campaign we have six distinct and separate styles for members of the club to pick and choose from.

OPENS ON SATURDAY, MAY 3RD.

$2.00 Will Make You A Member of the Kitchen Cabinet Club

After you receive your Cabinet, pay weekly to the Secretary of the Club the amount which you agree on when you select your Cabinet, until the payments amount to the purchase price of the Cabinet. There are no Extras to pay.

These regular payments made to suit your convenience will soon give you the ownership of the KITCHEN CABINET.

You'll never miss the money, and a better investment made for the promotion of good housekeeping, comfort and convenience, you cannot make—A LONGER way the dollars CANNOT go.

The Groceries are supplied absolutely free with every Kitchen Cabinet sold during this special effort, to sell 50 CABINETS in 10 days.

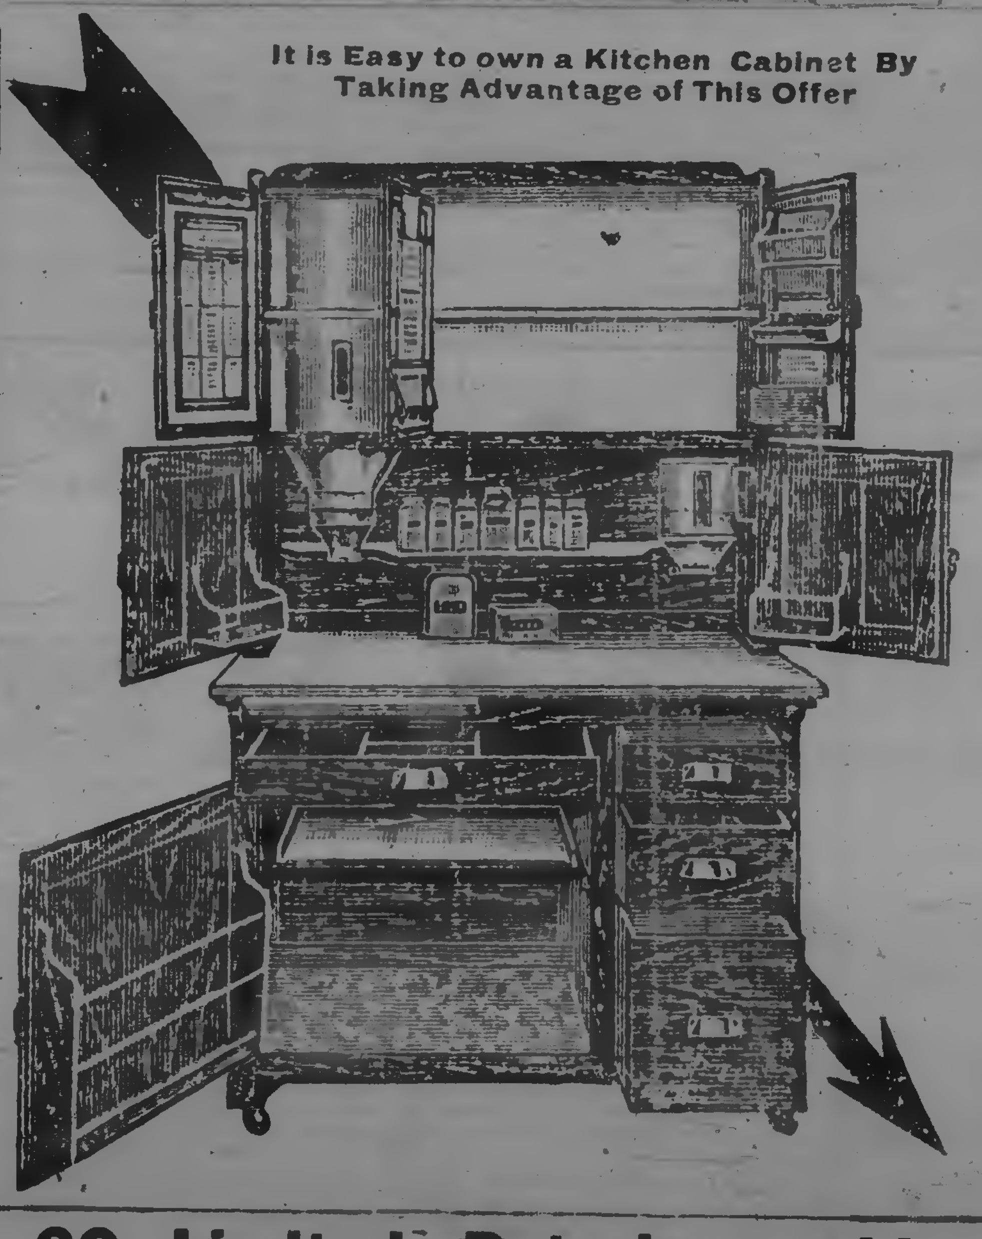
A Kitchen Cabinet Saves its Cost in work and worry

Turnbull's Kitchen Cabinet is an automatic servant, enables you to save half the steps you ordinarily takes, keeps everything orderly and your kitchen tidy. You can actually sit down and do your baking and have evrything right at arm's reach. You can spend more time from the hot kitchen this summer with a Turnbull Kitchen Cabinet in it.

YOU WILL SURELY WANT A KITCHEN CABINET SOME DAY. Why not take advantage of this Special Club Offer Now?

You are wasting time, energy and money in wasted food supplies until you get one. Think of how little it costs each week for a few short weeks to have this cabinet, and remember, it will go on saving and saving in all the years that follow.

Experience has shown that there are always more wanting to join The Kitchen Cabinet Club than there are memberships available. That is than there are Cabinets to supply. Peterborough should not be different from the larger cities in this respect. More will want to join the club. Only 50 can. Will you be one? Join the Club early and be one of the fortunate 50.



It is Easy to own a Kitchen Cabinet By Taking Advantage of This Offer

For the Promotion of thrift and good House-keeping—

FOR THE GOOD of careful arrangement, prudent management and thoughtful administration

FOR THE PROMOTION of system, plan and established order—

FOR THE BENEFIT of woman's comfort in general, and the housewife's health in particular, by saving her hours of work and miles of steps by doing away for good and forever with kitchen drudgery and unnecessary effort—GET A

TURNBULL KITCHEN CABINET

Pay your $2.00 in cash and enroll your name with the Secretary of the Club. Select the Cabinet you desire from the six separate and distinct styles you will be shown. The Cabinet will then be taken to your home any time you desire, along with all the free groceries.

All these Groceries and household necessities will be sent free with every Cabinet sold while the Kitchen Cabinet Campaign is on.

ficient number of men attached thereto, carrying not less than 50 waterproof sheets, not exceeding 12 x 9 feet with all other usual tools and a light extension ladder for indoor use. The present sheets which are in service (20 x 20 feet) are too cumbersome and should be cut down to half the size.

Fire stations—In view of the great increase that is taking place in the city, especially with regard to the erection of a number of factories in the southern end, I would again urge the necessity for the placing in commission of three additional auxiliary fire halls—one at the northern end of the city, one at the south end and one for Ashburnham. These have been recommended on several occasions but so far nothing has been done with regard to them. The necessity was fully demonstrated at the time that I made the test, when after the alarm was sent in from the box near the De Laval Co.'s facory, the motor appartus responded, getting there in 3 minutes and the ladder truck in 6 minutes. Had there been a serious fire in that district the whole force of the brigade and apparatus in commission would have been employed, leaving the whole of the rest of the city, including the business section, absolutely unprotected. The situation is so serious that I trust the Council will take the matter very seriously into their consideration, with a view to establishing additional fire halls, each with its full equipment, at the earliest possible date.

Fire engine—When tested this engine broke down entirely due to leaky boiler tubes. I understand that the tubes are old ones, and the joints have been frequently repaired. A new set of tubes should be procured and put in properly if the engine is to be taken as part of the fire fighting equipment.

Brigade—Consists of 17 fully paid men. For a city of this size it should be considerably increased. The Standard requirements are: one fully paid man per 1,000 of population, which, for this city, would mean 22

LABOR CONDITIONS AS THEY APPEAR IN GREAT BRITAIN

Commission of Employers in United States, Who Went Overseas to Investigate Industrial Situation, Make Report

Washington, D. C., May 2.—The de-commission, which went to Europe for partment of labor has made public the the purpose of investigating labor con- report of the [illegible] ditions E. T. Gundlach of Chicago was chairman and Dorr E. Felt, also of Chicago, president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, was a member of the commission. Other members of the commission were employers of labor. Great Britain was chosen as the chief field of study because of the belief that British industrial experience is along the same paths as America has encountered or will encounter.

Mr. Felt is to submit a supplementary report on labor conditions in France.

For Collective Bargaining.

Findings of the commission follow:

"1. Employers in Great Britain generally recognize the desirability of bargaining collectively with labor.

"2. Employers nearly all agree that collective bargaining should always be undertaken between associations of employers and the regularly established well organized trade unions.

"While many manufacturers welcome organizations of workmen in their factories (shop or works committees), they want to limit the activities of such bodies to purely local grievances, and decidedly desire that the committee members come under the discipline of their unions.

"3. Most employers freely recognize the right of labor to organize; they regard organization as greatly contributing to the stability of industry. Some large manufacturers declare that they wish to see every workman within the unions, so that they must all come under organization control. Others feel that 100 per cent. organizations might lead to dangerous types of universal strikes and lockouts. The more conservative employers appear to make no effort to help along organizations of labor, merely dealing with such organizations when they appear on the scene.

"4. Employes in Great Britain are divided in sentiment shading from those who want to maintain the trade unions along the regularly established so-called 'constitutional' lines of ultraradical socialists.

Russian Methods Opposed.

"5. Employes are nearly a unit, however, in expressing opposition to the use of force. The most radical who desire 'now' a complete overturning of the present social structure, usually admit on close questioning that 'now' may mean many years. They want the 'start' now. Practically none appears to approve of a sudden change as in Russia.

"6. Employes of the ultraradical type look askance at collective bargaining and organizations of labor and capital. They freely express the view that they do not wish harmony between employes and employers, since harmony would help to continue the present system of society.

"7. Employes of the more conservative type (and to your commissioners they appear to represent the vast majority of British workmen) are largely in accord with employers in the desire (1) to head off labor unrest of this period; (2) to strengthen the unions by holding members under control; (3) to increase production for the sake of the nation, workmen included—with no restriction on output except as it affects the health of the worker; (4) to leave control of business policies in the hands of those managing the business.

"8. Government officials appear to be uniformly of the opinion that the government should function in labor unrest only as an absolutely last unavoidable resort. On the other hand they maintain the right of the government to step in when necessary in order to protect public interests against minorities which try to force their terms upon the people.

No Return to Prewar Era.

"9. In general the government, and most employers and conservative employes appear to be agreed:

"That the spirit of co-operation between labor and capital is highly desirable.

"That the spirit of conciliation is important for the benefit of the employer in stabilising his business and for the benefit of the employe in preserving his regularly organized unions.

"That in collective bargaining the right minded employer will not attempt to return to the prewar industrial era, and that the right minded employe will not attempt to crowd his demands to the point at which the stimulus for private business enterprise would disappear.

"The spirit of a genuinely better, new (and not novel) era is thus being fostered by widely varied elements of Great Britain's industrial system."

OUR ORIGINAL

he said, "the faces of brave and noble men representing the best blood in Peterborough. We are proud of how gallantly you men responded to the Empire's call to arms, but feel humiliated at the though of how many refused to follow your example. At the call to war the army was naturally represented by the militia which, however, I regret to say, did not respond as readily as did those outside its service, including even boys in schools, and colleges." Characterizing the army of Canada today as representing the spirit of the nation his honor said, "We mourn for the sick and wounded, and those who have died, but our hearts overflow with joy at seeing you men coming back. Peterborough boys have brought glory to Peterborough, and it remains for us to endeavor to be worthy of you, who did your noble part, with the Canadian and British armies in holding back an enemy who had prepared 45 years for war" But, asserted the speaker, had it not been for the British navy our army could neither have been sent to war nor brought home again, and we should be proud of that navy's accomplishments on the high seas. Join me in this toast to the army and navy and let us hope that Britain may remain mistress of the seas as long as time shall last. Also let us think of the living army of the dead, and do all that we can to alleviate the distress of those bereaved by their sacrifice.

Proud of the Army.

Canon Davidson, in his response, said he was proud to belong to the army, and did not know where there s such another organization unless it be the church of God. It is unique in its comradeship, and wonderful in its deeds. The speaker considered the effectiveness of Canada's army was only rendered possible by its magnificent backing at the home base, Every Canadian unit was the envy of the British Tommy in its loyal support from home in the shape of comforts delicacies and money. Canon Davidson here was warm in his praise of the nursing sisters, who had accomplished great service for the men and raised Canada in the eyes of the world. In conclusion, he declared that men and boys who have given such heroic service in the war as those before him may be relied on to conduct themselves equally as worthily in times of peace.

The "Original Firsts."

In proposing this toast, Ald. J. J. Turner thought he was right in referring to the 1st, 2nd and 3rd battalions which went overseas and, in unity with other units, formed the first Canadian army as the "original firsts." But when we think of the "original firsts", our minds turn naturally also to Col. Clegg, Major Bennett, Col Mills and Lieut. Ackerman, gallant officers in that unit, two of whom have made the supreme sacrifice. The speaker here paid tribute to the 57th regiment, the men of which never surmised that they would be called upon to smell the smoke of battle, and yet many of them went overseas to take part in the world war. His thoughts also turned to those who lie buried in the battle fields of Flanders and Northern France. It is difficult to single out any particular one for valor, but some day the history of Peterborough's part in the war will be written, and therin one will find men with whom one has associated in the workshop labelled as heroes in the great struggle. The speaker here eulogised the women who stayed at home and who [illegible] their loved ones to do their duty for which the Empire called them. And they and we carried on here just as energetically as you men over there; and in our general rejoicing it would be too bad if we overlooked what the women hav done. "I ask you to drink to the best of the bunch, the cream of the crowd, that inspiring battle force—the 'original firsts'"

Second to None.

Lieut.-Col. Mills, in responding to the toast, said the Hon Mr Lemieux of Quebec, said the militia made it so much easier to recruit in his province, and he (the speaker) declared that the militia made it possible to raise that "original first" division to relieve the worn-out British troops. The "original firsts" he said stand in the same category to Canada as the old British contemptibles to Britain. Outside the Guards of the Imperial army, there was not a finer body of men in the British army than our firsts. Peterborough has the honor of having had one company in the 2nd battalion, commanded by Col. Clegg and Major Bennett; also Lieut. Ackerman and Battalion Sergt. Nicholls. Peterborough maintained in the largest number of men in any unit of that battalion. Turning to the navy, Col. Mills referred in glowing terms to its safe conduct across the seas for Canada's army—no man lost any sleep for fear of German submarines or German warships.

The 93rd Batt'n

Geo. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., in proposing the toast, characterized the 93rd as Peterborough's own battalion in which all are so proud. "Many of us, he said "who perforce of circumstances could not go to the front helped to recruit that unit, and took pride in seeing it leave for overseas as one of the finest bodies of fighting men which Canada sent across the water to play their part in the world's greatest drama. The different units into which the members of Peterborough's own unit of battalion strength were drafted nobly measured up to Canada's old originals, the 1st, 2nd and 3rd battalions. I want you men to feel that we are behind you now that you have returned to civilian life, and will never turn our back on those who, incapacitated from re-engaging in their old occupations have a right to look to us for aid and assistance.

A Popular Toast

Col. Johnston on rising to respond was greeted with prolonged and enthusiastic cheers. He felt it an honor to respond to a toast of interest to every individual in the City and County of Peterborough, the territory from which the 93rd was made up. From the day recruiting for this unit started until the hour it marched from the Armoury in full battalion strength, the 93rd had the support of every man, woman and child in the city and country; and as a result I may truthfully refer to it as one of the best units that went overseas. In eulogizing this citizen battalion's military adaptability, the colonel emphasized the fact that out of 60 men who tried their examinations for non-commissioned officer, 57 passed. Then the fighting spirit of the men was gloriously exemplified in commissoned officers, and non-coms reverting rather than missing the chance to fight the enemy in France and Flanders. This, he said, showed the metal of Peterborough volunteers, and he was glad to say many won back in the trenches those stripes they had lost in England. Two non-coms also won their commissioners.

Typical of All

"Capt. Widdifield," Col Johnston concluded, "is preparing a history of the 93rd battalion, which will show the metal they were and are composed of, and those characteristics presented are typical of the men in general who went from Peterboro. Wherever they fought they reflected glory on themselves, on Canada, the Empire and and their homes. He advised the veterans to get together, stay together and then Peterborough will have a unit of original first, no matter in what battalion they served, of which we may well feel proud.

The Ladies

In proposing this toast Rev. J. A. Mackensie characterized woman as one of the great blessings of today. He had unifed many in marriage but never having embarked himself on the sea of matrimony, perhaps his knowledge of women was somewhat less than many here tonight, But this

NOT A PARTICLE OF DANDRUFF OR A FALLING HAIR

SAVE YOUR HAIR! DOUBLE ITS BEAUTY IN JUST A FEW MOMENTS.

"DANDERINE" MAKES YOUR HAIR THICK, GLOSSY, WAVY AND BEAUTIFUL.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair, and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow, long, strong and beautiful.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter for a few cents and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.

Peterboro, May 2nd, 1919.

TO THE PUBLIC:—

A cordial invitation is extended to the citizens of Peterboro and the surrounding district to make a visit of inspection to our Newly altered and enlarged store, which is now ready and re-stocked with large shipments of new furniture which have lately arrived and are arriving daily.

Our greatly increased floor space and much better facilities for exhibiting our high-grade furniture make it a pleasure both to visit our store and to show our goods. This invitation is intended to make everybody feel free to come in, whether intending to buy or not. There will be no pressing of visitors to purchase, but any who wish to secure something nice from our stock will be given the article or articles at special re-opening prices, and a still further accommodation of easy terms of payment, if such is desired. We hope that many who have not got acquainted with our store as well as old friends, will avail themselves of this special invitation to see our new greatly improved interior, even if only to look around.

THE GODS OF MARS

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

"It has been even more difficult than we had expected," said Kantos Kan. "The fact that we were compelled to maintain utter secrecy has handicapped us terribly. Zat Arras' spies are everywhere. Yet, to the best of my knowledge, no word of our real plans has reached the villain's ear.

"Tonight there lies about the great docks at Hastor a fleet of a thousand of the mightiest battleships that ever sailed above Barsoom and each equipped to navigate the air to Omean and the waters of Omean itself. Upon each battleship there are five ten-man cruisers and ten five-man scouts and a hundred one-man scouts. In all 116,000 craft fitted with both air and water propellers.

"At Thark lie the transports for the green warriors of Tars Tarkas, 900 large troopships, and with them their convoys. Seven days ago all was in readiness, but we waited in the hope that by so doing the rescue of Dejah Thoris might be attempted at a time when the Black Pirates could be taken at a disadvantage."

"How is it, Tars Tarkas," I asked, "that the men of Thark take not the accustomed action against one who returns from the bosom of Iss?"

"They sent a council of fifty chieftains to talk with me here," replied the Thark. "We are a just people and when I had told them the entire story they were as one man in agreeing that their action toward me should be guided by the action of Helium toward John Carter.

"In the meantime at their request I was to resume my throne as jeddak of Thark that I might negotiate with neighboring hordes for warriors to compose the land forces of the expedition. I have done that which I agreed.

"Two hundred and fifty thousand fighting men gathered from the ice cap at the north to the ice cap at the south and, representing a thousand different communities from a hundred wild and warlike hordes, fill the great city of Thark tonight. They are ready to sail for the land of the Black Pirates when I give the word and fight there until I bid them stop.

"All they ask is the loot they take and transportation to their own territories when the fighting and the looting are over. I am done."

"And thou, Hor Vastus," I asked "what has been thy success?"

"A million veteran fighting men from Helium's thin waterways man the battleships, the transports and the convoys," he replied. "Each is sworn to loyalty and secrecy, nor were enough recruited from a single district to cause suspicion."

"Good!" I cried. "Each has done his duty, and now, Kantos Kan, may we not repair at once to Hastor and get under way before tomorrow's sun?"

"We should lose no time, prince," replied Kantos Kan. "Already the people of Hastor are questioning the purpose of so great a fleet fully manned with fighting men. I wonder much that word of it has not before reached Zat Arras. A cruiser awaits above at your own dock. Let us leave at"—

A fusillade of shots from the palace gardens just without cut short his further words.

Together we rushed to the balcony in time to see a dozen members of my palace guard disappear in the shadows of some distant shrubbery as in pursuit of one who fled. Directly beneath us upon the scarlet sward a handful of guardsmen were stooping above a still and prostrate form.

While we watched they lifted the figure in their arms and at my command bore it to the audience chamber where we had been in council. When they stretched the body at our feet we saw that it was that of a red man in the prime of life. His metal was plain, such as common soldiers wear or those who have a motive to conceal their identity.

"Another of Zat Arras' spies," said Hor Vastus.

"So it would seem," I replied, and then to the guard, "You may remove the body."

"Wait!" said Xodar. "If you will, prince, ask that a cloth and a little thoat oil be brought."

I nodded to one of the soldiers, who left the chamber, returning presently with the things that Xodar had requested. The black knelt beside the body and, dipping a corner of the cloth in the thoat oil, rubbed for a moment on the dead face before him.

Then he turned to me with a smile, pointing to his work. I looked and saw that where Xodar had applied the thoat oil the face was white—as white as mine—and then Xodar seized the black hair of the corpse and with a sudden wrench tore it all away, revealing a hairless pate beneath.

Guardsmen and nobles pressed close about the silent witness upon the marble floor. Many were the exclamations of astonishment and questioning wonder as Xodar's acts confirmed the suspicion which he had held all the time.

"A thern!" whispered Tars Tarkas.

"Worse than that, I fear," replied Xodar. "But let us see."

With that he drew his dagger and cut open a locked pouch which had dangled from the thern's harness, and from it he brought forth a circlet of gold set with a large gem. It was the mate to that which I had taken from Sator Throg.

"He was a holy thern," said Xodar. "Fortunate, indeed, it is for us that he did not escape."

The officer of the guard entered the chamber at this juncture.

"My prince," he said, "I have to report that this fellow's companion escaped us. I think that it was with the connivance of one or more of the men at the gate. I have ordered them all under arrest."

Xodar handed him the thoat oil and cloth.

"With this you may discover the spy among you," he said.

I at once ordered a secret search within the city, for every Martian noble maintains a secret service of his own.

A half hour later the officer of the guard came to the chamber again to report. This time it was to confirm our worst fears—half the guards at the gate that night had been therns disguised as red men.

"Come!" I cried. "We must lose no time. On to Hastor at once! Should the therns attempt to check us at the southern verge of the ice cap it may result in the wrecking of all our plans and the total destruction of the expe-

AT THE GRAND

Lind, the much-vaunted female impersonator, opened yesterday at the Grand and his act was something which is not seen in the smaller cities often. As an exponent of feminine roles, Lind stands alone. His costumes and coiffures are rather remarkable and were very pleasing to the sight. He appeared in three different poses, "The Gavotti," "Carmeucita" and the "Five Senses," and with each gave a very pretty little dance. His singing too is worthy of mention in that he apparently sings in a falsetto voice quite as easily as he does a baritone. All in all Lind's offering is one well worth seeing.

Foster and Foster present an amusing comedy skit entitled the "Volunteer Pianist" and the playing of the male number of the team was good as well as being funny. He plays a rather difficult march with about a dozen mittens on each hand. And the way he made "ragtime" of a sheet of classical music, too well with the audience.

Vincent and Raymond in "Names Don't Count," were very amusing and most of their jokes are well away from the chestnut class, while their singing numbers were good indeed. Their feature number, a travesty on married life representing the actions of a married couple of one month's standing and also the same couple two years later is worth mentioning.

The patrons of the Grand have almost begun to expect to see Norma Talmadge as the star of the feature picture and last night's program included this sterling actress in "Her Only Way." This is a remarkable picture and the acting of Miss Talmadge is quite up to her usual high standard.

The theme of the piece is built up around a dream of the heroine in which she marries the wrong man and after going through the divorce courts, she finally shoots her husband and then herself. She awakens though and after convincing herself that it was only a dream, becomes engaged to the struggling young lawyer, and everything ends happily.

The Screen Magazine and a comedy film conclude a splendid program, which will be repeated today and tomorrow.

men; in addition to whom there should be an engineer for each steamer and chemical engine, and when auxiliary stations are established there should be a sufficient number at each to operate the various appliances.

Fire Alarm Telegraph System—At present the system is operated by the Bell Telephone Co., but this arrangement has been so unsatisfactory that the city are installing storage batteries with motor generator set, in a room in the fire hall. The wiring in connection with the system is very poor. The whole should be re-wired as rapidly as possible. All wires in the business and immediate surrounding section should be underground. Additional boxes should be placed on the streets so that no point in the business or congested area or any factory shall be at a greater distance than 500 feet from a box, and every box should be designated at night by a red lamp suspended on a bracket and extending at least two feet over the roadway.

Street wiring—The congestion of wires and poles on the street forms a very serious and dangerous obstruction and greatly impedes the operations of the fire brigade. A special feature of the wiring being the number of service wires to the buildings connected direct to the circuits between the poles.

Night patrol —The men on night patrol should be provided with watchman's clocks in connection with a sufficient number of call stations to effectively cover the business section. The records from the clocks to be conveniently filed for future reference.

What the Increase Means.

The 15 cents on the hundred which has been imposed as a penalty upon the business men of the city—for a penalty it is—does not apply to the owners of houses, but to mercantile insurance alone. The key rate in Peterborough is 35 cents. The recent increase raises this to 50 cents. Fifteen cents added to an insurance policy of $100,000—and that amount is carried by plenty of business men on George Street—means an additional outlay of $150 a year. There are firms in this city insured for one million dollars or more. The penalty to them means an extra outlay of $1500 a year.

The aldermen have been sincere in their efforts to keep down the tax rate of the city, but this avails the business man nothing if he pays a higher insurance rate in order to save on taxes. The impost is not fair, borne as it is by only one section of the community. If the fire department is brought up to the mark, any increase in the tax rate which it would entail would be borne by the citizens as a whole and not by the business men and manufacturers alone.

Chief Grange's Statement.

Chief Grange had not seen Inspector Wilson's report nor had he any idea of its purport when his attention was called to the matter this morning. He is, however, able to clear up certain points. On the day of the inspection, as it so happened, some of the flues in the fire engine burst, but this was not the chronic condition of that part of the apparatus. It worked well before the inspection and its breakdown simply synchronized with Mr. Wilson's visit. The engine has since been overhauled and is now in first-class shape

The Chief agrees that three sliding poles are needed at the hall, but the building is so arranged that it would be impossible to place these to advantage. There are two unused manholes now, one directly under the dormitory, but if poles were attached the men would land among the horses and truck getting ready for a run.

There are at present 22 firemen on the brigade, including the Chief, who makes out a good case when he asserts that this number answers the conditions insisted upon by the underwriters in the event of the double platoon system being installed. Under the old plan, 20 firemen, one to each thousand of the population, was the requirement, with two extra for the double platoon.

Chief Grange has recommended to the Council all the points raised by inspector, including a salvage wagon and additional fire stations.

Ald. Morrison, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, has stated that he will make every effort to bring the brigade up to standard.

REX BEACH'S BEST "TO FAT TO FIGHT"

ALL STAR VAUDEVILLE AT GRAND, MONDAY, TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY

Rex Beach's best is "Too Fat to Fight" in addition to the all-star vaudeville program, at the Grand Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

"Too Fat to Fight" the Rex Beach Picture produced for Goldwyn, comes to the Grand Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday with Frank McIntyre in the featured role. The combination of Rex Beach as the author of a patriotic drama and the acting of Frank McIntyre is sure to make a sensation.

Rex Beach has cast Frank McIntyre for the role of Norman Dalrymple a former football star, now known as "Dimples" because of his excessive fat. He is laughed at by his friends and good-naturedly scorned by Helen Brewster, the girl he loves. Every branch of the service has turned poor "Dimples" down and "too fat to fight" has come to mean worse than death to him. I'd give a leg if I could to be over there with the boys," he says.

Finally a man who is raising a million dollars for the Y.M.C.A. is instrumental in getting "Dimples" into that splendid work. He proves himself a hero every minute of the long days and nights. Then he remembers nothing until a French officer stoops to pin a decoration on his still expansive bosom as he lies in a base hospital.

In addition to this great picture the vaudeville will be one of the best to visit Peterboro headed by T. D. Pepple and M. Greenuald radium of splendor. "The Revue De Vogue." There is no other act in vaudeville of like kind. This can be accounted for by the lavishness displayed by the superproducers. The scenery comprises of thirteen different changes and the orginal Chicago Co. of 12 people—as the title would indicate the costumes are actually the latest creation on saxtorial art.

As an added attraction Ella La Vall, the wonder aerial artist, will close the program. Miss La Vall was two years with the great Barnum & Bailey Circus, and either one of these big acts are worth the price of admission alone. Seats reserved for the evening performances in advance.

DOWNFALL OF JUDAS ISCARIOT

EVANGELIST TORRIE'S THEME AT PARK ST. CHURCH LAST NIGHT

Tonight will be Evangelist Torrie's last week night service in Park Street Baptist church. Last night the Evangelist spoke on "Judas and Jesus" taking as his text Matt. 26:45, "The Son of Man is betrayed into the hands of sinners." In part, he said: "In my text we see the sharp contrast between the depth of human depravity and the height of divine goodness. We have here the treachery of Judas contrasted with the power of Jesus. Judas Iscarios one of the twelve Apostles of our Lord was a sacrilgious man in that he broke in upon Jesus when he was engaged in scrip communion with His Father. He was also a shameless man. He gave them a sign, saying, 'Whomsoever I shall kiss that same is He: hold him fast and forthwith he came to Jesus and kissed Him.'

"We wonder how a man could be so hard heartless, so cruel, so shameless. The solution of the problem is simple. Judas loved money; he did not love Jesus. He called a gift to the Lord a curse, because he was a thief and held the bag. Judas commenced by stealing and he ended by betraying Jesus Christ.

"Judas was snared. The last glimpse John gives us of Judas, he was standing with the enemies of Jesus. Judas choosed his own company and his own place in hell before he went to it. To appreciate Judas' fall, think of what Judas was; what he might have been and what Satan gave him.

"In contrast with Judas we see Jesus. Here we see not His human weakness but His divine power—the power of calmness, of courage, to chostise and the power of charity."

Mrs. Torrie sang "Alone", one of the choice solos from the Billy Sunday book, being so much in peeping with the message and gave a splendid climax to the service. The choir also sung two pieces with good effect. A good service with a large congregation is anticipated tonight.

Mr. Torrie made his first appeal last night and a number "struck the trail."

ART GALLERIES OF EUROPE EXPLORED

INTERESTING LECTURE TO ART LOVERS BY REV. F. E. MALOTT

At the May meeting of the Art Association of Peterborough, held last evening, in the Assembly Hall of the Public Library, the Rev. F. E. Malott gave an account of some of the great art galleries of Europe which he had visited. Among these were the Berlin, Dresden, Munich, Paris and London galleries. Although these have today hundreds of priceless treasures of Art, yet they had very modest beginnings. The Dresden and Munich collections date back to the 16th Century. The National Gallery and the Berlin galleries were not begun until the early half of the 19th Century.

In giving an account of his visits to the various galleries Mr. Malott incidentally gave a very interesting sketch of the various schools of art with special reference to the Italian schools. He spoke of the National Gallery in London and the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin as the best galleries for the student, because in these the works of the various schools are arranged in their historical order. The Louvre in Paris contains the largest collection of any, but the Dresden gallery is a good second and in some respects ranks as the greatest gallery in the world. At Dresden is Raphael's great masterpiece, the Sistine Madonna.

To illustrate his lecture Mr. Malott showed 40 lantern slides that had been made from accurate photographs of the great masterpieces of art. These represented the various schools of art. Examples were given of the art of the Dutch, Flemish, Italian, Spanish, German, French and English schools. Five of the Italian schoole were represented, viz. the School of the Renaissance. The Tuscan, the Umbrain, the Venetian and the Lombard Schools. Some of the masterpieces that were thrown on the canvas were "The Singing Angels," by Jan Van Eyck, "The Vision of St. Anthony," by Murillo, "The Adoration of the Kings," by the Botticelli, "The Sistine Madonna," by Raphael. "The Holy Night," by Correggio. "Abraham's Offering," Andrea Del Sarto. "The Holy Family," Vicellio. "The Last Supper," by Da Vinci, "Baptism of Our Lord," by Vannucci. "Virgin and Child," by Carlo Dolci. "Rembrant's Mother," by Rembrandt.

Among the list were also many fine examples of the work of the German, French and English schools.

In closing Mr. Malott showed also a few slides loaned him by Col. Walker, of the Normal School. He expressed the hope that Peterborough might soon have the beginning of a collection that would some day grow until it would need a gallery to house it.

Mr. Arthur Stevenson presided and Mr. Fisk loaned and operated the lantern. A vote of thanks moved by Mr. F. D. Kerr and seconded by Mr. R. R. Hall was tendered the speaker for his very interesting address.

Y.W.C.A. CLOSING EXERCISES

The closing gymnasium exhibition of the Y. W. C. A. held in the Y.M. C.A. last night was one of the best entertainments of the season. It is an annual affair and those who have been attending for some years state that last night's event is the best yet. The Y.M.C.A. Gym. was crowded to capacity by an enthusiastic audience last night and it is safe to say that when the function is repeated tonight the space available will again be taxed to its unmost and many turned away as was the case last night.

Mr. H. R. H. Kenner presided and in a short address referred to the excellent work of the officials of the Y. W. C. A. and especially Miss Caroline Littlefield to whose efforts as physical director the excellent program which was about to be given was largely due.

From the little tots to the work of the special advanced class those taking part last night acquitted themselves well. There were marches, folk dances, drills, exercises, club swinging and other numbers of a delightful nature which showed the careful training to which those taking part had been subjected.

There was no delay between numbers for which those in charge last night are to be commended. One item upon the program followed another in rapid succession and no tireless waits were experienced which is more than can be said for many a professional performance where there is no s) enectryoshremfwy there is no scenery to serve as an excuse.

Every number was encored heartily last night but it was evident that at the beginning it had been decided in view of the lengthiness of the program that no responses would be made. The final number "The Sailors' Hornpipe" received such an insistent call for a return that the little performers decided to make an exception and danced once around the hall to satisfy their admirers.

The management of the Y. W. C. A. and especially Miss Littlefield the physical director are to be congratulated upon the success of last night's event. The work of those taking part last night showed careful training for which Miss Littlefield is responsible. Before thirty or forty little tots can be induced to go through a difficult drill without a mistake there is a great deal of patience wearing time and trouble expended but the result as demonstrated last night must have more than repaid their trainer and given her the satisfaction of having her efforts crowned with success.

The following was the program:

Part I

1—Processional March—Massed Classes.

2—Swedish Exercises, concluding with Russian Folk Dance—Tuesday and Wednesday Juniors.

3—Single Sticks—Senior School Girls.

4—Dumbbell Exercises—Saturday Juniors.

5—Wand Exercises, concluding with country dance—Intermediates, Beginners, Athena and Silver Link Club Girls.

6—Nursery Rhymes — Babies' Class.

7—Club Swinging Exercises Senior School Girls and Intermediate

8—Flag Drill Tuesday and Wednesday Juniors.

Part II

1—Norwegian Folk Dance—Saturday Juniors

2—Jolly Cortege—Senior School Girls.

3—Chanticleer Junior Class

4—Russian Polka. —Beginners' Class.

5—Old French Dance— Senior School Girls.

6—"Pearl of Andalusia"—Intermediates.

7—Selection

8—Little Sunbeams—Special Junior Class.

9—Rainbow Waltz—Special Advanced Class

10—Sailors' Hornpipe (by request)—Tuesday Juniors

The program as will be seen was a lengthy one but there were no delays in carrying it out as has been stated before and the entertainment was over about twenty minutes after ten. One number was dropped last night as the management feared that should it be included it would take up too much time and would keep the people there until too late an hour. This was jumping, presumably a gym exhibition and was to have been staged as the final number of the first part of the program.

The processional march which commenced the entertainment gave the audience an idea of the number taking part in the evening's performance.

In the Swedish Exercises the Tuesday and Wednesday juniors showed the time expended upon their training. Their action were as mechanical as possible and at the conclusion of the drill they gave a pretty little Russian folk dance.

Next the Senior School Girls practised at single stick but unlike the procedure of ancient days they did not try to break one another's heads and their motions were set to music.

In the dumbbell exercises the Saturday Juniors acquitted themselves admirably. Next came wand exercises by the intermediates, beginners, Athena and Silver Link Club girls. This number concluded with an imitation of areal old fashioned country dance.

Nursery rhymes was what the ladies would term "the cutest number of them all." in this the little tots, came on dressed as little Boo-Peep with old fashioned frocks and picturesque bonnets. They sang all the simple little song of childhood and did it well. They were awed with the volume of applause which their performance drew forth

Club swinging exercises and a very pretty flag drill closed the first part of the program.

There was no tiresome intermission last night but the second half of the performance followed directly. In this part of the program the younger performers did not appear so frequently as before.

Attractive costumes and fancy dances marked the majority of the numbers of the second part. First came Norwegian Folk Dance by the Saturday Juniors. This was followed by the Jolly Cortege by a party of senior Girls.

Chanticleer, the next number had those members of the audience who were disposed to look upon their programmes guessing. It turned out that the name was most appropriate as was demonstrated when about a dozen little performers costumed to represent the noble herald of the morning himself. They even stood about in a circle and crowed and could not be induced to return again until a little girl went out to them with a dish in which it was assumed was food for the hungry flock. They lost no time following her off the floor.

The Russian Polka and the Old French Dance in which those taking part were prettily costumed in styles representative of the country and the time were popular numbers. Those engaged in the latter were clad in delicate pink and looked like the creations of Gainsborough.

Miss Florence Scott sang "The Valley of Laughter"—Sanderson, with violin obligato by Miss Laura Logan Miss C. White acting as her accompanist. This selection was admirably rendered by Miss Scott and varied the program in a most acceptable manner. She was heartily encored but adhering to the rule which had evidently been agreed upon she declined to reappear.

Little Sunbeams in which the juniors clad in bright little costumes went through a very pretty little dance was followed by the Rainbow waltz and the Sailors' Hornpipe. In the first nine young ladies dressed in costumes of delicate hues took part and in the latter the younger members appeared as sailors and went through the old fashioned dance with all the spirit of a crew of Jack Tars.

The event will be repeated at the Y M C A tonight. It is well worth seeing and everyone who wants to enjoy a real good entertainment are advised to be present.

Those in charge last night were Miss Littlefield, Miss Edith Pryce and Mrs. Rogers. Accompanist: Mrs. Foster, Miss M Penrose and Miss Buckham

DELEGATES FROM AUSTRIA APPEAR AT CONFERENCE

Arrival Was Surprise as They Had not Been Invited—No Favors to be Shown Germans

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 3. — An Austrian peace delegation has arrived in France. The delegates have been housed at St. Germain.

There have been no intimations that an Austrian peace delegation was on its way to Paris, of which St. Germain is a suburb. In the case of the Germans, the Peace Conference procedure was to send invitations to Berlin for the sending of German delegates to receive the Allied terms of peace when it appeared that the treaty to be presented to Germany was nearing completion. In the lack of any news regarding similar procedure having been taken by the Conference in the case of Austria-Hungary, it seems possible that either an Austrian delegation has come to France on its own initiative for a special purpose or that the imperfect conditions of transmission from Europe now prevailing have resulted in the non-arrival of explanatory despatches which might throw new light on the foregoing message.

No Oral Discussion.

London, May 3.—The Germans will be given a maximum period of fifteen days in which to accept or reject the treaty of peace, according to a Paris despatch. There will be no oral discussions of the terms, but the Germans may present their written propositions to the Allies, who will reply in writing. The Germans must present all their counter proposals within the time limit, but if these are presented during the latter days of the period, the Allies reserve the right to exceed the time limit in making their reply.

Church Temperance Society, Boston, will abandon coffee rooms as a substitute for saloons. Directors say they are no longer efficient, desirable or practical.

Messrs. A. W. Cressman and C. E. Smith—East side of George street from Murray to Simcoe street.

Messrs. R. J. Kidd and W. E. Conway—West side of George street from Simcoe to King street.

Messrs. W. D. Campbell and J. H. Connal—East side of George street from Simcoe to King street.

Messrs. Jos. J. Duffus and C. M. Moncur—Water street.

Messrs. M. J. Maher and H. Abramson—Brock and Hunter streets and East City.

Messrs. D. Hall and E. L. Payne—Simcoe and Charlotte streets.

Messrs. J. W. McDermid and R. G. Kingan—All streets running north and south not already assigned.

Messrs. Jos. J. and L. J. Picard—All streets running east and west not already assigned.

Messrs. E. Burnham and W. B. Warne—Above Murray and below King and George streets.

Messrs. D. M. Minicola and W. J. Routley—Brownton and the extreme south end.

The Sustaining Fund is growing rapidly since this section has become actually engaged and it is believed that a large number of new members will be recorded during the next few days.

ITALIAN ISSUE IS STILL IN BALANCE

FRENCH AND AMERICAN AMBASSADORS TRYING TO HEAL BREACH

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 3.—The Italian issue is still in the balance, with Camille Barrere, the French ambassador, and Thomas Nelson Page, the American ambassador, both making efforts at Rome to find, by conversations with Premier Orlando, a formula which will heal the breach caused by the withdrawal of the Italian delegation to the Peace Conference. The Italian premier is said to show a disposition ot resume relations, but thinks that overtures should come from Paris.

Pte. Jno. Crane of the Forestry Corps is being tried on similar charges. He admitted be had been drinking previous to the trouble. The court has called for character evidence.

NARROW THE HIGH-LEVEL BRIDGE AND SAVE $25,000

Does Peterborough Need a Bridge Roadway Accommodating Six Lines of Traffic, Including Two Railway Tracks?

(By Pater Familias.

The city fathers, in regard to the new bridge they are pledged to build this year, are in a quagmire of doubt and uncertainty as to what course of action to pursue to assure this needed high level structure being built within the limit of $260,000 plus government grant. Thousands of dollars of expenditure hinges on whether the original width planned shall be modified or not, but the aldermen as a majority seem obsessed with the idea that nothing but a bridge allowing for a 42-ft. roadway would do. Some think a reduction by nine feet would mar the beauty of the structure as designed, while others visualize the city growing at so fast a pace that in a few years even the 42-foot roadway would be taxed to accommodate its traffic—at least that is the impression conveyed. As to the width of the bridge for all practical purposes 33 feet can be made go further than most people imagine, and to look forward to the time when it would not accommodate the traffic between east and west city is flattering to Peterborough and its possibilities and very much like building castles in the air. The writer saw yesterday a photograph of 42nd street, New York, and was much impressed with the busy scene presented. The road is 42 feet wide, is double tracked, and allows of six lines of traffic. If 42 feet will accommodate six lines of continuous traffic—motor cars, motor trucks, street cars—in America's mighty metropolis, surely it is safe to assume that the time is yet far distant indeed when Peterborough's high level bridge will be taxed for similar highway capacity. In the face of this it does seem that we might get along pretty comfortably over the new bridge from east to west, from west to east, on a 33-foot highway without experiencing any serious congestion of traffic for a few years to come. And unless the city fathers can foresee for Peterborough a future unwarranted by situation and resources in sight, they might as well content themselves with a narrow bridge and thus save $25,000 in construction.

The road on George street, from curb to curb, is 43½ feet wide, and a bridge with a highway 1½ feet less would be some bridge indeed, and would allow for vehicle traffic probably in excess of many of the world's biggest structures. And the question is: Does Peterborough or will Peterborugh ever need it to assure safety and to meet all requirements, or shall we save $25,000 by building a bridge with a 33-foot roadway from curb to curb, thus solving the problem of expenditure, and, to the writer's mind, allowing for a structure that will neither be an eyesore nor be found wanting in adequate provision for traffic?

A bill introduced in New York Legislature enables fire and marine insurance companies to insure the hazards of airplanes, seaplanes or other aircraft.

LAST SERVICE SUNDAY NIGHT

EVANGELIST TORRIE TO WIND UP MEETINGS AT PARK STREET CHURCH

Another good congregation assembled in Park Street Baptist Church last night, when Evangelist Torrie preached on "Blind Bartimaeus." In speaking on this subject, he said: "Sin has deformed, disfigured every human soul. The arch enemy has blinded every man's spiritual vision. We cannot hope for sight until we make the language of our text the prayer of our heart. 'Lord, that I may receive my sight.' Trace the correspondence between this blind man coming to Jesus for sight and anyone coming to Jesus either for physical, mental or spiritual vision. This man was cheerless, but for a good reason. He was blind. The physical is but a type of the spiritual conditon. Some people are physically blind and some are mentally blind, while some are spiritually blind, and this is well nigh universal. This man was a beggar: 'sat at the highway side begging.' He was poor, helpless, dependent and despised. He was crying. It was a cry of conviction, a cry condemned, a courageous cry, and it was a cry considered. He was coming. 'He, casting away his garments, rose up and came to Jesus.' This man was challenged. 'What wilt thou that I should do unto thee?' He was cured. 'Immediately he received his sight.' He was consecrated, and 'he followed Jesus in the way.'"

Mrs. Torrie sang, "You Must Do Something with Jesus Tonight." It was most in keeping with the message, and when the evangelist made the appeal many responded and went into the enquiry room.

The choir was in full force and sang to the enjoyment and profit of all.

Mr Torrie will preach in Park Street Church Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, and preach an object sermon at an open session of the school at 3 o'clock. He will preach his last sermon at 7 o'clock.

The choir and Mrs. Torrie will sing at all these services, and the public is cordialy invited to all meetings.

HUNS TO GIVE UP CABLE SYSTEMS

THAT IS ONE TERM OF PEACE THE ALLIES WILL INSIST UPON

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, May 3.—The Associated Press this morning issued the following: With the work of framing the peace treaty seemingly almost completed except for secondary matters, the Allies' and German delegations at Paris are waiting for a formal presentation of the document early next week. The final decisions on several problems, which must be written into the terms of peace, were reported by the Council of Three yesterday. Germany must give up her cable systems, according to reports, but the Allies will not incorporate in the treaty a plan for the future disposition of this property. The cables will merely remain in the hands of the five great powers until an agreement is reached as to what will be done with them. This is virtually the same plan said to have been adopted in dealing with the warships which Germany has surrendered.

BOOTLEGGER TO PAY $500 FINE

OTHERWISE JOHN JOHNSTON WILL SPEND SIX MONTHS IN JAIL.

John Johnston, the man arrested by Inspector Stewart and Constable Moore while in Charge of a wagon load of liquor being brought from Norwood to Peterborough, was this morning fined $500 and costs and in default of payment will spend the next six months in jail.

Johnston is a returned soldier, having served in the C. E. F., although an American. Mr. J. A. O'Brien appeared for him this morning and urged that as he had crossed the line to take up arms in defence of freedom in the army of another country, he felt that his action should be considered by the court when dealing with him.

Magistrate Dumble stated that there was evidently a gang at work and that the trade in liquor must be stamped out. He imposed the fine usual in such cases.

DANIEL McMURRAY IS FINED $500 FOR FAILING TO REPORT

Young Man From Douro Pleads Guilty in Police Court to Charge of Defaulting and Pays Usual Heavy Penalty.

Daniel McMurray, the Douro defaulter, who pleaded guilty a few days ago to having been a defaulter under the M. S. A., was in police court this morning fined $500 and $14.10 costs, or as an alternative will spend a year at Guelph prison farm.

C. R. Widdifield appeared in the interests of the prisoner. He stated the father had a poor farm, a large family, was himself crippled with rheumatism and had borne considerable expense in connection with the illness of one of his children who had been confined to the hospital. His wife had been confined to her bed for some time through illness, and while the young man was guilty of defaulting in connection with his military duty Mr Widdifield requested that the court deal as leniently with him as was consistent with the administration of justice.

Crown Attorney Hatton stated that while the young man was not by any means a terrible criminal he had failed to do his duty in his country's time of need and with many others had hidden in the woods of their native township, making it necessary for the government to maintain a detachment of military police at Peterborough in order to bring them to justice. This man had been caught and Mr Hatton [illegible] that while what Mr Widdifield said in regard to the father's circumstances was undoubtedly true he felt that the punishment should at least be such as would serve as a warning to the other defaulters who are hiding in Douro and might be instrumental in convincing them of the wisdom of yielding themselves to the law to be dealt with as they deserved. The more expense they necessitated by hiding and making it harder to bring them to account the less likely the court would be to deal leniently with them.

Magistrate Dumble said he could not view the young man's offence lightly. His grandfather had in all probability obtained his farm in Douro for nothing, and the parents of the slackers in that township were accorded every privilege imaginable. The father of the prisoner was a member of the board of education of his school section, and he could see little excuse for McMurray's action. He imposed the penalty as stated above.

ARRIVAL OF HUNS REPORTED AS OF SMALL IMPORTANCE

Delegates From Berlin Complain of Indifference of French, British and Americans

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 3.—In a German wireless despatch picked up in Paris the first meeting of the German delegates with the represntatives of the Allies is described at length. The attitude of the French officials is characterized as "cold, but correct." The message declares that the British and French press treat the arrival of the Germans as a matter of minor importance, and the American press has displayed similar indifference. June 1st is given as the probable date of the signing of the treaty.

218 Germans At Versailles.

Versailles, May 3.—The German delegation to the Peace Congress is rapidly assuming a position of equality, in numbers at least, with the delegations of the various Allied and and associated powers. Twenty more delegations arrived in Versailles last evening and this morning, travelling on the regular trains under escort. Their arrival brings the roster of the delegation to a total of 218, while still more arrivals are expected. A brisk interchange of telegrams is in progress with Berlin and couriers leave daily for the German capital.

Refuse Hungary's Offer.

Geneva, May 3.—The Roumanians and the Czecho-Slovak governments, according to reports received here, have refused to entertain the offer of Bela Kun, the Hungarian foreign minister, to accept territorial concessions providing that fighting be stopped on all fronts. The Roumanians and Czechs continue their march on Budapest.

Rumor Says Finns Take Petrograd

Further Details Of Peace Terms

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 3.—The presentation of peace terms to the Germans will not take place before Wednesday, May 7, according to present indications. Important progress has been made, however, in solving the problems remaining before the final shaping of the treaty. The Echo De Paris says that the Council of Three yesterday adopted the section of the treaty dealing with Alsace and Lorraine, which are give to France, the ownership of railways included. The Council also fixed status of Luxemburg, this newspaper adds, completely serving the Grand Duchy from Germany.

Now that the peace terms are to be handed over to Germans, the newspapers point out that the summoning of an Austro-Hungarian delegates seems probable and they voice the expectation that an invitation of an amicable sort will be sent to Italy, requesting the presence of her delegates.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO THE FIRST SETTLERS LANDED HERE

F. H. Dobbin, With True Historic Instinct, Writes Interesting Account of Progress of the District From Beginning to the First Century Milestone.

(By F. H. Dobbin)

Anniversaries become notable for the actions, movements, and objects accomplished, and which they call to mind. This is quite true, either in the household in private life, in municipal life or in national progression. But often we fail [illegible] to observe an anniversary, unless it be among those who participated in the original event. So for the next forty years we shall observe anniversaries of battles, mobilizations, of going out and coming in of men and forces, for the Great War has dwarfed all other things and what has been done and suffered will survive. Again [illegible] right, too. Most momentous for our people, city province and Dominion.

So there be some excuse that we have allowed to drop out of sight and mind one anniversary, that while occasionally spoken of has not so far elicited public comment and action. Not that we might look for activity in such respect from those who have come to live in this city in the last twenty years, or from those who have grown up from childhood to man or woman hood among us; but that those who have lived here for the past fifty or sixty years, maybe, and their fathers lived here before them, should manifest an interest. Up to this day there is none of comment or suggestion. It is now too late to sit up and take notice.

The Original Pioneer

Just one hundred years ago the first settler to go upon the land which is now covered by the City of Peterborough, made his appearance, in the month of May, 1819. It is true that the year previous, 1818, a small party of emigrants sailed from England, some of whom, braving the perils of the forest found their way into the township of Smith, then but recently surveyed. This was in the autumn of 1818. They came in by way of Rice Lake and the river, for at that time there was no semblance of a road stretching away between the Frontier along Lake Ontario and their new and prospective home. But this settlement in the township is not just now a part of the anniversary story. Further on things may be written of such settlement.

In May, 1818, a party came up the river in a skiff, for the purpose of selecting a mill site and otherwise prospecting. One of the number, Adam Scott, had determined to strike out for himself, and to locate where he felt he could be useful and make a livelihood at an occupation kindred to his own, which was that of millwright. Five other came with him. They landed just above Spaulding's Bay, at that time a sheet of water now covered by the lumber piles of the McDonald Co. In after years this bay was the site of a steam saw mill erected by Shaw & Fortune because the bay was a quiet sheet of water on which to moor the saw logs to be cut. Scott discharged his gun and by means of the flint of the lock a fire was kindled. After a lunch, which served for supper, the party lay down around the fire under the branches of the trees and slept.

Following morning three of the party started for what they called Mud Lake, following the blaze on the trees made the previous year by incoming settlers. One of the men who the owner of the land comprising the present village of Bridgenorth. Afterwards they returned to the encampment at the Bay. In their absence a thorough search had been made of the locality adjacent to the River. They had found the creek, and were sure that by damming up the creek (where it now crosses King Street) and leading the water along a trench to the bank of the river an eligible mill site would be obtained, and at a trifling cost of time and labor, compared with an effort to control the river at any point in the neighborhood.

Work Commences on Mill

The party returned to the river Scott came back presently, bringing with him two men to help. A rough structure of logs was put up for shelter and work commenced on the mill, Scott leaving off the proposition to build a house until he could utilize sawn lumber. Small as the structure was, only about 18 by 24 feet, the timbers for the frame had to be "whip-sawed" from the logs of pine trees felled adjacent to the site. It was roofed with bark taken from other trees. The building of the "undershoot" water wheel was a problem that took a deal of time. The trench excavated to bring the flow of water to the mill and the erection of the dam from logs and dirt consumed many weeks. So it was not until the spring of the year following that the mill was ready for business. In the building, in addition to a single upright saw, was a run of very common millstones for grinding wheat. These stones were taken from an outcrop of limestone farther up the creek. Despite the drawbacks the capacity of the little mill was adequate to supply the needs of the few settlers.

Who Was Adam Scott?

We are interested, and quite properly so, in the personality of men who achieve prominence in our affairs, even if we have never met and viewed these men in the flesh. So possibly a brief sketch of this man Scott, the details of which were supplied by one who was intimate with him for many years, may be of interest. In all walks of life men who do something and do it first are worthy of being remembered.

Adam Scott was born in Edinburgh

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

SATURDAY, MAY 3, 1919

PETERBOROUGH'S PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE.

WITH THE TRUE INSTINCTS of the historian, Mr. F. H. Dobbin has written an article, which appears in another column, dealing with the early records of Peterborough, an article that has been suggested by the fact that the first pioneer settled on the present site of the city of Peterborough just one hundred years ago. Mr. Dobbin possesses a vast fund of information and has the faculty of adding a touch of humor to all his writings, which never fails to make them interesting to the reader. If the day ever comes when an official chronicler is required in this city there will be no difficulty in finding a man for the position.

But it is the present and future of Peterborough with which the people are more directly concerned, and both aspects of the question are such as to encourage optimism among the masses. There is no room for the pessimist, for the man of small or shortened vision. Peterborough has come through nearly four years of unexampled prosperity. It is unfair to attribute this entirely to the war. There would have been a revival of business in 1915, following two or more years of depression even if not a single hostile move had ever been made by the legalized murderers of Europe. If business has been brisk during the war, the industrial energy was diverted from legitimate channels. Peterborough today, with peace returned, finds itself where it was when the war started, so far as any civic progress has been made. During the years of conflict public works were to a great extent suspended, and revenue was expended in taking care of problems that the war created. True prosperity will return again when the industries of the city once strike their old stride.

The people of this city, those in public office and private life, have come to realize that the city has a future, and there is a cheering spirit of co-operation in evidence. The pessimist and knocker is an exception rather than the rule as formerly. The way lies straight ahead. Every organization that has charged itself with promoting the general welfare has awakened into new activity with the return of peace.

The pessimist says that Peterborough will never become a city of fifty thousand inhabitants. The optimist is just as fully convinced that that goal will be attained inside of ten years. The first may be a grouch, but the other is by no means an idle dreamer. He bases his conclusions on the solid ground of reason. Peterborough has natural advantages unsurpassed anywhere in the Dominion. It occupies a central position, the largest city in this section of the Province, far enough removed from other large urban communities to be relieved of the danger of overwhelming competition. With the opening of the Trent Canal it becomes a lake port with easy trade facilities both north and south. It has in the immediate vicinity the greatest summer resort in Ontario, the proper advertising of which, with access made possible by radial lines, cannot fail to make Peterborough one of the best known Canadian cities not only in the Dominion but in the United States as well. For years this city has been disposed to bide its taper under a bushel, from a mistaken idea that there is civic security in silence, that the best there is belongs by right to those whose good fortune it is that they were born here. Probably in all Canada there is no city of the size of Peterborough that figures so little in the records of the metropolitan press. Here is one phase of civic work that the now virile Board of Trade can take up to some purpose.

Every optimist believes that the entire country is on the eve of an industrial boom, the greatest in the history of the nation. The markets of Europe will be thrown open to the products of Canada as never before. Manufacturers from outside will be attracted to Peterborough, induced by its natural advantages alone, instead of being wheedled into coming by dark lantern civic delegations bearing rich gifts in the form of tax exemptions and like concessions.

The greatest manufacturers of the city, the men who have the bulk of the capital invested here, are still confident of the future. Why, then, should others give way to despair? Business men who only a short time ago made light of the idea of a city with fifty thousand inhabitants, now accept the ten-year limit set for that achievement. The manufacturer is building no hopes upon the sinking sands of dreamland. He can read the signs and is in touch with all that is happening the world over. Doubling the population of this city in a decade would be no more of a miracle than was its growth from the small beginning Mr. Dobbin writes of through all the hardships and disappointments of pioneer days, even if a century was consumed in the development.

CAUGHT THE WRONG PIG.

WANDERING INTO the political stockyard the other day, our contemporary volunteered to take a hand in the general round-up, but by accident laid hold of the ear of the wrong pig, an animal that has long been placed on the blacklist of the partisans of our esteemed neighbor.

To drop the simile — the Examiner printed in its editorial column an article dealing with the trade question that would have been in excellent taste if published in a protectionist journal. It was an argument in favor of purchasing Canadian made goods, based on a circular sent out by the Trade Commission to the newspapers, and which appeared sadly out of place in a publication that is suspected of free trade proclivities. How it is possible to purchase goods of domestic manufacture unless such articles are made here, and how they can be manufactured in competition with the cheap labor of overseas was not demonstrated. Our contemporary was for the time being seized of an ambition to catch a pig and set upon its task regardless. It was both its blunder and its misfortune to lay hold of the wrong animal.

Official circulars may come in handy to fill up an editorial vacuum, but their judicious use calls for a certain amount of professional discrimination. But, like many another, the Examiner, feeling constrained to make public confession of its sins, simply mistook the proper auditorium for the purpose.

THE BLINDING GLARE OF LIBERTY.

REV. A. C. DIXON, speaking in the famous Spurgeon tabernacle of London, told his audience that he proposed to go to America, the land that maintained in the harbor of New York an illuminated statue of liberty that shed its rays over many miles of water as if to welcome the wayfarer to the new world. But the blazing beacon does not lack an element of tragedy. The birds of the air, emerging from the darkness of night to which their vision is accustomed, are blinded by the glare that cheers the mariner on his way, and dash out their brains against the figure. That, added Mr. Dixon, with a beautiful application of the subject, was just what Russia was doing, finding herself in an unaccustomed illumination.

The Russians and the sea birds are not the only victims of this peculiar form of blindness. The light that the Statue of Liberty sheds for miles, also breeds in the breast of many an alien seeking a new domicile a form of insanity that often proves his undoing. The sudden change from the darkness of oppression and semi-barbarity, of abject poverty and ignorance, into the blaze of modern civilization, is too much for the average mortal. Blinded like the birds, he dashes his head against he very institution which stands reado ty invest him with a new earthly existence.

Excessive light brings disaster to lower animals other than the birds of the air. The deer in the forest is enticed to its doom by the torch the hunter burns at night; the fish are lured to desruction by the jack-light in the stern of the boat of the fisherman who depends upon a spear for his capture. And there are men as easily charmed to their destruction as are the deer, the birds and the fishes.

The suddenly emancipated slaves of the South committed every form of violence against not only their former taskmasters, but against the very faction that had helped them to their freedom. The European alien, transplanted into a land where all men are supposed to enjoy the same rights, whether that land be the United States or Canada, is often intoxicated by his first breath of liberty and runs riot among his new associates. He mistakes liberty for license. He cannot realize that in Canada justice is supposed to replace oppression. He still imagines that the hands of those in authority are against him. He cannot entirely overcome the hatred which was engendered by his life across the seas.

But there are exceptions. There are those who, finding themselves in the new glare, still preserve their vision and who with sincere thankfulness accept the blessings that the illumination brings to them. Not all the birds that approach the statue from which the light comes lose their sense of direction.

The light of liberty has been kindled where it never burned before in European countries, since the war begun. In Russia it has flared and faded, to be succeeded by a darkness more dense than ever enveloped the land in former days. In the new nations that have been born in the agony of war may the people escape the same form of blindness that begets the insanity that is fatal.

HOUSING PROBLEM ACUTE IN U. S.

(New York Commercial)

The problem of housing the people of the United States has reached a proportion never before attained. The problem of housing the people of New York City has reached an acute stage. It is an alarming condition and by no means a theory.

Tenants groaning under increased rents loudly proclaim that houseowning is very profitable and point to rich landlords to justify the statement. If householding is so profitable why does not capital build the million houses needed in the nation and the many thousands needed in this city. The answer to this question is the high cost of labor and of building material.

Whatever the cause, private building interests are not building. It is a startling fact that in the first three months of 1919 only three building plans were filed in the Bureau of Buildings in the Borough of Manhattan. Many buildings have been modified with a view to holding more tenants and the very poor are "doubling up" wherever possible. This is a horrible condition with the hot summer months impending.

As desperate diseases require desperate remedies, many individuals and a section of the press are urging municipal aid in the erection of dwelling houses — the number urgently needed in New York City at this movement is fairly estimated at 100,000.

The project of municipal financial aid in housing the people is not new nor by any means untried. It has been carried out successfully in England, the City of London having invested two million pounds of public money in houses for working people. The plan has proved successful in the English capital. Four years ago Massachusetts tacked an amendment on to her constitution which empowered the state to provide homes for citizens. The amendment reads "The General Court shall have power to authorize the commonwealth to take land and to hold, improve, subdivide, build upon and sell the same for the purpose of relieving congestion of the population and providing homes for citizens; provided, however, that this amendment shall not be deemed to authorize the sale of such land or buildings at less than the cost thereof."

If the plan is feasible for the state it is equally so for the municipality, but it would appear reasonable that state action would do away with the necessity for the cities to take individual action. The project involves neither charity nor philanthrpy, but it is a clean cut business proposition which can be put in operation in an emergency. If New York had such a provision in her constitution as Massachusetts she could begin building the home urgently needed tomorrow.

Of coure, there would be drawbacks, for every state and Government controlled industry is enmeshed red tape and hampered by inefficiency but rather houses built with state or city money than no houses at all.

Emergencies are often met by startling innovations. When the cholera was raging Governor Flower bought Fire Island in his own name by telegraph, to be used as a quarantine station. The state afterward ratified his act. Disraeli bought the Suez Canal over night and the British nation ratified his act. Admiral Dewey is said to have cut the cable at Manila and we have yet to hear him blamed for it.

New York city must have more houses at once. The best brains of the city must and will find a way to provide them.

CHICAGO PLANS A SOFT DRINK SHOW

THE TEMPERANCE PEOPLE WILL DEMONSTRATE THE MAKING OF INNOCENT BEVERAGES

"Raisin, raisin, who's got the raisin?"

This will be a popular pastime among visitors to Chicago's first "soft drink show," planned by leaders in the beverage industry. The display will be known as the Beverage Exposition and will be held in the Coliseum Nov. 1 to 9. All known varieties of soft drinks and numerous others not yet introduced to thirsting humankind will be introduced for sampling by the public. Alcoholic drinks will naturally be taboo and it is said that the "censorship committee" will be composed of former leaders in the brewing industry.

What the raisin will not do in the realm of drink betaphysics will be revealed at the beverage exposition, according to Felix Mendelsohn, manager of the projected show.

They Kick Out That 'Kick'

"We are going to put a perpetual quietus on the rumors that this brand of soft drink and that can be given a 'kick' by the insertion of a raisin or two in the bottle," said Mr. Mendelsohn. "The raisin rumor has spread so far and wide that it enters into nearly every conversation in office street car or home. It has taken the place of the war and spy rumors. As a result certain well known brands of 'soft' beverages are being placed under a cloud by the suspicion that they are being popularised on the 'add a raisin and serve' plan.

"At the beverage exposition we are going to let the public experiment with raisins, yeast and other alleged fermenting substances and satisfy themselves that these rumors are unfounded. We'll furnish the soft drinks and the people can bring their raisins. We guarantee no ill results from these experiments. The modern soft drink is made nonalcoholic to stay nonalcoholic. There is nothing sinister in the designs of the beverage makers in offering tasty and refreshing drink novelties to the public in the new 'dry' era.

"Nothing could be so injurious to the great and growing industry of beverage manufacture than the swallowing of 'raisin stories' by a gullible public. The Beverage Exposition will make 'tutti frutti' soft drinks popular among the very classes which are now voicing loud opposition to the 'dry' reign which is to be inaugurated July 1st.

Bartenders' Contest, Too!

A "bartender' contest" will be one of the features of the exposition, it is reported. Prizes will be given for the nicest chocolate nut sundes, ice cream sodas and "cherry kisses" prepared by retired bartenders. The committee of judges will be composed of high school misses and matinee girls.

"The sight of an ex-bartender from the 1st ward dishing out sundaes may cause tears to spring to the eyes of some, but it will be gratifying to the great majority," declared an official of the exposition. "But the bartenders long ago saw the handwriting on the wall, and many of them are prepared to give the average dapper soda clerk cards and spades when it comes to dashing out soft drinks."

The processes used in manufacturing "kickless" beverages will be shown at the exposition, much of the machinery being in actual operation. Sanitary precautions taken in the industry will be illustrated and every effort will be made to convince the public that cleanliness is the guiding principle of the industry.

A "soda clerk's beauty contest" is one of the proposed features of the exposition. Ex-bartenders will not be barred.

WIT AND WISDOM

The Case

"The Germans seem to be getting frenzied about the indemnities they are to pay."

"That is merely to prove by their state of mind they cannot be collected."

Sidestepping

"An then —" said Angelica, pausing.

"Yes, and then?" said Caroline, expectantly.

"He asked me if I had ever been kissed before.

Caroline gave a gasp of compassion.

"How awkward! Of course, you said —er—no?"

"Dear Caroline," said Angelica, raising her soulful eyes to those of her friend, "don't you know that truth is my one virtue, that I abhor a lie."

"Yes, dear, I know," whispered Carolina. "So what did you say?"

"I said," replied Angelica, piously pressing her friend's hand, "Oh Raymond, how can you ask me such a question?"

The Other Way About

Mrs. Exe—So you and your husband have separated because of a misunderstanding?

Mrs. Wye—Not at all, my dear. We parted because we understood each other only too well.

Still More Helpful

"I put in the French phrases here and there," said the would-be author, "to give the book an atmosphere of culture."

"That's all right," said the publisher, "but it would have helped still more if you'd put in a little good English here and there."

The Only Easy Way

"Pa, what is the easy-payment plan?"

"Paying cash, my boy, for whatever you buy.

Foolish Question

"Does your wife talk as much as she used to?

"As much? Great Scott! don't you suppose one's capacity increases with constant practice?"

Helped Her

Mother—Did the dentist hurt you much dear?

Elsie—Yes, mamma, but he was very nice every time he did it. He always said "Ouch!" before I could.

His Dear Wife

Marks—My wife always says exactly what she means.

Parks—I wish mine did. Whenever she says she wants a "little money" she means a great deal.

Ought to be Isolated

Mrs. Blinks—This paper tells of a man who lives on onions alone.

Mrs. Jinks (whose husband eats them)—Well, anyone who lives on onions ought to live alone.

FEMININE LOGIC

Dropping in one day when there was a municipal election, we asked the young lady across the way if she had exercised her prerogative and she said she turned her six somersaults as usual and guessed that exercised about everything there was.

LESSONS IN RIGHT LIVING
By Dr. W. A. BRADY

Baker's yeast is a wholesome food when fresh, and in certain conditions it is an excellent remedy besides. In any event it seldom causes any untoward effects. Only occasionally does it seem to upset the digestion. It does tend to make the bowels more active and in a few cases causes slight diarrhea. Here is a letter telling what it does:

"Dear Doctor: I have been taking your yeast cure with huge success. I have gained continually in weight and in appetite, I have lost the poinsettias on my chin and have taken no laxative for several weeks.

"My sister has achieved equally brilliant results and we are so delighted we are afraid to break the spell by discontinuing the yeast.

"We each took half a yeast cake after eating, three times a day mixed to a thin fluid with cool water and flavored usually with a little orange juice.

"It is not an unpleasant remedy to take, as medicines go. We have now taken it for nearly six weeks, and are anxious to learn whether there is any harm in continuing it longer—or any need of doing so.

"We both spent a good deal of time and money trying to rid ourselves of pimples and we can't thank you enough for the treatment recommended by you. Sincerely, FLORINETTA."

Since yeast is a good wholesome food, rich in nitrogen and in vitamine I can see no harm in eating it habitually if one likes it.

Besides clearing up pimples, improving digestion and nutrition (in persons underweight), and aiding in the natural function of the bowels the use of ordinary baker's yeast often removes that rather attractive blemish known to the vulgar, like myself, as a rum blossom, and to the elect as acne rosacea. But I cannot say yeast will have any marked effect on the rhinophyma or exuberance of the olfacory exchescence that sometimes complicates a rum blossom of long and unopposed standing. The dose mentioned by Florinetta is small. One whole yeast cake two or three times a day may be necessary to accomplish good results in many cases.

A Lump in the Breast

"I have a lump in my left breast about the size of a hickory nut. It has been there over four years, but it has never pained me until this winter. Now it bothers me quite a little and I can't sleep on my left side. It also pains me under the shoulder at times in the daytime. Do you think theese are symptoms or cancer? MRS. O. L. A."

That is one possible explanation. The only sensible thing for a woman to do in such circumstances is to consult her physician.

Tuberculosis

"* * * My doctor assured me that I have every reason to expect to regain my health within two years, but I have little faith in recovery from tuberculosis. It is not unusual for a patient to recover? R.R."

Recovery is the usual thing; only exceptional cases fail to recover, under modern treatment. Your pessimistic view is no doubt based upon ancient history. Recovery was unusual in the old days when a diagnosis was made only in the last stage of the disease and when even doctors were afraid of the open air treatment.

Salts Good for The Liver

"I have heard that you have discovered a new kind of salts that is very beneficial to the liver. Please tell me what it is and how to take it. MRS. A.S.C."

I haven't discovered it, exactly, and it isn't new, but it is good for the liver. It is somersaults, the dose being six each night and morning.

Shaking Sister Down

"My sister has been troubled for some years with what has been called a "nervous liver." She has been given a great deal of massage and many vibratory treatments. These treatments are very expensive and seem to produce little result. The massage expert says there is some slight hardening of the liver. I wondered if you could suggest an oil which would help in softening the liver. J. M. C."

I have seen a palpitating liver, and hard livers, and proud and knobby and contracted and tired livers, but I have never encountered a nervous liver. I should give the "expert" a well earned vacation and consult a physician. The very thought of massaging a liver is ticklish.

Clear, Peachy Skin Awaits Anyone Who Drinks Hot Water

Sparkling and vivacious —merry, bright, alert—a good, clear skin and a natural, rosy, healthy complexion are assured only by pure blood. If only every man and woman could be induced to adopt the morning inside bath, what a gratifing change would take place. Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls, with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks." "run donws," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleaning, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, billiousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance, awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

THE GREAT APOSTACY

Rev. A. G. Dower Has Arranged Series of Discouses

Rev. A. G. Doner, pastor of Bethany Tabernacle, preaching on the above theme last Sunday morning, announced his intention of devoting one Sunday evening service to each of the following subjects: — Spiritualism, Christian Science, Russellism, Higher Criticism, Theosophy, Mormonism, Bahaism and others.

Mr. Doner believes these teachings to be the chief constituents of the present apostacy described in 2 Thess. 2 as the "Falling Away," "Mystery of Lawlessness," "Working of Satan" and "Strong Delusion," which will reach its maturity during the personal reign of the great anti-Christ spoken of in 2 Thessa 2, as the Man of Sin.

This fact, he claims, to be one of the great outstanding and unanswerable evidences of the imminent coming of the Day of the Lord also the great peril to which all orthodox believers are subjected through the subtlety of these cults which he unhesitatingly calls "Doctrines of Devils."

On Sunday night next, he will treat the 1st subject "Modern Spiritualism," and extends a kindly invitation to both friends and foes of these doctrines.

BUSY HOLIDAY FOR MR. MALOTT

PASTOR SPENT FEW DAYS AMONG OLD FRIENDS AT ORILLIA

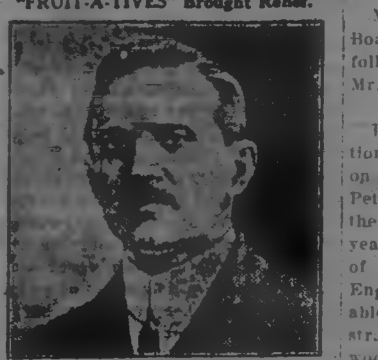
Rev F. E. Malott has recently returned from a visit to Orillia, concerning which the Packet has the following to say:

Members of the Independent Order of Oddfellows to the number of 125 attended Divine service in the Methodist church Sunday morning to mark the 100th anniversary of the Order. Rev. F. E. Malott, who came up from Peterborough for the occasion, preached an appropriate sermon based on the latter portion of the tenth chapter of St. Luke. He referred to the splendid record of the Oddfellows in connection with the war and to their beneficent work in caring for the widow and the orphan.

Orillia friends were glad of a few days' visit from Mr and Mrs. Malott, who remained till Tuesday. They came as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Clark, but having extended their visit somewhat spent the last day or so with Mr. and Mrs. Weatherwax. While here Mr. Malott was anything but idle (is he ever idle?). He preached twice in the Methodist church, in the morning to the Oddfellows; spoke to the children of the Sunday school and addressed the men's class; spoke before a gathering of Masons, attended an Oddfellows' banquet and spoke to the brethren, and assisted at two funerals. Besides all this he called upon as many old friends as possible, particularly the "shut-ins," who otherwise would not have an opportunity of seeing him.

BEDRIDDEN WITH RHEUMATISM

Felt That He Would Never Walk Again "FRUIT-A-TIVES" Brought Relief.



MR. LORENZO LEDUC

8 Ottawa St., Hull, P.Q.

"Fruit-a-tives" is certainly a wonder. For a year, I suffered with Rheumatism; being forced to stay in bed for five months. I tried all kinds of medicine but without getting better; and thought I would never be able to walk again.

"One day while lying in bed, I read about 'Fruit-a-tives' the great fruit medicine; and it seemed just what I needed, so I decided to try it.

The first box helped me, and I took the tablets regularly until every trace of the Rheumatism left me.

I have every confidence in 'Fruit-a-tives' and strongly recommend them to every sufferer from Rheumatism".

FACETIOUS INDIVIDUAL APPLIES FOR EASY SITUATION, TO TRUSTEE CAMERON

Mr. G. O. Cameron, member of the Board of Education, received the following letter today:

Mr. G. O. Cameron,
Peterborough:

Dear Sir: I hereby make application for the position of gamekeeper on the park to be purchased by the Peterborough Board of Education in the near future. I have had twenty years' experience upon the reserves of Lord Skidaddle in the south of England and feel that I would be able to keep the wild beasts from straying into the city out of the woods surrounding the new school.

Rheumatism Every Winter

To be crippled by Rheumatism is to have life become an intolerable burden, especially in the winter, when the persistent cold and damp aggravate this complaint till it is almost unbearable.

Can you picture the dread that any man would hold winter in when all it meant to him was a yearly return of his Rheumatism and the agonizing pains that it brings?

Such was the case of Mr. A. Beaudry of Bedford, Que. Each winter he was forced to undergo the torture of Rheumatic pains, until he discovered Gin Pills. Read what he says about these little doctors:

> "Every winter I suffered from Rheumatism, and this is the first season I have been able to go through without a return of my old trouble—thanks to Gin Pills. The pills are all you claim for them, and more."

Testimony such as this should convince even the most skeptical that Gin Pills do remedy Kidney troubles.

If you have friends or relatives who suffer from this dread affliction, tell them to try Gin Pills. So many people have written us stating in glowing terms how Gin Pills have relieved them of Kidney troubles, that we are convinced that all any person needs to do in order to obtain relief is—try them.

Sold in every town, village, city, or hamlet for 60c a box.

Yesterday a good Maxwell —Today a Better One

More miles per gallon
More miles on tires

THAT is the policy of the Maxwell Motor Company.

It began five years ago on a single chassis plan and today 300,000 Maxwells have been built on this program.

Not 300,000 Maxwells identically alike for that would be admitting that the car has never improved in five years' time.

More than 1000 refinements have been made in the Maxwell.

But the original chassis plan was not changed. It has simply grown better as the days went by.

The logic of building one thing and thus building it well is too clear, too sound, too emphatic in results to argue against.

Like any fine piece of machinery the Maxwell seems to improve with age.

It runs on and on without end. We have never heard of a Maxwell salvaged.

There is no car with a better road ability record. And it saves many a thrifty dollar by shying at the repair shop.

This Maxwell you see today is not a new Maxwell; though many persons have thought so. It has been so much improved in appearance that our contemporaries in the trade repeatedly refer to it as the new Maxwell.

However, good looks have not in any way handicapped its running. And the latter is the main thing, after all, in a motor car.

GRANT & THORPÈ

Willard Service Station, 418 George Street, Peterboro

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO

Scotland, in 1726, and was a millwright by trade. In 1812 he left Scotland for America and settled in Deleware County, New York state, and remained there six years, working at his trade. While there he, true to his old country affiliations and bringing up, married a daughter of a Yorkshire farmer, who had come out to America. Three sons and three daughters followed on this union.

In 1818 he came to Canada, and located at Port Hope, (then known as Smith's Creek) worked at his trade and built a sawmill. When he came out from Scotland he had nearly $4,000.00 and lost nearly all of this in buildinng another sawmill, at Cobourg, for old Squire Henry.

First Child Born

He then located at what was afterwards to be known as Peterborough and in 1820 his daughter Jeanette was born, being the first child born in the place, at that time known as "Scott's Plains." Scott removed from the Plains in 1827 having lost all his property through getting debt to one John Brown of Port Hope, and located on the Hagerman farm, east of Port Hope. Two years after he again removed and settled in the township of Cavan where he died in 1838. His wife died at Scott's Plains, in 1825, of the fever of cholera that prevailed among the newly arrived immigrants of the Peter Robinson immigration. Shortly afterwards he was asked by Mr. Robinson to accept the position of immigration agent and to proceed to the Old Country and arrange for further movements of people to this part of Upper Canada, but doubting his abilities for the position he declined.

Incidents of his accomplishments are on record. He was an immensely strong man, standing six feet four inches in his stockings and of a weight of two hundred and sixty pounds. With perfect ease he could shoulder a barrel of salt or cider. It is on record of his having carried from Scott's Plains to Port Hope a heavy mill crank to be rebushed, tramping through the bush by the trail around the head of Rice Lake. He often crossed the river, to the ground now covered by the East Ward, on stilts, to reach his oxen which were at pasture on the flat, now Riverside Park.

Poison to Order

In the early days it was a common axiom incidental to settlement or location, that the first duty after erecting some sort of shelter was to dig a well and put in a pump. Scott did not need a well for he had water of the river flowing past his house. He did something else. He rigged up an impotent distillery in a small shed. In the absence of a "worm" of metal, in which to cool the vapors of distillation, the vapor was passed through a long series of wooden tubes, branches of a tree, bored out, and placed in a box and covered with water to hasten the cooling. The whiskey thus produced was the "original first." It had all sorts of impurities and through lacking in some of the said-to-be-higher qualities which even the taggleleg whiskies of the present are claimed to possess, was quite adequate for the purpose in view, to elevate and intoxicate and as surely and fatally as anything now on the market.

The First Survey.

Practically the site of the future city remained without population, with exception of a few officials appointed to direct immigration, which was expected and to lay out roads and lines and to locate such as arrived. The first survey of the immediate district was made by a surveyor named Chewett in 1917. Then was laid off the upper part of the township of North Monaghan and of Smith. A copy of this map of survey shows the locality with great fidelity. The site of the city, while not defined as such, or even as the after-to-be town, is indicated by the contour of the shore of the river and adjacent features. Three islands stood in the river, the first just below the bridge as now placed. These were covered with tall elms and shrubbery and grass and afforded good pasture to the few cattle browsing around. The river is marked as being the River Seebee and not the Otonabee. Possibly the original name is a corruption of the latter. Chemong Lake is lettered as "Koutechomong," a pretty fair guess to the now recognized name. It is noticeable that the survey in Smith shows what was afterwards called the "Communication Road", the straight stretch of road from the city of Bridgenorth. As this road bisects the whole of the lots in a distance of six miles, breaking up a methodical lay-out, it is seen that the road followed as closely as possible the ancient Indian trail from the lake down to the river. The trail is indicated as twisting around the hills to avoid the summits and ends after crossing the site of the city exactly at the shore of the river where the Gas Works are now situated. This part of the shore was beautifully covered with massive and far-reaching oaks. Possibly one or two still survive, and it was under these trees that the people of the Robinson immigration put up their rough shantys and cabins in which to pass the months of waiting while being located on the lands in the neighboring townships. Among the escarpment of the river on the side of the bank now covered by the Duffus Garage, other shellings were constructed. But the story of the immigration is quite another story and may further on be told.

In 1825 was undertaken the first minute survey and lay-out of the future town. This was done by Richard Birdsall, surveyor, and under the direction of Hon. Zacceheus Burnham to whom had been assigned the work of having the townships to be settled parcelled out. At the time of the survey it was expressed in words that it would be money wasted, as no one even fancied that the locality would reach importance, the "front" or lake shore locations having the preference. So that practically all of the site of the city was in a state of nature as late as 1912. Following the influx of the Robinson immigrants things began to look up. Many who to whom a live of the forest and its attendant hardships did not appeal put up such structures as they could build and fell to to carry on trades and occupations. To complete the city archives a copy of the map of the Birdsall survey has been had, together with copies of the field notes, which latter form a running comment on the character of the ground in the now city borders, as the case presented itself to Mr. Birdsall. He makes remarks that though quaint are illuminating. For instance, writing of the character of the ground in what is now the very heart of the city, the corners of Hunter and George streets he observes that the ground is low and marshy, often flooded from the creek, practically worthless. To look at it now one would not realize the change that gradually was brought about. In the early days property was of course cheap. Many of the lots now fronting on George street in the business centre were bought at the upset price of $30.00 for a half-acre. The fairly valuable lot on which the Lock works stands was bought for $35.00. The southeast corner of George and Hunter streets now covered by the Bank of Toronto building and those adjoining, as far south as the store of Connal & Co. and as far east as the Higgins Hardware store, was offered to Robert Reid of Douro, as a gift and Mr. Reid declined to accept it. Saying that from its situation and condition it was worthless. Mr. Reid's opinion seems to have had corroberative impressions, for a year after it was purchased for a fanning mill, by Thomas Harper, who built himself a small house that for many years stood on the lane behind the business blocks on George street, the ground being covered by the Times office workrooms. It may be of interest to add, as illustrating the permanence of the old-fashioned timber frame construction of buildings, that the said fanning mill was made in the venerable building that now stands on the corner of George and Brock streets, long known as the Commercial Hotel. It was put up to be used to make fanning mills, rakes and farm implements of wood. It stood on the ground, about the elevation of the top of the windows of the store underneath. That was the ground level of George street at the date indicated. When the hill was cut through to reduce the grade of the street, the building was left stranded, high up and isolated, on the top of the bank. Afterwards it was propped up, the material underneath removed, the stone walls that now support it built and the structure entered on a new lease of usefulness and a hostle for the weary and a solace to the thirsty.

It may be added that the ground level of George street at the corner of Hunter street in 1928 was seven feet lower than it now shows. Nothing but a swamp and morass, flooded by the creek each spring overflow. Buried deep in the soil, are the logs used to form a corduroy road that crossed the line of the streets. These logs are uncovered from time to time as municipal improvements call for excavation. Standing in the doorway of the Review office in May, 1814 Mr. Frank Weir, (since deceased) said to the writer while looking across Hunter street. "I was taken by my mother, as a small boy, to pick berries where the Oriental Hotel now stands in 1826. His father had preceded the family into Otonabee. They had reached Scott's Plains by a scow up the river and wagon from the Yankee Bonnet to the small hotel building that stood where the post office now stands, and after getting a meal, strolled through the bushes along the border of the creek, coming out near the line of Simcoe street and back to the hotel. From 1826 to 1916 is a long call. But is not the span of life as we call it, really longer than we take it to be.

ROBBING A RAT TRAP

Chemong Indian Takes Drastic Measures With White Man.

Chemong, May 3.—Mrs. J. H. Demmier was here for two weeks to see her sick grandmother, Mrs. Dan Whetung, sr., and found her no better but rather weaker than two months ago. She left last Monday for her home at Pittsburgh P.A.

The rat trappers were much excited this spring, as the price was so high. One Indian of this village had suspected that some one was meddling his traps. This was on Saturday. Sunday morning, bright and early, he starts away to watch his traps. He got there and got behind a bush. He was not there many minutes till a white man came to see if there were any rats in the traps. He saw there was so he walks out on to the log to get the rat out of the trap and as he was walking the watcher shouted out "What luck this morning?" The rat dropped out of his hand, and the Indian made the white man put back the rat where he got it. The white man had to obey and while the white man was on the log the Indian went to meet him and gave him the Indian foot and knocked him off the log into the ice cold water. A Sunday's cold bath for a Smith township man; ha! ha!

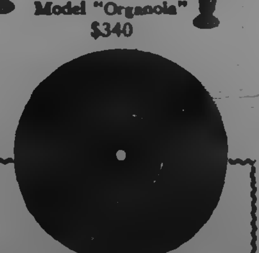
Model "Organola" $340



The Only One With Organ Pipes

A credit to Canadian ingenuity and Canadian skill. The only musical instrument of its kind in the world equipped with tone control resonating pipes which include every note in the scale. That Phonograph is the

"Phonola" REGISTERED

Declared by experts to be the most wonderful improvement in Talking Machines since the beginning of the industry.

Records played on this "Organola" Model are given a really wonderful reproduction. Play a "sextette" record on the "Organola" Model, and you will have a real idea of the value of the tone control pipes. There is none of that confused blurring as when played on ordinary makes of phonograph, the tone control pipes of the "Organola" Model separating the different voices and notes, giving a pure, clear, lifelike rendition.

We take pleasure in announcing to the public that in the future the Phonola will be equipped with a new Universal Seamless Tapered tone arm which does away with all attachments. The entire arm is beautifully designed and finished, and is a marked contrast to the cheap dye cast arms seen on other makes of Phonographs.

It is the only Universal tone arm that is scientifically designed and the only one that will play all makes of records perfectly.

The Phonola will also be equipped with a new Aluminum Reproducer fitted with a special insulated rubber connection which eliminates metallic sounds from being transmitted to the Amplifier.

Equipped with these two new devices, the Phonola takes another step in advance of all competitors as furnishing the truest, clearest and sweetest tone it is possible to reproduce.

"Phonolas" from $25 to $340.

Hear Them

There's a new list of selections each month. They are played with a sapphire point. No needles to change. Beautiful, clear, "Phonola" records that are practically indestructible.

Opportunity for Retail Merchants

THE next few years will mark a tremendous change in the business of retailing.

Motor Transportation, now reduced to a low-cost basis must revolutionize local trading just as Railroad Transportation revolutionized national trading.

As men everywhere grasp this idea, as they seize the opportunity for business growth that now presents itself, the retail business will be operated on a higher, more efficient plane. The public will be better served. Larger and more varied stocks will be offered for sale. Better and bigger stores will appear.

The Ford One-Ton Truck makes available this opportunity. It is Motor Transportation at low cost—low first cost, low maintenance cost, low operating cost.

A small outlay will motorize your deliveries and open to you the opportunity for business expansion.

Complete Trucks— Two Standard Bodies

Ordinary hauling and delivery work can be best adapted to two standard types—the Stake Body and Express Body.

These two body types are kept in stock ready for immediate delivery. They insure the maximum efficiency from the Ford Truck. They give the buyer of a Ford Truck the recognized benefits of Ford production.

Both types have the Enclosed Cab with the two-way windshield which gives the driver proper protection from the weather.

See these complete trucks. Seize the opportunity to enlarge your field of business. Let us solve your delivery problem.

JOIN THE HOST OF RED-BLOODED MEN AND WOMEN

Get More Pleasure Out of Life and be of More Use in the World by Toning Up Your System With Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

There are many people who lack the red blood to give color to their lips, warmth to their hands and brightness to their eyes.

These people tire easily and cannot compete in school, in store, or shop or factory with the more energetic red-blooded people. Their blood being thin they are nervous and do not sleep well. Arising in the morning after an unrefreshing sleep, they begin the day badly and miss much of the pleasure of living.

these people need a blood building

To become active and energetic tonic. A tonic that gives new strength that restores the nerves, increases the appetite and aids digestion, will put color in the cheeks and lips and give vigor to the steps. That means new joy in living, increased usefulness and longer life.

Wherever you find a person who has taken Dr. Williams' Pink Pills faithfully you find an enthusiastic friend of the tonic that has made life mean more in many ways. These blood making pills have been used for many years throughout Canada, and in almost every community, however small, can be found those who owe health and happiness to this famous household remedy.

WEAK AND NERVOUS

One who owes present health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is Miss Bibiane Chiasson, South Beach, Que., who says:—"I am a teacher by profession and probably due to the close confinement and arduous nature of my duties, I became much run down and suffered from extreme nervousness. The least noise would startle me, and my heart would beat violently. Indeed my condition was an unhappy one. I had often heard of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a cure for nervous troubles and decided to give them a fair trial. I am happy to say that this medicine completely restored my health, and I can confidently recommend it to all suffering from nervous troubles."

Indigestion Cured

Mrs M. Kelly, Windsor, Ont., says: "I suffered from indigestion for several years, and although I was constantly taking doctor's prescriptions, they did not cure me, and the result was that I was greatly run down and always feeling poorly. Finally I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and as I soon found they were helping me I continued their use until I was fully cured, and am now able to properly digest any food I take. As a tonic and blood-builder I know of no medicine to equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I recommend them to all in need of a medicine."

THIN AND BLOODLESS

Among the thousands of women who bear testimony to the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is Mrs. W. Ferguson, Plattsville, Ont., who says: "After the birth of my second baby I was left very weak and was steadily growing thinner and more bloodless. As time went on I became so run down that my friends thought I was in a decline. I tried different medicines but none helped me until I was advised to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I began taking them and was not long in finding that they were helping me, and by the time I had taken a half dozen boxes I felt like a new person. I had increased in weight, my color returned and I was again enjoying my old-time health. You may be sure when opportunity offers I will gladly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

RHEUMATISM CURED

Among the rheumatic sufferers who have been cured by the use of this medicine is Mrs. Wm. Johnston, Chatham, Ont., who says: "Some years ago, while living in Mount Forest, I was striken with inflammatory rheumatism, from which I suffered terrible agony. Neither the doctor who attended me, nor the remedies I tried, gave more than a little relief for a time and as a consequence I grew very weak and was on the verge of nervous prostration. At this stage an uncle advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, as they had cured him of a severe attack of rheumatism. I took his advice and faithfully used the pills for several months when I found myself fully restored to health, with every vestige of the rheumatism and every symptom of the nerve trouble gone. I have had no return of either trouble since, and feel very grateful for what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills did for me."

WEAK AND ANAEMIC

The correction of anaemic conditions by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is as certain as anything in medical sciences. Miss Jessie McLean, Trenton, N.S., says:—"I was as weak as it was possible for any one to be, and yet be able to go about. My blood seemed to have turned almost to water. I was pale, the least exertion would leave me breathless and when I went up stairs I would have to stop and rest on the way. I often had severe headaches, and at times my heart would palpitate alarmingly. A good friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I have reason to be grateful that I took the advice. Soon after beginning the use of the pills I began to get stronger and by the time I had taken seven boxes I felt that I was again enjoying good health. I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a blessing to weak girls and I shall always warmly recommend them."

AFTER INFLUENZA

Mrs. Thos. Covert, R.R. No. 2, Bancroft, Ont., says:—"Following an attack of grippe I was left very weak and miserable. My appetite was poor, I suffered from headaches, my skin was sallow, and two boils broke out. I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and had only used a few boxes when I felt as well as ever. They drove all the impurities from my blood, gave me a good appetite and I have since enjoyed the best of health. I can recommend the pills to anyone suffering from impure blood or skin disease."

By building up the blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure all that group of troubles due to weak watery blood. Among these may be mentioned anaemia, rheumatism, indigestion, neuralgia, pimples and eruptions, and that always tired feeling that comes from weak blood, even where there may be no more pronounced symptoms of ill-health. Take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a tonic if you are not in the best physical condition and cultivate resistance that will keep you well and strong. You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The HOT SPOT Chalmers is the One Car of the Day

Sales are climbing fast. From coast to coast the movement is toward Chalmers.

Today this car is on a production basis at the factory that Chalmers executives little expected to occur even in July.

Why is this?

The answer is "Hot Spot." For this simple but really magnificent device does a trick in the use of gas that is almost beyond belief.

It "smashes up" raw gas, "pulverizes" it, makes it "fine as dust," so that you can get every last bit of power out of gas.

Then the great Ram's-horn rushes it gently but quickly through "easy air bends" to the cylinders, and what is the result?

Not only high power from a low-grade gas, but an even, soft flow of power that rests your nerves, saves your tires, and gives you a new and rare delight in driving.

Please don't miss this present day Chalmers. It's the one car of the day.

THE GODS OF MARS

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Ten minutes later we were speeding through the [illegible] Hastor, prepared to strike the first blow for the preservation of Dejah Thoris.

Two hours after leaving my palace in Helium, or about midnight, Kantos Kan and I arrived at Hastor. Carthoris, Tars Tarkas and Hor Vastus had gone directly to Thark upon another cruiser.

The transports were to get under way immediately and move slowly south. The fleet of battleships would overtake them on the morning of the second day.

"A thorn!" whispered Tars Tarkas.

At Hastor we found all in readiness, and so perfectly had Kantos Kan planned every detail of the campaign that within ten minutes of our arrival the first of the fleet had soared aloft from its deck. And thereafter, at the rate of one a second, the great ships floated gracefully out into the night to form a long, thin line which stretched for miles toward the south.

The expedition could yet do much besides rescuing Dejah Thoris if it could but teach the people of Barsoom the facts of the cruel deception that had been worked upon them for countless ages and thus save thousands each year from the horrid fate that awaited them at the conclusion of the voluntary pilgrimage.

If it could open to the red men the fair valley Dor it would have accomplished much, and in the land of lost souls, between the mountains of Otz and the ice barrier, were many broad acres that needed no irrigation to bear rich harvests.

Here at the bottom of a dying world was the only naturally productive area upon its surface. Here alone were dews and rains; here alone was an [illegible] sea; here was water in plenty—and all this was but the stamping [illegible] of fierce brutes, and from its [illegible] and fertile expanse the [illegible] remnants of two once mighty races barred all the other millions of Barsoom.

Could I but succeed in once breaking down the barrier of religious superstition which had kept the red races from this El Dorado it would be a fitting memorial to the immortal virtues of my princess—I should have again served Barsoom, and Dejah Thoris' martyrdom would not have been in vain.

Nothing Shall Stay Me Now Short of Death.

On the morning of the second day we raised the great fleet of transports and their consorts at the first flood of dawn and soon were near enough to exchange signals.

I may mention here that radio-aerograms are seldom if ever used in war time or for the transmission of secret dispatches at any time, for as often as one nation discovers a new cipher or invents a new instrument for wireless purposes its neighbors bend every effort until they are able to intercept and translate the messages.

For so long a time has this gone on that practically every possibility of wireless communication had been exhausted, and no nation dares transmit dispatches of importance in this way.

Tars Tarkas reported all well with the transports. The battleships passed through to take an advanced position and the combined fleets moved slowly over the ice cap, hugging the surface closely to prevent detection by the therns whose land we were approaching.

Far in advance of all a thin line of one man air scouts protected us from surprise, and on either side they flanked us, while a smaller number brought up the rear some twenty miles behind the transports.

In this formation we had progressed toward the entrance to Omean for several hours when one of our scouts returned from the front to report that the conelike summit of the entrance was in sight. At almost the same instant another scout from the left flank came racing toward the flagship.

His very speed bespoke the importance of his information. Kantos Kan and I awaited him upon the little forward deck which corresponds with the bridge of earthly battleships. Scarcely had his tiny flier come to rest upon the broad landing deck of the flagship ere he was bounding up the stairway to the deck where we stood.

"A great fleet of battleships south-southeast, my prince!" he cried. "There must be several thousands of them, and they are bearing down directly upon us."

MISS OLIVE MOORE
With the "Macushla" Company at the Grand on Friday, May 9th.

MODERN IRISH PLAY IS GROSS LIBEL ON THE RACE

Barry McCormack Says Outlandish Costumes, Brogues and Informers Are Out of Date.

Barry McCormack, the young Irish star, who comes to the Grand Opera House on Friday, May 9th, in "Macushla", believes that the day of the old fashioned Irish play has gone.

"No country in the world has advanced more than Ireland," says Mr. McCormack, "and I cannot see why the dramatists insist on writing Irish plays of a century back. To see the average drama in which the scenes are set in the Emerald Isle one would think that the Irishman hadn't advanced one bit in a hundred years. He is always represented as wearing knickerbockers and 'square cuts', he talks with a villainous brogue, he is either a 'hero' who is fighting the Government or a 'villain' who must be an 'informer.' To look at him one is sure that he lives on potatoes and sour milk alone. To hear him one is sure that he never went to school. Now that's all wrong. That kind of an Irishman has no more place on the modern stage than a caveman—that is if he is expected to make any kind of an appeal of his audience.

"When I made up my mind to resume my starring career in Irish plays I determined to put into effect my life long theory that the public wanted a modern hero as well as a modern villain, a modern story told in a modern way. I insisted that Rida Johnson Young's play "Macushla" should be brought absolutely up to date and the first thing I did was to discard the old fashioned 'kickers' and the rest of the obsolete costumes and impress my company with the fact that the gentlemen and ladies of Ireland get the latest fashions from London and Paris even before Fifth Avenue.

"That I am not alone in this view was most gratifyingly shown only the other day when so eminent a [illegible] as David Belasco produced a new Irish play at his own theatre in New York and dressed all his characters in up to date clothes.

"The day of the 'informer' on the stage has gone. The Irish question is being handled by the Irish with the English Government by diplomacy nowadays and the sneaking villain so dear to the theatre-goer of a generation ago is no more. The purpose of the Irish Drama of today is not to foment trouble or stir dissension, but to picture the romance, the poetry, the delicious humor that have always characterized the men and women of my native land—for though I was brought up in New York, I shall always be proud of the fact that I was born in County Cavan of the clan of McCormack.

Someone asked me the other day if I couldn't think of something more original than a horse race as the central action of my play "Macushla." I replied that as long as the Irish remained the thoroughbreds they are and have ever been, nothing would appeal to the hearts of the lovers of good Irish drama more than a good horserace fairly one and that when an Irishman had won a fair horse race and the girl of his heart at the same time he had risen to the pinnacle of achievement on the stage or off. And, if I may be so bold as to again couple my name with that of Mr. Belasco, he too has staged his new play about the winning of a race and as in the case of "Macushla," named the play after the horse. So here's to the health of those two blessed little thoroughbreds—"Macushla" and "Dark Rosa[illegible]

MUTT AND JEFF HERE NEXT WEEK

HEROES OF FAMOUS CARTOONS AT GRAND SATURDAY, MAY 10

This season's Mutt and Jeff, the Bud Fisher Musical Comedy Success which is scheduled to appear at the Grand Opera House for Saturday.

Matinee and Night, May 10, finds the two famous Characters out West. In order to secure a gold mine, Jeff must marry a widow, and for a time is envolved in trouble. However, thanks to Mutt, everything is righted.

Gus Hill has this season surrounded these two famous characters with a company of talented musical comedy artists. There are 14 young and handsome girls in the chorus, none being over 19 years of age. The musical numbers are all new and consist of a variety of catchy airs. The prices which never change are $1.00, 75c, 50c, and 25c. Seats go on sale Thursday.

TOO FAT TO FIGHT REX BEACH'S BEST

SEE PICTURES AND ALL-STAR VAUDEVILLE AT GRAND NEXT WEK

Rex Beach's best is "Too Fat to Fight," in addition to the all-star vaudeville program, at the Grand Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

"Too Fat to Fight," the Rex Beach Picture produced for Goldwyn, comes to the Grand Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday with Frank McIntyre in the featured role. The combination of Rex Beach as the author of a patriotic drama and the acting of Frank McIntyre is sure to make a sensation.

Rex Beach has cast Frank McIntyre for the role of Norman Dairymple a former football star now known as "Dimples" because of his excessive fat. He is laughed at by his friends and good-naturedly scorned by Helen Brewster, the girl he loves. Every branch of the service has turned poor "Dimples" down and "too fat to fight" has come to mean worse than death to him. I'd give a leg if I could be over there with the boys." he says.

Finally a man who is raising a million dollars for the Y.M.C.A. is instrumental in getting "Dimples" into that splendid work. He proves himself a hero every minute of the long days and nights. Then he remembers nothing until a French officer stoops to pin a decoration on his still expansive bosom as he lies in a base hospital.

In addition to this great picture the vaudeville will be one of the best to visit Peterboro headed by T. D. Pepple and M. Greenuald, radium of splendor, "The Revue De Vogue." There is no other act in vaudeville of like kind. This can be accounted for by the lavishness displayed by the superproducers. The scenery comprises of thirteen different changes and the original Chicago Company of 12 people—as the title would indicate the costumes are actually the latest creation on saxtorial art.

As an added attraction Ella La Vall, the wonder aerial artist, will close the program. Miss La Vall was two years with the great Barnum & Bailey Circus and either one of these big acts are worth the price of admission alone. Seats reserved for the evening performances in advance.

"LONG LANE'S TURNING" WALTHALL'S NEW PICTURE FROM RECENT BEST SELLER

Hallie Erminie Rives, whose novel "The Long Lane's Turning," has been dramatized for the screen for Henry B. Walthall is one of the most popular and sensational writers of the day.

Miss Rives was born in Christian County, Kentucky, in 1878, and is a cousin of the equally well-known author, Amelie Rives, who carried Prince Troubetzkoy after her divorce from John Armstrong Chanler the eccentric New York millionaire.

Hallie Erminie Rives is a most prolific writer, her novels numbering over twenty, all of which have had wide circulation. Among the best known of her works are: "A Furnace of Earth," "Smoking Flax," "Hearts Courageous," "Satan Sanderson," "The Valiants of Virginia" and "The Long Lane's Turning," the last named being published in 1917 by Dodd, Mead & Company.

"The Long Lane's Turning" achieved remarkable popularity and is listed among the best sellers of the day. Its dramatic possibilities appealed so strongly to Mr. Walthall that he requested a dramatization for his use. The picture is released by Exhibitors Mutual. At the Empire Theatre this afternoon and evening. A large and delighted audience saw this renowned picture last night.

SPECIAL SONG SERVICE

Will be given in Gospel Hall on Sunday evening beginning at a quarter to seven. This will give an opportunity to all to take part before the regular hour of evening service. After the singing is finished Mr. G. W. Mulligan will give an address on "The Fatal Force of Words." All are invited. A short cheery service.

COULD HARDLY WALK ON ACCOUNT OF RHEUMATISM—GAINS 18 POUNDS BY TAKING TANLAC.

"I would willingly have given five hundred dollars if necessary for the wonderful good Tanlac has done me," said M. Gratz, a well-known baker, who lives at 109 W. Montgomery St., Spokane, a few days ago.

"For more than twelve years," he continued, "I suffered all the tortures of rheumatism and all the misery that goes with a bad case of stomach trouble. My feet and ankles were so badly swollen and the pain so severe I could hardly walk, and my arms were so stiff and drawn that I would have to get somebody to help put on my coat. I also suffered with the worst sort of pains in my back and hips, and I hardly ever got any sound sleep.

"I had a bad case of stomach trouble also, and all my food soured and made me miserable for hours after eating. I have often gone for forty-eight hours without eating a bite—was afraid to try it.

"Eight years ago I gave up my home and business in Pendleton, Oregon, and went to California seeking health, and I later made two trips to the Catalina Islands, a widely-known health resort, hoping that I might get some relief from my suffering there. I honestly believe I have taken a wagon load of different kinds of medicine, but nothing ever reached my trouble until I took Tanlac. Actually three bottles of this medicine has done what all these other things failed to do. I have no rheumatism now—not a sign of it; my appetite is as good as it ever was, and nothing I eat hurts me. Why I can eat cabbage now without any bad after effects. Every night when I go to bed I know that I am going to get a good night's sleep. I have gained eighteen pounds, am as well and hearty as I ever was in my life and am working ten or twelve hours every day. Tanlac is certainly a blessing to all suffering humanity, and I am more than glad to recommend it to everybody."

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Eddie Ainsmith Now Believes That He Has the Real Secret of Handling the Bat.

Up to the time Eddie Ainsmith faced Eddie Cicotte for a starter in the Detroit half of the sixth inning of Tuesday's game the White Sox pitcher had held the Tigers hitless and had a chance for another of his specialties, a no-hit game.

The little twirler was working his spitter to advantage and had the Tigers popping out and driving weak ones into the ground. He had permitted but one ball to go to the outfield, Bobby Jones' high one to Leibold in the fourth.

After that brand of pitching for five innings some were anxious for him to pull through without allowing a Tiger safety. But in that sixth Ainsmith shot a single just out of Risberg's reach and that broke the spell Cicotte had over the Detroit batsmen. The Sox won 3 to 1, but the Tigers got three more hits.

Ainsmith Ambitious

A year ago the Six twirler might at least have passed by Ainsmith without having his record spoiled. Eddie never was very dangerous at bat, a .200 hitter, is the way he used to refer to himself. But it is different now; he's on his way to a .250 batting mark for the season, he insists. That is the lowest he will be contented with, and he says he may go higher. He's been batting well so far.

The new Tiger catcher made his resolve the first day he watched Ty Cobb at bat during a practice game on the spring trip.

"I've got the wrong style, fellows," Ainsmith anounced to several of the Tigers that afternoon. "I like Ty's short snappy swing, and am going to bat that way. No more .200 averages for me; I'm out to graduate into the .250 class this summer."

So day after day during the exhibition games the catcher seldom took his eyes off Cobb when the outfielder was up, practicing an abbreviated swift swing from the shoulder [illegible] instead of a long sweep from far behind. He began getting results immediately and had little trouble batting against Brave pitchers.

Eddie also has been going well against American league pitching, having a .433 mark for the first four games. All of his hits have been sharp drives of the Cobb brand, too.

Cobb does swing differently than most hard hitters. No one follows through any farther than he does, but he keeps his bat almost in front of him when the pitcher is winding up and then brings it back to his shoulder when about to hit.

That Follow Through

By starting his bat from this position he undoubtedly gets more accuracy, and it also probably helps him to chop balls through the infield or into vacant sectors of the outfield. It may keep him from pulling in as many long drives into right as some left-handed batters do, but he gets more hits than the others.

Anyhow, Ty is probably satisfied and Ainsmith will not go back to his old style, at least not for the present.

Oh, yes! Eddie also walks to the plate with three bats, pumping them over the right and then the left shoulder. Of course, that part may be due to superstition, so prevalent among ball players.

CHILD WONDERS ARE COMING TO THE FRONT IN ATHLETICS

Youths of Tender Years Are Carrying Off the Honors in Championship Contests.

Youth is being served particulary well this season. The youngsters have handed old Pop Time the shock of his old life during the last year or so. And now comes Vincent Richards, a seventeen-year-old youth who wins the national indoor tennis title from that excellent and experienced player, Tilden, of Philadelphia.

A boyish face appears among the ranks of the champion ice skaters this winter also. Charley Jewstraw comes out of the east heralded as the coming ice king of America. At Lake Placid, N.Y., young Charley swept everything before him, winning every championship up to three miles. What is more remarkable, he never lost a heat, a semi-final, or a final. He was not even extended though competing with the best speedsters from New York, Boston, Toronto, Montreal, Milwaukee, Chicago, Pittsburg, and other cities. Just wait until this chap grows up! Watch him in the international indoor ice skating meet this month in Chicago.

Everybody has heard of young Bobby Jones, who at the age of fourteen startled the golfing world and the golf champions by his high class play in the amateur championship in 1916, driving over 300 years, playing long irons with wonderful effect, and employing the cut shot with a mashie as well as any star in the tournament. Young Jones played a round of 72 over the Merion course, a mark that was not beaten in the tournament.

Miss Alexa Stirling, women's golf champion of America at the age of eighteen and undoubtedly the finest woman player in many ways that America has ever produced, showed exceptional promise when only fifteen years old.

Ralph Greenleaf, now eighteen years old, gave Frank Taberski, pool champion, a might close run for the title when only sixteen years old.

Greenleaf has played Taberski once or twice since, and although he has never been fortunate enough to win the title, he was unquestionably established himself as next in rank to the champion. And, let us add, if Taberski was not one of the [illegible] pocket-billiard champions the game has known, young Greenleaf might be wearing the crown today.

Each summer brings its quota of youthful swimming phenoms. The gentler sex particularly produces a bevy of swimmers who splash past records with startling speed. Gertrude Artelt, fifteen and a champion, Olga Dorfner, the Smith twins from Ohio, and little Miss Wainwright, a diver from Rye, are a few of the mermaids now in the limelight.

Among the ball players are many excellent youngsters who come up for trial in the spring, but usually are sent back to the minors for further experience and seasoning rather than lack of ability. "Pep" Young, the Giants' star right fielder, is only twenty years old now. He joined them two years ago, winning a regular position on the team at the age of nineteen.

Boxing is a severe sport, yet it is remarkable how successful mere boys can be with the gloves. Today we have "Kewpie" Ertle, a little cherub of twenty, who is now practically "through" after reaching the top of his class. Kid Williams, a tough little tow-head, won and lost the bantam title before he cast his first vote. So did Frankie Neil. Terry McGovern was at his best at nineteen and Eddie Hanlon of Frisco met such men as Battling Nelson, Abe Attel and Young Corbett in twenty round fights at the age of seventeen.

Sporting Gossip

One of the most gifted of the graduates of the Illinois-Iowa-Indianna (commonly called the Three-I) League is Larruping Larry Doyle, who for many seasons has been one of the stars of the National Circuit. In the uniform of the New York Giants Mr. Lawrence Doyle has made a brilliant record as a second baseman and a nifty swatsmith. Larry was born at Caseyville, Ill.—which may or may not have been named after the well-known Casey of "at the bat" fame—that interesting event having taken place some 34 years ago. As a lad he toiled in the coal mines of Illinois, playing ball on Sundays with a back-lot club. Tom Kinsella, owner of the Springfield club of the Three-I, is given the credit for the discovery of Doyle.

The latter began his career with the club of the Illinois capital city about thirteen years ago. In 1907 he developed so rapidly that he fairly set the league on fire, and he was the sensation of the circuit. The fame of Doyle was spread abroad and reached the ears of one John McGraw, who has a very keen ear when the conversation turns to baseball phenoms. McGraw himself, incidentally, had once played with the Illinois and Iowa League in a Cedar Rapids uniform. Springfield parted with Doyle in consideration of the sum of $4500 cash in hand paid. At first the big town made Larry nervous, and he didn't particularly distinguish, but he soon hit his stride.

In 1909, after a course of McGraw schooling, Larry made a record that was the talk of balldom and he put to shame those who had "knocked" him just because he didn't start off with a rush. Since then Doyle has earned the reputation of being one of the best second basemen in the league and his stick-work was good when it was most needed.

The Pittsburg Pirates will celebrated the thirty-second birthday of their club, on April 30, 1887, the day the Smoky City aggregation climbed aboard the National League ship. The management of that league had experimented with clubs in Hartford, Syracuse, Troy, Worcester and other minor-league cities before they saw the possibility of [illegible] in the western Pennsylvania metropolis. Since then other clubs have come and gone, but the Pirates have stuck by the ship.

Pittsburg had its first league ball in 1877, when the International Association was organized with clubs in a number of American and Canadian towns. Pittsburg's pioneer professional club was called the Alleghanys. The city first got on the minor league map in 1882, when the American Association was launched, with clubs in Pittsburg, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Louisville. Pittsburg didn't succeed in landing the pennant in either the Internatioal or Americans associations and it remained for the National Leaguers to bring home the flag.

During their first six annums the Pirates were a humble crew and satisfied with second-division berths. In 1893 they made a noise like pennant contenders and finished second to Boston. Then followed another slump of six weary years when the Buccaneers were also-rans. In 1900, which was the year Barney Dreyfuss took charge of the club and Frederick C. Clarke and "Homus" Wagner appeared in Pirate uniforms, Pittsburg finished second, and in 1901 the Pirates breezed out in front. Fred Clarke's great machine captured three straight pennants, and repeated the performance in 1909. From tha time on and until about 1916 the Pirates were always in the running, and for fourteen years straight always finished in the first division.

SNOW—BIDMEADE.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Scott, King street, Omemee was the scene of a very pretty May wedding on Thursday afternoon when their ward, Miss Lillian Bidmeade, became the bride of Mr. Reginald L. Snow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Snow of "The Bluff", Judhaven, Muskoka.

To the sweet strains of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin, played by Miss Amy Parsons, the bride, a vision of girlish beauty in her simple wedding gown of ivory silk with embroidered panels and ornamented by her bridal veil with conventional wreath of orange blossoms, wearing the groom's gift, a wheat spray of pearls and carrying a sheaf of white carnations and pale pink rose buds entered the drawing room leaning on the arm of her guardian, Mr. Scott and stood under an arch from which hung a dainty wedding bell of white wreathed in maiden hair fern. The young couple took the vows in the presence of a few immediate friends, the ceremony being conducted by the Rev D. Clare of Warsaw.

After all had partaken of the dainty wedding luncheon. Mr. and Mrs. Snow left on the 5 o'clock train amid showers of confetti and good wishes for a brief honeymoon to be spent in Toronto, Niagara Falls and points west, the bride travelling in a suit of nigger brown with hat and shoes to match.

There were many and beautiful wedding gifts, among them being a handsome silver tea service from Mr. and Mrs. Snow, sr., and their son, Royle.

MAJOR THOMPSON OF OTTAWA PREACHES AT ST. PAUL'S SUNDAY

Occasion Marks the Eighty-Sixth Anniversary of a Congregation That in all That Time Has Had Only Three Pastors—Brief History of its Growth From the Beginning.

The anniversary services in connection with St. Paul's Presbyterian church, of which Rev. R. Pogue is minister, will be held tomorrow, May 4th, and will be conducted by the Rev. (Major) T. J. Thompson, M.A., of Ottawa. The "Presbyterian", speaking recently of a visit of Mr. Thompson to Sherbrooke, Quebec, said: "The stirring messages of this cultured preacher will long be remembered by the large gatherings present. Mr Thompson was overseas with the rank of major, and saw service with our troops at Gallipoli and Egypt."

He will give an illustrated lecture in the church on Monday evening, May 5th at eight o'clock on "The White Man's Burden in Egypt."

REV. MR. POGUE.

Mr. Martin B. Chenhall will preside at the organ on Sunday at both services, and special music, under his direction, will be given by the choir. Mr. Chenhall came from Newcastle England to the United States about fourteen years ago. He was an instructor for a time in Cornell University, then head of the music of Evansville High school, Indiana. Lately he has been organist in the Methodist church, Cobourg.

The anniversary services, which will be observed tomorrow, complete 86 years of the congregation's history. It was in the spring of 1833 that the Rev. John Morrice Roger, the first minister of the church, came to Peterboro and gathered together a small congregation here and on the boundary of Cavan, near Springville. A small building was erected on Aylmer street, north of King street, for the use of those meeting at Peterboro. It was not, however, until October 12th, 1834, that the first elders were chosen. They were Andrew Tully, John Hutchison, M.D., John Edmison and David Hamilton. These men were duly set apart to the office on Nov. 2nd, 1834. On the 22nd of Jan., 1835, the Presbytery sanctioned the appointment and the kirk session of Peterboro was recognized and authorized to conduct all competent business in the congregation. Following this an enrolment of the members of the church took place, and arrangements made for the observance of the first communion on Feb. 30th 1835. Rev. Mr. Rogers served the congregation until 1875, when, owing to ill health he resigned in October of that year, having served His Master faithfully and diligently for 33 years. He became pastor emeritus of the congregation and kept in close touch with his flock until Jan. 6th, 1878, when, while conducting family worship in his home, he suddenly passed into the immediate presence of Him whom he had served throughout his long life.

Rev. E. F. Torrence, D.D., was the second minister of the church, and served from 1876 to 1907. Great progress was made during his ministry. The membership increased from 368 to 780. The contributions to ordinary revenue from $2,600 to $5,600, and the contributions to missionary objects from $1,128 to $2,873. The present minister, Rev. R. Pogue, was inducted December 5th, 1907. There has been steady advance in the work of the church during these years. The membership is now 1045. The grand total of the congregation's giving for congregational, missionary and philanthropic objects was over $20,000 last year. The congregation supports a missionary, Rev. D. A. Macdonald, in Korea. One of its members, Miss Maud Ack'son, has recently completed her training in the Toronto Deaconess' Home. She has been appointed by the Foreign Mission Committee to Formosa as her field of labor. She will be set apart to this work early in the fall of the present year and will immediately set sail for Formosa.

Over 160 of the young men of the congregation enlisted for service overseas, 31 of whom paid the supreme sacrifice, and will come home no more. The public and especially the returned soldiers are cordially invited to attend the anniversary services tomorrow, and hear the messages of the Rev. Major Thompson.

AT ST. JAMES' CHURCH.

BELGIANS WILL SIGN TREATY OF PEACE UNDER PROTEST

Will Insist That Allies Assure That Country That All Damage Done Her by Germans During War Shall Be Paid For in Full.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Brussels, May 5. The Belgian Government has decided to sign the treaty of peace under protest, which was discussed at a Crown Council held here last night. It is announced.

The Council met at the Palace at eight o'clock and was in session till midnight. Paul Rymans, Minister of Foreign Affairs and head of the Belgian delegation at the Peace Conference expressed the opinion that the treaty as it now stands gave honorable and satisfactory terms to Belgium and recommended that it should be signed.

The Council unanimously endorsed M. Hymans' view but was equally unanimous in expressing the opinion that the attention of the powers should be drawn to the financial and economic situation in Belgium and to necessity that the allies assure Belgium of complete support looking to her economic restoration.

ITALY'S STATUS MAY BE FORFEIT

IF THAT NATION DECIDES TO REMAIN AWAY FROM CONFERENCE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 5.—The status of Italy as one of the five great powers has been brought into question by her withdrawal from the Peace Conference and it is this status which is proving a powerful lever in inducing Italy to accept the invitation of the Council of Three to resume her place at the peace tables. The treaty of peace makes repeated reference to the five great powers as the final authority in regulating many subjects and this provision would have to be changed to "four great powers" in case Italy remained out of the conference.

SOFIA IN REVOLT AGAINST DYNASTY

SON OF EX-KING FERDINAND IN BAD FAVOR WITH PEOPLE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, May 5.—A rebellion against on Coburg dynasty at Sofia is reported in a despatch to the Acht Uhr Abendblatt. sanguinary fighting has been going on between Government troops and the revolutionists who demand a Soviet Government. Ferdinand, former King of Bulgaria, is a member of the House of Saaxecoburg and Gotha. He was a son of Prince August of Saaxe-Coburg and Gotha. Official notification of his abdication in favor of his son, Boris, was published in November, 1918. Later he was reported to have arrived at Coburg and to have asked permission of the Swiss authorities to reside in Switzerland.

SAW COMRADES SLOWLY STARVE

TROOPER LACEY'S AWFUL EXPERIENCE IN A HUN PRISON CAMP.

Cobourg, May 5. — To see 200 of his brothers in arms starved to death in a Hun prison camp was the painful experience of Trooper Faustus Lacey, son of Mr. J. T. Lacey of Swift Current, Sask., who has just arrived at his home in the Western town after having undergone many thrilling experiences. Trooper Lacey is a nephew of A. J. Lacey of this town. After one of the big engagements he was reported "missing" and some time afterward it was ascertained that he was a prisoner of war. For ten months he was held in durance vile and during that time he saw 200 of his comrades die from sheer starvation. They were worked by the Boche at highest pitch on watery soup and black bread, until human endurance could hold out no longer, and one by one they took the West trail.

During his period of incarceration Trooper Lacey was not permitted the luxury of a shave, and was compelled, like hundreds of others, to wear the same clothes that he had on when captured. His endurance may be accounted as a result of regular habits and the open life on a prairie farm previous to enlisting. Had the Huns held out much longer he, too, would probably have not had the endurance to remain in life.

After mourning him for some time as dead his parents and other relatives are overjoyed at his safe arrival here. He was not released until December 28 last about six weeks after the armistice was signed. After reaching England he was kept there some time to recuperate his brokn health.

Trooper Lacey left Swift Current with the 9th C. M. R. in June, 1915, for overseas. After his arrival in France he was transferred to "A" Squadron, Troop 3, of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, and saw much severe fighting before being taken prisoner with several hundred others, in March, 1918. He is not inclined to talk much about his experiences but characterizes them as "pretty rough."

Mrs. Irene Castle, moving picture actress, and widow of Vernon Castle, is to marry Capt. Robt. E. Tremen, of Ithaca, N. Y.

THREE THOUSAND PACKERS STRIKE TODAY IN TORONTO

Men Walk Out at 10 a.m. When Five Firms Refuse to Recognize Union and Guarantee Steady Work—Meat Famine Likely.

Toronto, May 5. — As expected, three thousand employes of the local meat packing houses and stock yard men walked out at 10 a.m., and in consequence there was very little trading in live stock here. There was no market today. The plants affected are the Big Five: Gunn Brothers, Matthews-Blackwell Limited, William Davies Company, the Swift Canadian Company and the Harris Company.

The above action is the result of the refusal of the companies comprising the Big Five to negotiate the wage scale with the local union of Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America.

The decision was reached at a meeting which filled the Star Theatre yesterday afternoon after it heard the proposals of the Big Five, as they are commonly called among trades unionists, which were placed before the meeting by Mr. E. N. Compton, fair wage officer of the Dominion Government.

The strike will be fought for the recognition of the union. There was little mention made at the meeting of wages or working conditions. The proposals of the Big Five are that a committee of five chosen from the workmen in each packing house shall meet in conference with a committee of five representative of the five packing houses.

The Davies and Harris companies employ 850 men each; Gunns Limited 500 workmen; Swifts, 600, and the Blackwell Company 300. Mr. Louis Braithwaite, organizer of the union, declared yesterday that the union is practically a 100 per cent. organisation and showed his books to confirm his statement. It includes a large number of returned soldiers, men who have spent many years in the industry with many foreigners, who are doing the rough work about the packing houses.

A schedule was presented early in April upon each of the local packing houses from the union to which there was no reply. The schedule was to be negotiated by May 1. Later in the month Mr. Braithwaite wrote the Minister of Labor expressing the desire of the union for a board of conciliation or arbitration.

What Union Wants.

The union asks for the eight-hour day and the forty four hour week, the usual union rates for overtime, one dollar a day increase in wages, forty hours a week shall be guaranteed to all persons in the packing industry, that no person shall be transferred from one department to another to make up guaranteed time, recogniton of the union, that no one be employed who is under 16 years of age, that boys over eighteen years of age shall receive mens' wages, and that the company shall furnish proper dress rooms, lunch rooms and toilets. Women are to be treated as equal to men.

The clause regarding the guaranteed week is inserted because of the seasonable trade, and, according to Mr. Braithwaite, because of the prevailing opinion that industry should support all whom it employs. Regarding the transfer from one department to another, Mr. Braithwaite explained that men asked to change from a temperature of 70 degrees to a refrigerating room often contracted lung disorders, and that this was particularly hard upon returned soldiers. The clause asking for accommodation was inserted because of existing conditions and the disagreeable nature of the work.

Foreign Labor Necessary.

The G. W. V. A., said Mr. Braithwaite, had taken some objection to foreigners in the packing houses. Foreigners, he said, were absolutely essential for certain work, and this point was recognized by the returned soldiers who were in the union. They took the view that they could not be eliminated. He pointed out that every trade union charter — British, American or Canadian recognized no creed, color or nationality. All realized, proceeded Mr. Braithwaite, that foreigners must obtain wages by which they can provide themselves with some of the comforts of life.

"I have discovered an interesting feature of the housing question, while organizing the union. Foreigners are forced by reason of low wages to crowd in large numbers into dwellings, and landlords, knowing this, obtain high rents. At times they prefer to rent to foreigners."

JAPAN WILLING TO COMPROMISE

SOLDIERS' BILL IS BEFORE COMMONS

BUDGET IS NOT EXPECTED BEFORE MIDDLE OF PRESENT MONTH.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, May 5.—There is still no definite intimation as to when Sir Thomas White, as Finance Minister will deliver his budget address to the Commons, but it is not expected before about May fifteenth at the earliest. In the meantime the most important legislation to be discussed will be the Soldiers Settlement Bill to be introduced to-morrow by Hon. Arthur Meighen.

The bill will validate recent orders-in-Council and provide otherwise for the welfare of the soldiers.

Thursday Afternoon Is Date Now Set

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 5.—It is now certain according to the French press that the treaty of peace will be solemnly handed to Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau, the German foreign minister, by Premier Clemenceau, at Versailles on Thursday afternoon.

LABORERS ON TRENT CANAL REFUSE TO RETURN TO WORK

Twenty-Nine Cents an Hour Does not Appeal to Returned Soldiers Who Were Financially Better Off in the Army—Red Tape of the New Patronage System.

It is neither a strike nor a lockout simply a muddle due to the marvelous conditons that at present prevail at Ottawa. Anyway the laborers on the Trent Canal are not working, have not worked since May 1, and are not likely to go back until something like an official square deal is handed out to them.

These men, the majority of whom are returned soldiers and who have been given employment in a public possession as a slight appreciation of their gallant services overseas have been working nine hours a day for $2.60, or 29 cents by the hour. Who can blame them if they are inclined to regard their position lightly, if they have reached the conclusion that from a financial viewpoint they were beter off when they wore the King's uniform and were rated at $1.10 a day on the pay roll. That carried with it free board and lodging, better board than they are able to secure at their present rate of pay, as well as free clothing, the like of which they will never be able to purchase for themselves so long as they remain in the employ of the Government at the present rate of wages allowed them. Another advantage in their former conditions over that in which they now find themselves was medical care in the event of sickness and injury.

When the Union Government developed professedly, political virtue, but which really meant grabbing everything in sight that looked like fruit, it took over the appointment of all the paborers in the public service nothing was too small to be overlooked and the patronage was to be split up on a fifty-fifty basis in order to preserve peace in the household of the Unionists.

In former days the local officials of the Trent Canal were regarded as competent to select the men required on the staff of laborers. Then came the announcement that all such appointments would be made by the Department at Ottawa. The new plan was not without its disadvantages. Emergencies arose occasionally when it was necessary to secure laborers at once. Valuable time was lost and damage to the service often resulted because it was necessary to wait for the Department to unwind yards of red tape and secure a working staff.

Finally the Department modified the former decree. In the event of an emergency the local officials could engage laborers but the period of their service was not to exceed thirty days, in which time it was given out that the Department would pass upon the list and separate the sheep from the goats, the fit from the incompetent.

On the last day of April the term of servitude of the local Canal laborers as authorized by the Department had expired and the officials had no alternative but to lay them off for one day and then begin over again, nothing having been heard from the Department in the meantime as to making the appointments permanent. But when the laborers were recalled they failed to respond and they do not propose to go back to work at the old rate of wages. This trouble in the public service is not confined to the local office. On the Welland canal, which is now managed by Mr. A. J. Grant, formerly of Peterborough the employes are talking strike and will send a deputation to ask for a raise of pay. There are over 1,700 men affected. The Minister of Railways and Canals, however, has already announced that there is to be no change either in the rate of pay or the hours of work.

The inside men employed by the Trent Canal in the local offices have their own personal grievance. Without any notice, the bonus which was granted them some time ago has been cancelled and they are working on the same old schedule again.

CANOE COMPANY WORKERS WALK OUT THIS MORNING

Demanded Recognition of Union and Slight Increase in Wages--Quit Before Management Returned Definite Answer.

The employes of the Peterborough Canoe Company quit work today over a dispute with the firm, the main point insisted upon by the men being the recognition of the various unions represented, rather than a substantial increase in wages. The firm offered the men an increase beginning September 1st. the new agreement to be drawn up at that time. The men asked that the compact be entered into now to take effect in September.

The machinists are now talking of going out. Some of the laborers employed in the William Hamilton Co.'s plant returned to work this morning under protest with the understanding that they would quit if the firm refused to come to their terms. The laborers are holding a meeting this afternoon at Labor Hall.

Manager Richardson's Statement.

Mr. Richardson, managing director of the Peterborough Canoe Co., when interviewed this afternoon, said a deputation from his men at 8:30 this morning presented him with a written demand for an immediate recognition of the Canoe Builders' Union, for a closed shop, and a slight increase in wages until September next, when a new scale of wages would go into effect. An answer by 11:30 was demanded, and he asked that the men get together at 10 minutes to 12, when he would talk to them and give his answer. Some of the men, however, left the works and have not showed up since. A sufficient percentage of the canoe builders are still at their posts to avoid closing down the works. A proportionate number of helpers have had to quit work with the skilled builders perforce of circumstances—there was nothing for them to do.

Increase in Embployment.

Mr. Richardson adds that the canoe builders here are at present better paid than those in any other town or city in Ontario of a similar size as Peterborough, and that outside of this city no demands are being made on a line with those of the Peterborough union. Then, he said, last November the approximate number of men employed in the two city canoe factories was sixty. This number has been increased today to one hundred and twenty, because the managements were able to secure a large increase of business by not bumping their prices for canoes on a par with the increase in other lines of manufactured products and high prices generally. And now, Mr. Richardson complains, after creating more work for a greater number of men, the union proposes to embarrass us by their demands, in filling the orders on hand and at prices given in good faith before this incident arose.

Budapest Scene Of Greatest Panic

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, May 5.—Budapest is the scene of greatest panic, according to despatches to the newspapers here. Recent statements on the situation by Bela Kun, the soviet foreign minister, have led to a complete disappearance of order, and Bela Kun himself is reported to have had a narrow escape from violence at a meeting of the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council. The Red Guards have patrolled the streets of the city, threatening the bourgeoise.

Reds Fighting For Petrograd

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, May 5.—It is understood today that the Finnish Reds are now fighting the Finnish White Guards for the possession of Petrograd, which on Saturday was evacuated by the Russians. It is not known whether or not the Finnish Reds are in co-operation with the Lenine Bolsheviks.

EX-NAVAL MAN PLEADS GUILTY TO FORGERY, FRAUD AND THEFT

Stole Military Button—Altered a Discharge Certificate--Remanded One Week.

"You are a bad man," said His Worship to Robert Frederick Cobb, in the Police Court this morning. He also characterized the man as an "idler, loafer and swindler," but for all that he seemed very loath to send him to jail.

The prisoner, a discharged naval man faced the charges of beating his board bill, altering his discharge certificates and wearing illegally a military service button. He is also wanted in Lindsay on the charge of theft of the button and forgery.

He elected to be tried summarily.

Two Certificates.

Prisoner pleaded guilty to altering his discharge certificate. He received, he said, two discharge papers from the admiralty at Ottawa. One was lost for a time in the mail, he wrote for another, and subsequently he came into possession of both certificates. Why he illegally filled in one paper to the effect that he had been wounded, prisoner could not explain but declared that he had never used it for the purpose of fraudulent representation. In fact the paper had never been out of his pocket.

Prisoner testified that he had served on a mine-sweper in the North Sea, and met with an accident at Scapa Flo, Scotland, as a result of which he had been discharged by a medical board on the Niboe.

Cobb has evidently the full use of all his limbs and does not complain that he is incapacitated for work.

Although the young man had pleaded guilty, His Worship was inclined to dismiss the charge on the ground of lack of evidence that he had actually used the altered certificate in his own interest.

Wore Button Illegally.

The prisoner, on the second charge that he had illegally worn a military service button, pleaded guilty to stealing the button from a coat in the room of a hotel in Lindsay. However, he was not under trial here on the charge of theft and Magistrate Dumble said it was only a button so far as the evidence was concerned, which might have or might not have been issued legally, and he was not inclined to hang a man on a button on suspicion that it signifies something not borne out by evidence. "We don't want the man here anyway."

County Crown Attorney Hatton: "That's all right, your Worship but we want to dispose of the charge. A man wearing a military button illegally casts into disrepute and ridicule the object for which such buttons are issued. Then the prisoner pleads guilty."

His Worship: "There is no evidence that the button was legally issued and that prisoner used it to falsely represent anything to his own advantage. In fact, there is no evidence but a technical plea of guilty, and I'm not going to take advantage of his ignorance in that respect."

"I Stole That Badge."

The prisoner here reiterated that he stole the badge in question and evidently was anxious that this court dispose of the charges against him.

Magistrate Dumble, however, remanded Cobb for one week with instructions that the court secure from Ottawa data as to the issue of the service certificate and military button. The number of this button is 234864.

Cobb was born in Toronto of English parents who still live in that city. He is anxious that his people are kept in ignorance of his unfortunate position.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

MONDAY, MAY 5, 1919

PETERBOROUGH'S FIRE DEPARTMENT.

THE REVIEW is in receipt of a protest against the publication of an article which appeared in its news columns Friday announcing that the Underwriters' Association had increased the rate of mercantile insurance in this city by forty per cent. because of the lack of proper appliances to fight fire. The Review has no apologies to offer. We did our simple duty when we gave the public information on a subject which so closely concerns their material interests. The report was official and we are in no way responsible for the conditions that made that document necessary. Of course, we anticipated a protest from those whose conscience smote them for municipal mistakes within recent years, mistakes that the business men of Peterborough are now paying for to the tune of a large increase in the insurance on their property.

One of the most fallacious arguments of the objectors to this publicity is the claim that the publication of such an article will have a tendency to keep outside manufacturers away from the city. It never occurred to us that the astute business men of the country were quite so easy as this objection would imply. The manufacturer cannot be blindfolded by a civic delegation and led into a community to take his chances. He can be depended upon to acquaint himself thoroughly with all the conditions of a city before he moves to it. He knows beforehand what the labor situation is, how high the tax rate, and what the municipality has to offer in the way of fire protection. He need not depend upon the delegation for this information, either. All these matters are of public record, and in the case of fire protection the Underwriters' Association is always available as a source of information. The aldermen that insist upon secret diplomatic relations with the outside manufacturer are simply living in an atmosphere of illusion. They cannot cover their tracks. Even the claim that other municipalities may bid for the factory that they have in mind falls through. No matter how they attempt to move with caution, the municipalities whose competition they fear is certain to be in possession of all they themselves know and to go after the same plums. [redacted]

The present City Council cannot be charged with the responsibility for the recent increase in local insurance rates. They have not been long enough in office to make any improvements in the fire department, although they have done something in the way of promoting efficiency by giving the members of the brigade a chance to live like Christians instead of like so many inmates of a penal institution. The trouble has been caused by a mistaken idea of economy. Wisdom in penny expenditure does not always result in the saving of dollars. Even if every improvement which Inspector Wilson suggested in his report which The Review published, the cost would probably not increase the taxes of the merchant or manufacturer $2 a year. That would be a small matter compared to the $150 a year which the George Street merchant with $100,000 on his stock and building has to pay now as a penalty for municipal neglect, or the $1500 saddled on the manufacturer who carries ten times that amount.

It is a question of figures, but something, too, of vastly more importance. The reputation of the city would not suffer now if the aldermen of recent years had listened to reason. Chief Grange has made the same recommendations as those submitted by the underwriters' inspector, and there is in this fact sufficient testimony to the Chief's efficiency for his important duties.

FREE FARMS, FORSOOTH!

IT IS NOTHING unusual to hear a city man gravely declare that the farmer of any class in the country was given the best start in life because his grandfather was probably granted a farm free of cost when he first came to this country. The farmer for this reason is supposed to maintain a sentiment of gratitude toward a munificent government.

Free farms, forsooth! The story of the life of any pioneer has none of the element of romance. Too often it is a sordid recital of hardships, of lean days when the larder was empty, of adverse seasons, of inhospitable climate, and of disappointed hopes. The farm for which the pioneer received a Crown deed was worth nothing to the Government that presented the gift. It meant nothing to the country at large so long as is remained in a state of nature. No nation can be developed while a wilderness, just as Canada was hewn out of the forest by the sturdy band of pioneers whose courage in setting their hand to the unaccustomed task was no less sublime than that which inspires the soldier who faces the hostile force on the battlefield.

Take any hundred-acre farm in Peterborough county that was presented to the ancestors of the man who now owns it. If the work that was expended upon it to convert it from a wilderness to a farm was charged up at the rate paid for labor year after year, it would be found that the property really cost the original owner something like ten times as much as he would be able to get for it if placed on the market. It is the man who purchases an improved farm, not the original owner who received it as a gift from a government anxious to secure recruits to fight the wilderness and manufacture national wealth, who is to be regarded as fortunate.

The pioneer, after years of unmitigated toil, years of isolation and privation, no sooner found himself in a position to take life easy than that life came to a close. The son who inherited the property did not always get it for nothing. A heritage composed solely of a single farm, no matter how improved, is not so much of a bonanza when its value is distributed among the members of a large family and the actual heir is left to carry alone the financial burden that the distribution entails.

In many respects the city man, especially if he has a turn for speculation, has all the best of it. If he gets in on the ground floor during the adolescence of the municipality he may acquire landed estate, if not by Crown deed, then at a nominal price. He need never, if so disposed, turn a hand to improve his holdings, but may permit it to become an eyesore to the community, a place where burdocks and other noxious weeds flourish unchallenged. The city grows up around these blots on the landscape, and while it grows the burdock field increases in value which the assessor does not penalize. No farmer can pursue such a speculative career as that. His land grows in value only as it is cleared and otherwise improved from year to year. And every improvemnt means a boost in the assessment.

Canada as a nation owes more debt in the way of gratitude than it will ever be possible to pay. It owes it to the unselfish statesmen, who, without thought of self—and, the cynics to the contrary, there have been many such— who labored day and night to build up a rational administrative system. It owes gratitude to the men who, as occasion arose, took up arms in defence of their native land. But the debt the nation owes to its army of pioneers is no whit less, to the hardy toilers who worked on in the face of dangers and distress and who paved the way for all those who came after them.

Suppose the Government presented a man with authority to quarry a block of stone which it could not secure or hew itself, and out of that he had fashioned a statue which remained a thing of beauty forever, not to mention its value as a national asset, would that man's descendnts be perpetually beholden to the State?

HOW THE OTHER HALF LIVES.

SOME TIME AGO an editorial appeared in these columns deploring the living conditions that existed in some parts of the city, our information having been secured from a social worker whose duties almost daily bring him into such places. It was asserted that children in this city were inadequately fed and clothed and that many of them were growing up in surroundings that demanded official action.

The Local Council of Women called the attention of Health Officer Amys to the editorial and asked him if the statements that it contained were justified by existing facts. Dr. Amys, in a communication, which has now become a public document, while he disclaimed all responsibility for the inspiration of the article, answered that it was true in every respect. At the recent meeting of the Council of Women the committee appointed for such work was authorised to look into certain living conditions in the city. Beyond all question further light upon the problem of how the other half lives will be a revelation to them.

The Mehodists of Toronto are about to begin a systematic investigation of the social conditions of the workingmen of that city. This step has been decided upon following the challenge recently issued by Mr. S. R. Parsons, ex-president of the Manufacturers' Association, who takes the ground that the exclusive business of the church is to spread the gospel and not concern itself with such modern problems as the relation of Capital and Labor. Mr. Parsons alleges further that the working classes have no real grievance, that they are well paid, have easy hours, and are able to live in comfort. The church's answer is the investigation into actual conditions, as already stated.

Social conditions are practically the same in every city in Ontario, but in the larger centres the situation is more aggravated. As The Review stated in the editorial that started the ball rolling in Peterborough, the fact that children are not always properly fed and clothed, or are living in filthy surroundings, in too many cases is not so much due to a lack of means as to ignorance on the part of the parents. It is not every mother who understands the care of children, even if her maternal affection is of the highest order. It is not every father or mother, either, who realizes the danger of ignoring the most ordinary rules of health. What the offenders in this regard require is education, something that hitherto has been consistently neglected. The young girl who has spent the years of her maidenhood in store, factory or office knows nothing of her new responsibilities when she marries, and her husband is equally deficient. The bitter truth is that Canadians today are more interested in the rearing of prize animals than in raising healthy children. There is more governmental paternalism exercised over the breeder of live stock than there is over the parents of the rising generation.

Even the most casual observer cannot fail to note on the streets, especially among the crowds of children going to or coming from the public schools, evidence of lack of development due to the want of proper nourishment, and the inadequate clothing, both as often as not the result of paternal inefficiency rather than of actual poverty. The homes from which many of these children come are so many places where hygiene is an unnkown science. There is work for the social reformers in Peterborough no less than in Toronto. There is a field for the branch of the social service organisation right in this city, and it is a matter of regret if the ardor of the citizens who planned a local branch has been allowed to cool.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

THE CLOSE OF THE WAR seems to find Greece without either Pyrrhic dance or phalanx.

JUST AT PRESENT the local call is for more houses rather than for another park away out in the suburbs.

ANYWAY, the settler who is given a free farm has to obligate himself to work it, so that it is not everyone who is looking for such gifts.

AS THE WEST VIEWS THE CHURCH

(Lethbridge Herald.)

Mr R. A. Parsons, past president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, has taken issue with the General Conference of the Methodist Church, at Hamilton, in that, when it undertook to decry "competition and profit" in industry, it entered a sphere into which as a religious body it had no right to trespass and passed opinion on a subject with which the majority of the delegates lere not competent to deal. He further observed to the members of the congregation of the Central Methodist Church, in Toronto, that mhile he was willing to take his theological and religious instruction fro hmis "ministerial brethren" he could not undertake to accept their teachings in economics.

Mr Parsons in plain words tells his "ministerial brethren" that, like the cobbler, they should stick to their last. It is quite a question whether this gentle reprimand is in order, or whether it is even a logical one. In dealing with it allowance will have to be made for a certain amount of peevishness with which the past president of the Manufacturers' Association was suffering. In that the Hamilton conference was treading on his corns. In strict justice to the "ministerial brethren" it cannot be advanced that they were wandering out of their province, or that they did not exactly know what they were talking about. This latter accuses them of an ignorance of which they are not deserving, in that the evils of profit are writ large for even the most ignorant, in the estimation of the past president of the Manufacturers' Association, to read.

What the Methodist conference went into is after all a question of morality which is the distinct province of the cherch. It was the morality of business. One of the shafts levelled at the church these days is that it has lost its influence with the people. If this is true, it is because the church has not entered into the problems that vitally affect the people of the extent that it should. The church has been charged with preaching of the hereafter and taking no note of every day problems. This has a great deal of truth.

It is not to be advocated that the church take any partisan side in the political field for instance, except on the question of right. But it is the privilege and the right of the church, and in keeping with its being, to concern and interest itself in that which affects the lives of men. In this competition and profit, as they affect the lives and welare of men, are distinctly in place. The past president of the Manufacturers' Association is complaining from an interested and, therefore, blased view, and is thereby wrong in his conclusions. Should his viewpoint obtain the church would distinctly fail in its mission and go further to favor the belief that it has lost its influence.

LABOR UNREST, IN LINDSAY, TOO

NUMBER OF WORKMEN DEMAND BETTER TERMS FROM THEIR EMPLOYERS.

Lindsay, May 5. May Day strikes are in progress all over the country, and apparently molders and mechanics in Lindsay are in on the same basis as shopmen in other towns and cities, although the Lindsay men have not gone on strike to secure their demands. Cities and towns wher labor is organized have been generally affected by the big strike in Toronto, where hundreds of men are out, and elsewhere.

It is understood that the men at the Sylvester Mfg. Co. have made demands on the firm and that matters are at present in abeyance. It is also stated that the labor men at the Boving Co., where almost one hundred are employed, have waited on the management in regard to the new demands, and that their case is being held in abeyance, the manager, Mr. Jacobson, being out of town on business.

HOME FROM OVERSEAS

Pte. Oren Switzer is Visiting Friends at Rockcroft.

The many friends of Pte. Oren Switzer of the 21st Battalion, formerly of the 109th Battalion, will be pleased to hear of his return home. He is at present visiting his sister at Rockcroft. He is looking a little thin but none the worse for his experience at the front, although wounded twice. He is now going to visit his mother, Mrs. P. R. Switzer, and his sister Mrs. Bert Multze of Goodherham. He arrived in Halifax on the Adriatic on Easter Sunday with his discharge from service.

GUELPH WILL BUILD.

Seeks Quarter Million Loan from the Provincial Government.

Guelph, May 5. — The Guelph housing commission will request the city council to apply for a loan of $250,000 from the Government to enable the commission to erect dwelling houses here this year. There never was so great a shortage of suitable houses in the city as at the present time, and if building conditions are favorable many new residents will be built this summer.

EVERY YEAR TO BE CHILDREN'S YEAR

UNCLE SAM'S SYSTEM FOR TAKING CARE OF USING GENERATIONS.

Washington, D.C., May 5.—Weighing of more than 2,000,000 babies establishment of many new health centers to advise mothers on the care of their children and stimulation of the movement to keep children in school and provide them adequate recreation, were reported by the children's year campaign.

More than 11,000,000 women participated in the activities of the year, which was inaugurated April 6, 1918, the first anniversary of America's declaration of war. It was planned to save at least 100,000 of the 300,000 children who die annually from preventable diseases.

The first activity of the year was a test of children under 6 to see whether they were up to the standards of weight and height for their ages. Nearly 7,000,000 record cards were issued, of which more than 2,000,000 have been tabulated, with others yet to be turned in. A number of communities have undertaken a second test this spring to include children missed in the first and also to note improvement in those previously registered.

Although children's year is officially over, plans are under way in several states to make every year a children's year. A new consciousness of the value of the child and his need for good health, wholesome play adequate schooling and protection from premature work is said to be indicated by laws contemplated by the states. These include many bills for the protection of children.

The children's bureau has planned a conference with foreign experts who have had a part in the work done by European countries for the production of children during the stress of war. The conference will consist of two distinct parts: First a small working committee of American authorities to be invited by the secretary of labor, and members of the bureau staff who will meet formally wth the foreign guests at Washington during the week of May 6; second, a series of regional conferences in various parts of the country at which the discussion of minimum standards can be continued under local auspices and with reference to local conditions.

WHAT'S A CORSET

That's a Problem With Tax Experts in The United States

Corset: A close fitting laced bodice worn as a support, usually by women —Dictionary.

The definition appears simple enough, yet many serious minded men, members of the National Retail Dry Goods Association are at a loss to know what Uncle Sam thinks a corset really is, and a few days ago a delegation from the association started for Washington to induce Internal Revenue Commissioner Daniel C. Roper to tell them.

Corsets have been designated as underwear for import and export taxation purposes, but as underwear is worn next to the skin and the corset never gets that intimate with its owner, the dry goods men wish to be shown how it can be so classified. Is a corset a tight fitting bodice, is it a luxury, a necessity, is it underwear, or is it just plain corset, usually worn by women?

Our idea of a truly great man is one who has travelled extensively and neither lectures nor writes about it.

THE MAKING OF A FAMOUS MEDICINE

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Is Prepared For Woman's Use.

A visit to the laboratory where this successful remedy is made impresses even the casual looker-on with the reliability, accuracy, skill and cleanliness which attends the making of this great medicine for woman's ills.

Over 350,000 pounds of various herbs are used annually and all have to be gathered at the season of the year when their natural juices and medicinal substances are at their best.

The most successful solvents are used to extract the medicinal properties from these herbs.

Every utensil and tank that comes in contact with the medicine is sterilized and as a final precaution in cleanliness the medicine is pasteurized and sealed in sterile bottles.

It is the wonderful combination of roots and herbs, together with the skill and care used in its preparation which has made this famous medicine so successful in the treatment of female ills.

The letters from women who have been restored to health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which we are continually publishing attest to its virtue.

Growing Rhubarb

The children of the Purley school, Chicago, last year sold about $75 worth of rhubarb grown by them on a vacant lot adjacent to the school. With this money they bought liberty bonds. Why not follow the example set by these children and plant rhubarb on some of our idle vacant land — the crops will pay for your victory bond. These children had a splendid crop, grown on the very poorest soil with little attention.

Rhubarb is the least particular of all vegetables as to the soil it grows in — of course it will do best in a rich soil and prefers plenty of manure applied in the fall.

After your clean-up campaign, when the ashes, tin cans and other accumulated rubbish has been raked into a pile and either hauled away or buried then is the time to encourage the planting of something that will grow successfully, produce a food and help to ornament the yard, and no other vegetable is better suited for this purpose than is rhubarb or pie plant. It can be grown from seed, but will do better when started from roots. The seed are sown in rows eighteen inches apart, planted one-quarter or one-half inch deep, and you can do this planting as early as the soil can be worked. The seed comes up in about three weeks, and about three or four weeks later the young paints should be thinned out to stand eight or ten inches apart in the row.

Rhubarb, whether grown from seed or from roots will do better if transplanted to new rows once every four or five years. The old beds become too thick and the leaf stalks become slender and pithy.

Buy your roots from the seed store or go to the yard of your friends or neighbor who is growing rhubarb and dig up some of the roots where the plants are crowded, bring these home and dig a hole six or eight inches deep and a foot across for each root. Plant the root in its natural upright position and fill in the soil and poke thoroughly against the roots from all sides. The plants should be left to develop one year's growth before cutting or pulling the stalks.

In cultivating keep the soil loose between the plants and along the rows, keep out all weeds and supply moisture when the soil is dry during the summer months.

THE OLD GARDENER SAYS:

It is difficult to specify any exact dates for planting different crops, but amateurs who watch the opening buds of trees and shrubs will have a good guide. With the unfolding of the early leaves of the fruit trees all the hardier vegetables, such as peas, radishes, beets, lettuce, onions, parsnips and turnips may be planted. When the cherry or peach trees bloom put in beans, early corn, cucumbers, squashes and celery. Wait a little longer before putting out such very tender vegetables as tomatoes, peppers and eggplants.

BLACK AND WHITE REVIVED

Magpie Combination Part of New Craze for Bright Colors—French Blue Is Popular.

The revived interest in the black and white or magpie combination is really part of this new craze for bright colors, for as far as the effect is concerned black and white in combination has nothing to do either with all black or all white, and it is sure to come to the foreground only in seasons when women of fashion go in for bright, high colors.

During the war little of it was seen. It was too vivid, too striking, too gay. But with the new interest in bright hues it has come to its own and is bound to be seen in many of the new frocks and may find acceptance in some of the midseason millinery.

Because of the sentiment connected with French blue and the actual fact that it is very becoming to most women, the dressmakers are bringing out accessories in this color. There are French blue handkerchiefs, slippers and stockings; there are blouses of it made of handkerchief linen; and one of the foremost designers of tailored suits in the country uses French blue blouses frilled from neck to waist under suits of covert cloth.

BORROWED FROM RUSSIAN

Table Linen Designs Showing Semi-Barbaric, but Pleasing, Popular in Needlework World.

A vogue for table linen showing the semi-barbaric, but wholly pleasing, designs used by Russian peasants is making itself felt in the needlework world. The stitches are simple in the extreme, something like our own attractive cross-stitch, but outlining squares, triangles, etc. They are used for conventional borders and small all-over patterns which resemble woven figured material.

As for the color, it is usually a monotone, a dark red, for instance, or a blue while the background is a loose-weave linen. Often they are worked with a punched-work background done with a thread to match the linen. A little black worked in with either the red or the blue is pleasing but not quite so true to the original Russian scheme. Often a dark green is combined with the red. The edges of the pieces are hemmed and a buttonhole stitch taken over the entire hem.

NEW SLIPS OF SILVER CLOTH

Popular Garment, Very Decollete and Sleeveless, Kept on by Faith and Tiny Ribbon.

Some new slips to be worn in these petticoatless times are made of silver cloth,—very décollete, and sleeveless, of course. Faith, hope and a tiny narrow ribbon across the shoulders keep them in place. Anyway, they are distinctly desirable, as they fall from the shoulders to the knee and serve as camisole and petticoat, too.

One of black shadow lace will be welcomed for wear with the fashionable black evening gown, and one of real Brussels lace is charming for a white dancing frock or for a bride.

Until the laundry situation returns to normal, the cotton crepe undergarment will enjoy deserved popularity. A camisole and a robe de nuit of white cotton crepe make a useful and attractive set. Just at the front of the yoke of each is appliqued a pink satin rose. Neither garment has sleeves and both have pointed shoulders.

FINISHING OFF THE EDGES

Machine Zigzag Stitching, Battlement Effect, Ruffling or Plaiting, Add to the Decoration.

The edges of things, or rather the way those edges are finished, make such a difference. This is particularly true of bundles. And yet, when you stop to consider how little real time and trouble it takes to add a row of broken stitches in groups of three, as compared with the charming effectiveness of the finished garment, the wonder of it is that more attention isn't given to the "edges."

Here are but a few of the lovely things that can do duty as decoration, as well as finish: Machine hemstitching worked zigzag, hemstitching in battlement effect, ruffling or plaiting of net in white or color, easy stitches, and tinted laces.

It is an easy matter to pencil off an irregular line for the hemstitcher to follow; and that is perhaps the very easiest finish of all. But the tinted lace and net idea is quite the newest and most effective. Both are seen usually done in tiny, tiny plaits.

Among the easy stitches which are always effective and pretty nearly always within the vogue, come French knots worked in groups of three, alternating short and long blanket stitch, long horizontal stitches interspersed with squares or dots worked solid, and the aforementioned straight stitches worked in threes. These are especially decorative done on the slant, the stitches graduating or alternating in length.

A FRIEND IN NEED.

The Pleasure That Came With a Little Act of Kindness.

"I am one of your new neighbors, Mrs. Estabrooks," said a cheerful voice at our door in the very middle of our first attempt at moving. "No, I can't come in. I just brought you a bit of lunch, knowing you would be too busy to fix any. Please call on me—just next door—if I can be of any help. Goodby!"

My husband and I glanced at that tray with its two bowls of hot soup and steaming little pot of coffee and then at each other in dumb surprise.

We had just reached that dreadful state in moving when nothing is in place and the things wanted first are underneath the things wanted last—that awful moment when a sense of helplessness, weakness and homesickness combined swoops down upon you.

We had not realized that we were hungry and physically exhausted, but after sitting down at an improvised table and sampling that delicious soup and drinking the stimulating coffee we suddenly knew what had been the matter with us. Courage returned.

"Blessings on our neighbor!" cried Ben.

"Yes," I answered. "She's the jolliest caller I ever received. She has taught me how to introduce yourself to new neighbors and win their everlasting gratitude. Whatever happens in this neighborhood I'll stand by Mrs. Estabrooks—see if I don't!"—Woman's Home Companion.

HIS WIFE'S TRIUMPH.

A Record That Used to Inspire Green, the Famous Historian.

It has been the fate of many men of letters to have ill health bearing them down as they struggle on toward literary achievements. Thus beset in recent times were Stevenson, Richard Jeffries and J. R. Green. Each of these, it happened, had a high hearted wife to keep him up, even to help him with the actual labor of writing. "The Life and Letters of J. R. Green" show forth a great and sweet man. They show, too, a wife whose sympathy and fortitude helped to make his accomplishment possible.

In copying the vast amount of manuscript of her husband's books Mrs. Green contracted writer's cramp and was forced to stop using her right hand. This looked like a final obstacle in the way of the invalid, who did much of his thinking in bed and could not write himself. But Mrs. Green set to work at once learning to write with her left hand.

One of her first practice pages, which she was about to destroy with the rest, her husband took quietly and put in his pocket. Years afterward when ill health seemed unbearable and in discouragement he felt that he could not work he used to take out that piece of paper, a living record of his wife's triumph over difficulty. When he saw the painful, patient strokes by which Mrs. Green had learned to write with her left hand he could work on with something near to inspiration.

METHODISTS TO FIND OUT HOW THE OTHER HALF LIVE

Will Make a Systematic Investigation of Social Conditions of Wage-Earners in Toronto —S. R. Parsons Stands His Ground.

Toronto, May 5.—An attempt to improve the conditions under which Toronto wage earners are living is to be made by the Methodist Church. Rev. Charles A. Williams, pastor of Timothy Eaton Memorial Church, stated that plans are to be formed at a conference today with Rev. Dr. T. Albert Moore, general secretary of Social Service and Evangelism for the Methodist Church. In this way the church will meet the accusations of R. S. Parsons that it is incapable of remedying economic evils.

By a plan suggested by Mr. Williams, the city would be divided into districts, each district being under the control of the pastor of the church in that locality. Teams of workers would be organized and a house-to-house and factory-to-factory canvass made.

The object is to learn the number of hours worked and wages paid to every workingman in Toronto. They will also endeavor to learn the conditions under which men are working and living. Recitals of houses, flats and rooms will be recorded. Weekly costs of fuel, light and provisions and amounts spent yearly on clothes and amusement will also be registered. The cost of medical attendance and other incidentals will be gone into.

Mr. Parsons Explains.

S. R. Parsons has issued a lengthy statement explanatory of what he said in Central Methodist Church a week ago, in reference to the attitude of the Methodist General Conference toward industrial affairs. In it he says:

"Imagine all the storekeepers and wholesale merchants, all the manufacturers and employers of labor, all the farmers, all the trust, loan, insurance and mortgage companies, all the financial brokers, all the professional men, working on any other basis than a profit system. I do not know of any possible way by which this programme could be brought about than by means of a dictatorship such as they have in Russia today.

"Further, the programme of the Methodist Church, if carried out in this particular, as demanded, would mean communism pure and simple—tried and failed so often before—and to my mind would be only a step removed from Bolshevism.

Opposed to Socialism.

"We surely have enough burdens and troubles on our hands today—from a national standpoint which few of our ministers, at all events, understand, without having the whole country plunge into a system of revolution. In the question of Socialism, I stand absolutely upon the same platform of opposition as Mr. James T. Gunn, acknowledged to be the most intellectual Labor leader in Canada. It is the greatest enemy of civilization and Christianity. The Methodists are setting up a false god!

Views With Alarm.

Mr. Parsons further comments:

"I viewed with alarm the fact that in many of our Methodist churches there was a very distinct change in our emphasis and activities. Our altars were no longer crowded, and the cardinal doctrines of Christianity, except here and there, were not being proclaimed. We had already unfortunately, admittedly lost hold very largely of the so-called working classes for two reasons it appeared to me. First, because of the fact that we were giving them a poor, cheap gospel along sociological lines, and, in the second place, that with our numerous and frantic appeals for funds to carry on the work of the Church, especially in its general departments (though all good and necessary, and in which I take my full share of the blame for conditions), the workingmen could not be independent without contributing as desired, which in many cases they could not afford to do.

"Crude Attempt."

"Therefore, for these two and other reasons they slipped out of the church. I was now afraid that in our crude attempt to teach economics to those who were the greatest supporters of the church; as they ought to be—the wealthy men, in which class I personally could not qualify—we would soon lose them from our societies. I plead for a return to the teachings and spirit of the earlier days of Methodism, when it was spiritual, convincing, and triumphant."

Words That Mean Much.

The sonorous opening of Lincoln's Gettysburg speech, "Four score and seven years ago," is not equivalent to eighty-seven years ago! Prose hath her harmonies, no less than poetry. It is such subtleties that make up the full effect of literary expression. "Victuals" is not equivalent to "food;" "deathlessness" is not the same as "immortality"— as Lowell showed when he suggested that we try converting Wordsworth's title, "Intimations of Immortality" into "Hints of Deathlessness."—North American Review.

Provide Playground.

The truly normal, mischief-loving youngster (and all healthy children are both) simply cannot live without play. If this is denied him he will droop like a flower transplanted into unhealthy soil. However, if he finds it difficult to keep on friendly terms with his small neighbors his mother must see to it that he has his own playground at home. It won't cost much to fit up such a fairyland, and it will prove an investment that will pay back undreamed of returns.—New York Evening Telegram.

The Apocrypha.

All the Old Testament apochrypha, fourteen in number, have been translated into English and are included as apocryphal books in some editions of the Bible. They were formerly printed under a distinctive heading between the Old and the New Testaments, and in that form can still be found in many old family Bibles. They are always included in the so-called Septuagint, a version of the Bible used by the Greek church.

British Puzzled Huns

By Advancing Sham Tanks

To Draw Artillery Fire

REFERENCES in Sir Douglas Haig's victory despatch to dodges of camouflage by which the very guillible German was tricked give only a pale suggestion of the numerous artifices actually used.

Tanks offered perhaps the best opening, because the Germans were so terrified by them. One stalwart colonel of tanks spent months in Flanders entraining and detraining the same little squad of tanks for the sole edification of enemy airmen and possible spies. The writer has since seen a German intelligence report complaining that the airmen always reported tanks, even when there were none, and refusing utterly to credit their news of real tanks assembling behind Arras because information had been so wrong in Flanders and elsewhere.

We used tanks made of lath and canvas as early as September, 1916, leaving them on the skyline at dawn and drawing a furious barrage. A fine little flotilla of these dummies was used in front of the Hindenburg line in October last, but the effect was, or should have been, rather spoiled by the effect of a strong wind which got under the canvas and totally capsized one.

It was betrayed very much like the wood guns in the dummy Agamemnon, which gayly floated off the surface of the Mediterranean when the ship was struck. Happily in both cases the Germans duly reported the destruction of the target.

Our airmen, whom the enemy were always attempting to deceive, were themselves adept at deception. False airdromes with false tents and even false machines littered the country, and some were riddled with bombs. As soon as enemy night bombers were reported an electric light or two would be switched on in the dummy while the neighboring reality reposed in safe obscurity.

In the second battle of Messines a whole corps, the Eighth, was given a purely dummy part. A sham camp was rigged up at night and quantities of dummy figures, at least as plausible as any of the false heads used by German snipery were shown in support trenches.

The lure worked to perfection, and very soon after dawn German batteries poured shells among the empty tents and the infantry made all preparations to resist an attack in force, afterward duly chronicled in the German communique as if a real assault had been stopped.

The writer has seen German artillery "drawn" in all sorts of ways. In one of the Thiepval attacks clouds of smoke were released on one flank, and the fear of what might be lurking within it drew down an intense barrage just at the moment when the real assault was delivered on the right wing.

With equal success buoys were placed in the night along the Belgian coast when we advertised a sham threat, and it was great sport the next day to watch the German shore batteries and huge single guns "registering" for all they were worth on these suspicious anchorages.

Both sides had many sham batteries made of iron pipes or even trees, and the enemy went so far as to shoot sham flashes from sham guns. But the immense superiority of our airmen in observation and photograph made us much less gullible than the Germans, even when their efforts were more elaborate.

"Laying" a Ghost.

The lieutenant had just been relieved, writes "I. S. T.," and was wending his way from the destroyer's bridge to his cabin. It was fairly calm, but very dark, and there was little to be seen but a line of waves on each side and the dim form of a second destroyer in station astern. Even for this "No. 1" had no eyes, for he had had a weary middle watch and bed was his only interest. But he did notice a weird figure, apparently human, crawling about near the "bandstand" of the after gun.

He went to investigate and found the surgeon probationer, clad in a chamois leather overall suit, in which he had been sleeping on the wardroom couch below — for every one must sleep more or less clad, ready to turn out at a moment's notice. He was feeling about in the dark, apparently in search of something.

"What on earth are you doing, doc?" he asked, and got the brief answer, "Laying a ghost." The first lieutenant grunted and disappeared below, leaving the doctor to insert a paper wedge between a loose rattling shell and the side of the stand in which it was placed.

A ghost, in naval language, is a noise which cannot be accounted for. In a destroyer one becomes a connoisseur in noises.

Country Before Party.

There was a delightful old-world touch about the advice of his sons which Major Lewis Motley, V.D., of Kirkstall, Leeds, England, set out in his will. It ran: That his married life (except for sickness) had been without a cloud, and he desired his sons, Paul and Lewis, to remember that they came of an old and gentle family and to do nothing mean and so disgrace the name, but merit the title of gentlemen. He also stated that if it was the misfortune of either of his sons to be engaged in politics he begged them always to remember their country comes before party.

RECONCILED BY MUSIC.

A Legend That Has Its Origin In Ireland.

It would seem that music has always had a unique place in the home. It may be truthfully said that music always makes for happiness in the home, and this apparently held good even in the earliest days of record. Illustrating this is a beautiful legend that is told of the olden days in Ireland.

Long years ago before music was invented in Ireland a chief named Cool and his wife, Canola, lived together unhappily, in constant quarreling and disagreements. Cool was hasty, hotheaded and easily displeased. Canola was fretful, impatient, sharp of tongue and temper.

One day, Cool came in tired and hungry from hunting. Perceiving that no fire was made ready for cooking, he became so angry he raised his hand to lay it hard upon her. At that Canola fled and Cool pursued. Now there was never a woman in all Erin so fleet of foot as Canola, and her husband could not overtake her. By the border of Lough Neagh she fled. Over the great, grassy hills of Tyrone, by the border of the swift, sparkling Foyle —on and on she fled till she drew near the bold north coast, where the green mountains stand tall on their buttresses of rock, over the never-resting sea.

There first she stopped her speed; for, suddenly, in that lonely and desolate spot, she heard a strange, sweet sound unlike anything her ears had ever known before. It rose melodiously in a plaintive cry, and then sank gently again to a soft murmur. Many times was this repeated over and over.

Canola drew nearer to the strange sound, till she came at last to the edge of the sea, and there, stranded on the coast, she saw the skeleton of a great fish; and the wind, playing through its dried ribs, was that which made the sweet sounds.

Enraptured, she stood still to listen. Then Cool drew near in his pursuit of her. He, too, heard the melodious sound, and when he saw that his wife was fascinated by what came to her ears, he turned aside into a grove hard by. There he cut down a slim sapling, scooped the wood of it into a bow, and strung lengths of deer-gut within. Then he drew his fingers across the strings, and a sound that was still sweeter than that made by the wind in the bones of the great fish issued therefrom.

Now Canola, hearing it, drew nearer the place from which it proceeded. When she came to the edge of the wood her eyes fell upon Cool, but instead of again giving speed to her fleet feet, she let them draw her nearer to where her husband stood, and he, noting her approach, held out his arms, and she entered in between them and fell on his breast. So then they kissed one another and returned to their home hand in hand.

And ever after from that day Cool and Canola lived in concord and harmony together, having eased all their troubles before the gentle muse of music.

The Blue Tag.

This story was told to a Red Cross searcher by one of the young Americans who did not wait for his Government to declare war, but went as a volunteer back in 1914. He had been through the first gas attack at Ypres and was one of the few who came alive through the murderous yellow cloud.

"I have seen the Yser when you could cross it dryshod on bodies," he said. "I have seen such deeds of heroism in action as make any story of old-time prowess seem tame. But there's one thing I saw, not in action, that chokes me up every time I think of it.

"There were two British lads in the regiment next to us, two brothers. They were both fine fellows, but the older one was just about the finest chap I ever knew. They had both loved the same girl back home, it seems, and there had been a pretty hot rivalry between them. Well, just before they were sent out she decided for the younger one. The other took it like a man, of course. But any one could tell he was desperately hard hit. We always knew from the way he fought when his brother had had a letter.

"They both got hit in the same action. There was a system then of tagging the men for Blighty with a blue tag, let's say. (I think it was blue, but it doesn't matter.) Of course, only the most serious cases were sent across the Channel, only the men who were thought too bad to pull through without the very best of care. It was the older brother who got the Blighty. His brother, who lay next him at the casualty clearing station, was tagged to go to a hospital in France. During the night, while his brother slept, the other one changed the tags. The younger brother went home and married the girl during his convalescence. The older one died before they could rectify the mistake."

Westminster Abbey Bells.

The six old bells of Westminster Abbey are being restored and augmented to take part in the celebrations that will follow the signing of peace.

The old bells are of great historic interest. All except the treble were cast at the old Whitechapel Bell Foundry — the tenor, weighing 1½ tons, in 1738, the fifth in 1598, the fourth and second in 1743, and the third in 1583. The treble was cast probably at the end of the thirteenth century, and must therefore have rung out to celebrate the great victory over the Spanish Armada in 1588.

It is interesting to note that the Whitechapel Foundry, which has been working continuously since 1570, has been entrusted with the restoration work and the casting of the new bells. The connection of the old firm with the Abbey, after nearly 350 years, is thus being continued.

MAY TRAIN WOMEN

Plan to Develop Them Same as Men in War Camps.

Government Cantonments to Be Used and the Work Extended to Every Part of Country.

Women will be trained in government cantonments if plans of the United States training corps for women are carried out. The corps, organized for women war workers in Washington, under the direction of Miss Susanna Cocroft of Chicago, has been turned into a permanent organization for building up women physically and fitting them for the places they are taking in business, industry and in the work of the nation generally.

Admiral Cary T. Grayson will act as medical director of the corps. On the board of directors with Miss Cocroft are Surgeon General Rupert Blue, Gen. Enoch Crowder, Brig. Gen. J. F. Kerr, Mrs. Robert Lansing, wife of the secretary of state; Miss Mabel T. Boardman of the American Red Cross, Mrs. Franklin K. Lane, wife of the secretary of interior; Miss Gertrude Lane, well known magazine editor, and Julius Kahn, chairman of the military affairs committee of the house of representatives.

Permission has been asked of the war department for the use of a part of the cantonments when they are released from military service for use as training camps where women can be trained as teachers of setting-up exercises and semi-military drills. These teachers will be equipped to give training in industrial plants and public schools. The corps has also asked for the release of a part of the cantonments for recreation camps, where physicians can send women and children who do not need medicine so much as they need conditioning.

The original training corps in Washington numbered more than 3,500 war working women. It was organized on the White House lot and the war department detailed 75 army officers to assist Miss Cocroft.

The work will be extended to every part of the country, modeled after the system which has developed the men in the war training camps, except that it will be made specially suited for the training of women.

In announcing the purpose of the corps, Miss Cocroft, its organizer and director, said: "We wish to utilize the knowledge of what the camps have done for men, mentally and physically, and to apply this same knowledge to the conditioning of women while the public mind is quickened to this utility, so that all men and women, the young, the middle aged, the old, may be given an opportunity to benefit by outdoor life regularly supervised and trained under semi-military discipline and under the supervision of competent medical and nursing assistance."

GRACEFUL FOR THE BALLROOM

Protect Lace.

Many of the black gowns are of lace—and sometimes black chantilly is mounted over white satin. This is very distinguished when the lace is new, but chantilly which is an heirloom should never be put over white or any light tint. The old, if rare lace tears easily, and any mending of the fabric, however delicately done, shows up unpleasantly against the light lining. It is always best to mount valuable old laces over a "drop" of tulle or to veil the lace frock with tulle if this can be done without spoiling the design and the lines.

A record is a fragile thing. You can't lower one without breaking it

If Princess Patricia

Is Mother of Children

They Will be Born Royal

ALTHOUGH Lady Patricia Ramsay, who entered Westminster Abbey on her wedding day as a Princess of the Blood and emerged therefrom as a commoner, has surrendered her place in the line of succession to the British crown, along with all her royal immunities and prerogatives, yet the rights of any children to whom she may give birth will in no wise be affected by her renunciation. For the most eminent jurists of the United Kingdom and of continental nations of Europe are united in their contention that parents have no power to sacrifice rights of their children, minors or as yet unborn.

It is on the cards, therefore, that a descendant of Lady Patricia Ramsay, though she and her husband are now commoners, may yet become ruler of the British Empire.

Next in line of succession to the five children of George V. comes his sister, the widowed Princess Royal whose two children are the young Duchess of Fife and the still unmarried Princess Maud. The Duchess of Fife is married to the Duke of Connaught's only son, Prince Arthur, and they have a little boy and girl, both commoners in the eyes of the law although the boy bears the courtesy title of Lord Macduff, next in the line of succession to the crown. Then there is the Duchess of Fife's younger sister Maud; after her comes King George's unmarried sister, Princess Victoria; then his youngest sister Queen Maud of Norway, and her little boy, Crown Prince Olaf; after them the four daughters of King Edward's sailor brother, the late Duke Alfred, sovereign of Saxe Coburg-Gotha, and their children. Next are the Duke of Connaught and his only son, Prince Arthur, already dealt with, as the husband of the Duchess of Fife. Afterward come Prince Arthur's eldest sister, the Crown Princess of Sweden and her children and finally the offspring yet unborn of the newly married Lady Patricia Ramsay.

If Lady Patricia Ramsay's marriage to Lord Dalhousie's sailor brother, Capt. the Hon. Alexander Ramsay of the royal navy, has been so readily sanctioned by King George and has been welcomed by the people of Great Britain it is because the union is of a nature to emphasize the emancipation of the reigning house of England from that foreign doctrine, according to the terms of which royalty can only mate with royalty, and scions of sovereign dynasties are debarred from marrying any but members of other dynasties. This had the effect of restricting English princes and princesses in the line of succession to the British crown to the choice of consorts abroad among the non-Catholic reigning houses or else to first or second cousins among English royalties, to which there were manifest objections. There will, of course, be no more British royal marriages with Germans.

Odd Occupations.

"Appendix to British Army Order No. 6," dealing with "Record of Occupation in Civil Life," which supplies "Classification of Industries by Groups," proves the compiler to be possessed of an unlimited supply of dry humor.

The monumental work touches upon every man's calling, from that of an almond blancher to a zincing man, with but one exception. Strange and weird to the uninitiated are many of these callings. Here are some of them:

Alcher, airwaymen, annealer, anode man, backshopper, batch mixer, batcher, bate shaver, beachman, beamer, beater out, beater up, beatster, becker, beetler, jiggerer, justice man, lapper, kibbler, kirver, lag pegger, packwaller, puncher, pusher, sample bruiser, slasher, sponger, stumbler, twitcher, whipper, wuzzer.

The compilation occupies 135 pages of closely-spaced type, and the only profession overlooked by the compiler is that of public hangman.

Industrial Group No. 41 is boundless in its variety, and takes unto itself among numerous other callings the following:

Racehorse trainer, church officer, comedian, verger, conjurer, Y.M.C.A. worker, huntsman, musician, sandwichman, athlete, pensioner, chucker-out, racing correspondent, scene shifter, organist, organ blower, organ grinder, zoological gardens keeper and gentleman.

The Golden Cow.
